six days before the judgment in this particular case and was no doubt not known to the learned Subordinate Judge. But I do not think that it contained anything new, and the intermediate cases between those two termini, although they may be cited to justify the statement of the law as contained in Mr. Justice Mookerji's judgment, do not add anything to it or take anything from it. The judgment of Mr. Justice Mookerji is an amplification of, and an admirable commentary upon, the judgment of the Privy Council in 8 Moore Indian Appeals [Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narterramaph (1)]. It shows how accurate the language used in the judgment of the Privy Council was and it may be cited as a correct statement of the old law with a full exposition calculated to remove ambiguity, and I, therefore, cite from it the following passage as a correct statement of the law on the first question in this appeal: "The true rule thus appears to be that there is a distinction between legal necessity for worldly purposes on the one hand, and the promotion of the spiritual welfare of the deceased on the other hand, and that, within proper limits, the widow may alienate her husband's property, for the performance of religious acts which are supposed to conduce to his spiritual benefit." He cites also a passage from the judgment of Lord Gifford in Cossinaut Bysack v. Cummo-money Dossee (10), showing further the settled and ancient character of this well-known rule of Hindu Law: "It is absolutely impossible to define the extent and limit of the power of the widow to dispose of her husband's property for religious purposes, because it must depend upon the circumstances of the disposition." Mr. Justice Mookerji goes on to point out that a question of fact has always to be determined, namely, whether the alienation covers a reasonable portion of the property of the husband, with reference to the circumstances of the particular disposition, and he cites other authorities which may be found on page 555 of his (Mr. Justice Mookerji's) judgment, one goes back to the year 1826, indicating that 3/16 of the entire estate had been held not

(10) 2 Morley's Digest 193; 3 Ind. Dec. (p. s.) 907.

KUNJ BEHARI LAL v. LALTU SINGH.

excessive, and in another case a gift of property between $\frac{1}{4}$ and $\frac{1}{3}$ of the whole had been upheld. Many of the authorities cited to the learned Subordinate Judge and referred to in his judgment seem to have been relied on rather for the purpose of confusing him than for any legal purpose which I can discover. He has unfortunately in his judgment confused the question of legal necessity with the question of the validity of a gift made for religious purposes. It may be that the defendants contributed to this confusion by pleading "legal necessity" in paragraph 8 of their defence. To my mind no authority bearing upon the question of legal necessity ever had any relevance to this suit and should never have been cited in the Court below. At one time the learned Subordinate Judge in his judgment said that the point raised was fully concluded by authority. At another time he found as a question of fact that the pilgrimage of the lady was absolutely unnecessary, and finally he says: "To sum up the lady had no necessity to transfer the property as she had ample means to defray the expenses for pilgrimage to holy places and for any offerings she may have desired to make." As my brother has pointed out, this has nothing to do with the deed of gift in suit and possibly explains the error into which the learned Subordinate Judge seems to have fallen. As I have said above, the point is well-settled and is unarguable.

There may be on occasions a serious question upon the point whether the gift could be described as religious or charitable at all. This question was not raised in this case; but it has been determined and it is obviously a most important question. The only question about which the reversioner need trouble himself is whether the quantum in proportion to the whole estate is excessive. I am satisfied that this suit was never launched on that basis at all and that the idea never occurred to the plaintiff. The defendant, who seems to have been fully advised as to his legal position, did in paragraph 8 of the written statement open the door to the contention. There is a suggestion that the plaintiff professed to attack the transaction on that ground in issue No. 7 as framed. I do not think that at the trial it was ever relied on at all. I think the quantum was treated as immaterial. There is a case decided by Mr. Justice Karamat Husain in this Court in which he lays down (the case is not on all fours with this case) that it is unnecessary to find out the income and value of the property. I think the learned Subordinate Judge in this case laid that down at the instance of the plaintiff, the plaintiff knowing that he had no materials to establish the fact. At any rate the onus is upon the person having special knowledge of the alienated property. I do not propose to travel over the ground my learned brother has travelled. I think it is sufficient to say that in this case no suggestion of any kind is made even now at the 11th hour that the evidence shows anything approaching $\frac{3}{16}$, and no authority of any kind has been quoted to us which discredits in any way the authority of 1826 in which it was held that $\frac{3}{16}$ might be disposed of.

There is one further question, the 3rd question argued in support of this decree before us by Dr. Sapru, whether the lady understood and intended to carry out the terms of the deed. It is really covered by the uncontradicted evidence to which I referred at the commencement of this judgment, and it is finally set at rest by the deposition which has been put in evidence sworn to by the lady in another suit in 1893. It is quite true that there is no evidence that this document was explained to her at the time and that she was made to understand it. It is difficult to see how there could be. In my experience of cases of this kind where a Pardanashin lady is concerned, certainly where the transaction is dubious, there is generally direct evidence of a number of people who shouted out the contents of the document to her. In this case the circumstances speak for themselves. The deed itself has a ring of genuineness about it. The simplest woman in the world would have no difficulty in understanding it as dealing with her own property if it was read to her at all, and 17 years afterwards, when advanced in years and suffering according to her own account from defective memory and embarrassment in appearing behind the Pardah before a large number of people, she was able to give a fair and honest account of the transaction.

CHINNASWAMI REDDI v. KRISHNASWAMI REDDI.

On that occasion she showed intelligence of a high order. She was asked an almost impossible question for anybody to answer, certainly for an owner of a large estate of this kind to answer, with reference to the profits of a village she had had nothing to do with for 17 years. "What is the profit of the village you gave?" Being behind the Pardah she wanted to know whether it was her own or her opponent's Pleader who was asking this question. I do not suppose that she was prepared to tell an untruth if it was her opponent's Pleader. She could have known nothing about the subject at all. What was passing in her mind was that it was an impertinent question. Her conduct on that occasion seems to me to be that of an intelligent and capable woman such as is described by the uncontradicted evidence. I am satisfied that this was as genuine a gift for religious purposes as any gift of the kind that was ever made. I agree in the order proposed by my brother.

By THE COURT.—The appeal is allowed, the decree and order of the Court below are set aside and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1470 OF 1916.

July 31, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Phillips and

Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri.

CHINNASWAMI REDDI—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

KRISHNASWAMI REDDI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 64—Guardian and ward—Sale of minor's property by guardian—Consideration, application of, in purchase of other properties for minor—Sale declared not binding on minor—Right of vendee to properties purchased—'Benefit', return of, scope of doctrine of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 44—Claim by ward barred under Art. 44—Plea of invalidity of sale, whether available in suit for possession by vendee—Decree, form of.

Where a sale of a minor's properties by his guardian is declared to be not binding on the minor, the vendee is not entitled to claim other properties which were purchased for the minor with the sale consideration, as a 'benefit' which the minor is bound to restore under section 64 of the Contract Act when he elects to avoid the sale, if the latter purchase was not contemplated at the time of the original sale. [p. 857, col. 2; p. 858, col. 2.]

Rabia Bi v. Angappan, 28 Ind. Cas. 714; 2 L. W. 369, Sinaya Pillai v. Munisami Ayyan, 22 M. 289; 9 M. L. J. 64; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 205, T-ejpal v. Ganga, 25 A. 59; A. W. N. (1902) 192 and Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co. Ltd. v. Rebati Kumar Ray, 8 C. L. J. 260, distinguished.

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—Ordinarily, the benefit which a party receives when he sells the property is the price which the vendee pays. Any profits which the vendor might make with the moneys would be too remote in estimating what he has to return, in case he is entitled to avoid the sale and elects to do so. Where, however, for the protection of a purchaser contracting with a guardian or a qualified owner, a particular dealing with the money was in the direct contemplation of the parties, such as the purchase of other lands with the consideration, and the money is so applied, the benefit which the other party obtains will be the land or other property acquired with the consideration. There must be something more than a mere application of the consideration in a particular way in order to entitle the purchaser to claim restoration of the properties acquired with the consideration paid by him. [p. 858, col. 1.]

In a suit by the vendee for possession brought after the expiry of 3 years after attainment of majority by the ward, the latter is entitled to plead the invalidity of the sale though he could not actually sue to set it aside. [p. 859, col. 1.]

On the expiry of the period specified in Article 44 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act the purchaser from the guardian is not of right entitled to the properties in the possession of the ward. [p. 859, col. 1.]

The proper decree to pass in such a case is to order possession to be given to the vendee if the consideration is not returned within a specified time. [p. 859, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Chingleput, in Appeal Suit No. 304 of 1914, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Poonamalle, in Original Suit No. 67 of 1912.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Aiyangar, Advocate-General (with him Mr. A. C. Sampathu Aiyangar), for the Appellant.—The sale was effected to plaintiff with the object of purchasing other lands for the minors. In fact, the consideration was so applied. The vendor cannot elect to avoid a voidable transaction, and, at the same time, retain the benefit he has acquired by the sale. Under section 64 he should restore such benefit to the vendee before electing to avoid the sale. There is a distinct recital as to the object of the sale in the sale-deed, that other lands were to be purchased for the minors with the sale price. The lower Appellate Court was in error in thinking that it was not sufficient to put the vendor on equity. The vendee is entitled to pursue the course of the sale consideration. Rabia Bi v. Angappan (1), Sinaya Pillai v. Munisami Ayyan (2), Tejpal v. Ganga (3), Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co. Ltd. v. Rebati Kumar Ray (4).

CHINNASWAMI REDDI V. KRISHNASWAMI REDDI.

The 1st defendant's suit for cancellation of the deed of sale and for possession of other than the suit properties covered by the sale, was dismissed as barred. The right of 1st defendant has become extinguished and he cannot be heard to plead the invalidity of the sale in this suit of the plaintiff. The plaintiff is, therefore, entitled to possession of the suit properties.

Mr. G. S. Ramchandra Aiyar, for the Respondents.—The actual finding by the lower Courts is that, at date of sale to plaintiff, it was not in the contemplation of the parties to purchase other lands for the minors with the sale price. As a matter of fact plaintiff executed a promissory note for the consideration on which he could be sued summarily. The finding, moreover, is that it was at his pressure and owing to his refusal to pay the sale amount that other lands were purchased. The 'benefit' contemplated by section 64 of the Contract Act does not refer to a remote contingency. The benefit received by the vendor and which he is bound to restore should be part of the same transaction. The cases cited by the Advocate-General do not apply.

The fact that 1st defendant's suit to avoid the sale was barred under Article 44 of the Limitation Act is no impediment to his urging that plea in defence in plaintiff's suit. The 1st defendant's right to continue in possession of the properties not delivered to the plaintiff, the vendee, remains unaffected. Article 44 operates only as a bar to the ward actively agitating his rights of avoidance of a voidable transaction, but it does not entitle the vendee per se to recover properties in the former's possession.

JUDGMENT.

PHILLIPS, J.—Apart from the fact that the plaintiff has by his action precluded the Court from ordering an exchange between the parties of the lands sold to plaintiff by the mother of defendants Nos. 1 and 2, and the lands purchased by her in Sriperumbudur, I think that it follows from the finding that the purchase of the lands in Sriperumbudur was not contemplated at the time of the sale to plaintiff, that those lands do not constitute the benefit received by defendants Nos. 1 and 2 from plaintiff within the meaning of section 64 of the Contract Act. I, therefore, agree in the order proposed.

KUMARASWAMI SASTRI, J.—The plaintiff is the appellant. He sued for possession of the house site specified in the plaint. The case for the plaintiff is that the mother of the 1st and 2nd defendants acting as their guardian sold to him certain properties consisting inter alia of the site specified in the plaint for the purpose of purchasing other properties, that the defendants have not put plaintiff in possession of the property claimed by demolishing the building on the site as agreed upon. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 contested the suit on the ground that the sale deed executed by their mother is invalid and inoperative and would not bind them and that plaintiff has no right to the relief claimed. The defence of the 3rd and 4th defendants, who claimed an interest in the buildings on the site, is not material for the purpose of this appeal.

The District Munsif held that the sale by their mother as their guardian was not binding on the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and dismissed the suit on this ground. He was of opinion that the purchase of the lands subsequently purchased was not settled at the time of the sale by defendants' mother and that it is probable that the plaintiff prevailed upon the defendants' maternal grandfather to enter into the transaction.

On appeal, the District Judge held that the sale was not binding on the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as it was not neces-

(1) 28 Ind. Cas. 714; 2 L. W. 369.

(2) 22 M. 289; 9 M. L. J. 64; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 205.

(3) 25 A. 59; A. W. N. (1902) 192.

(4) 3 C. L. J. 260.

CHINNASWAMI REDDI v. KRISHNASWAMI REDDI.

sary or beneficial and dismissed the appeal.

The contention for the appellant is that it was not open to the 1st and 2nd defendant to keep the lands purchased with the sale-proceeds of the family lands and to repudiate the sale by their mother made with the object of purchasing other lands and that under section 64 of the Contract Act, a person who seeks to avoid a voidable transaction should restore any benefit he has received as a condition precedent to such avoidance. It is also argued that the District Judge was wrong in thinking that the recital in the sale-deed by defendants' mother to the effect that lands in Sriperumbudur were to be purchased was insufficient as the particular lands actually purchased were not specified.

There can be little doubt that, under section 64 of the Contract Act, a party seeking to avoid a voidable transaction is bound to restore any benefit he has received from the other party and the question is whether in the present case, lands actually purchased in Sriperumbudur can be said to be the benefit which the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 received in respect of the sale by their mother as their guardian.

Ordinarily, the benefit which a party receives when he sells the property is the price which the vendee pays. Any profits which the vendor might make with the moneys would be too remote in estimating what he has to return in case he is entitled to avoid the sale and elects to do so. Where, however, for the protection of a purchaser contracting with a guardian or a qualified owner, a particular dealing with the money was in the direct contemplation of the parties, such as the purchase of other lands with the consideration, and the money is so applied, the benefit which the other party obtains will be the land or other property acquired with the consideration. There must, in my opinion, be something more than a mere application of the consideration in a particular way in order to entitle the purchaser to claim restoration of the properties acquired with the consideration paid by him. Section 35 of the Transfer of Property Act makes this clear. It requires that the benefit received should be part of the same transaction and should be direct. The authorities cited by the learned Advocate-General do not support the view that the purchaser is entitled to follow up properties purchased with the consideration irrespective of whether there was any arrangement or not.

In Rabia Bi v. Angappan (1) it was held that the guardian of a Muhammadan minor is not entitled to mortgage her properties for the purpose of acquiring other properties but that if the minor disclaims liability to pay the mortgage monies, she must give up her rights in the property so purchased. She was directed to execute a conveyance of the property to the mortgagee. It was assumed that the benefit was the purchase of other lands and there was no discussion of the question. In Sinaya Pillai v. Munisami Ayyan (2), Terpal v. Ganga (3) and Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co. Ltd. v. Rebati Kumar Ray (4) it was held that any benefit received should be restored. In these cases it was the consideration paid that was to be refunded. There can be little doubt that if the purchase of the lands at Sriperumbudur was the benefit contemplated by the parties and arose in connection with the same transaction as the sale of ancestral properties by the minor's mother, the plaintiff would be entitled to a conveyance of the properties so purchased. Otherwise all that he would be entitled to is repayment of the consideration he paid.

The difficulty in the present case is that both the lower Courts do not believe the evidence of the plaintiff and find that the purchase of the lands which were actually purchased was not in the contemplation of the parties at the time of the sale to plaintiff. The District Judge disbelieves the evidence of the plaintiff and his witnesses that there was an understanding at the time of the sale that lands in Sriperumbudur should be purchased with the consideration and believes the evidence of Sami Reddi, the 1st defence witness, that it was only subsequent to the sale that plaintiff refused to pay the consideration unless lands were purchased and that it was at his pressure and refusal to pay that lands were purchased. The plaintiff executed an unconditional demand promissory note for the consideration and could have been sued on the note and the fact that there is a recital in the sale-deed to plaintiff that it was intended to purchase lands would not entitle plaintiff to withhold payment of the note if the vendor changed her mind, and decided to invest the monies in any other way. The lands were purchased at Sriperumbudur on the 4th March 1908 while the sale to plaintiff was on the 22nd August 1907. I do not think we can say that the findings of the lower Courts were based on no evidence, and on those findings it cannot be said that the purchase of the lands under Exhibit C was part of the same transaction as the sale of lands under Exhibit B. The plaintiff would, therefore, be entitled only to the return of the consideration paid by him.

AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. AMMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAMAYYA.

It has been argued that, as the suit by the 1st defendant to set aside the sale-deed Exhibit B and to recover possession of properties other than the plaintiff properties covered by it was dismissed as barred, the plaintiff is entitled to possession of the suit properties as the right to avoid the contract is at an end owing to the impossibility of placing the parties in status quo ante. I do not think there is anything to prevent the plaintiff from giving back the properties in his possession though the suit of the 1st defendant was dismissed as barred. He is the plaintiff and the defendants are, in a suit by him for possession, entitled to plead the invalidity of the sale by their guardian. The fact that they cannot sue to recover an item of property wrongfully alienated by their guardian cannot affect their right to remain in possession of properties not delivered to the possession of the purchaser. There is no authority for the proposition that on the expiry of the period specified in Article 44 of the Limitation Act, the purchaser from the guardian is of right entitled to possession of properties in the possession of the ward.

No doubt the right to avoid a contract depends on the power of the Court to put the parties in the same position as they would have been if the transaction had not been entered into, but the plaintiff cannot be heard to say that he will not do something which is within his competence and claim the enforcement of a voidable transaction on the ground that the parties cannot be put in status quo ante because of his unwillingness to do equity.

The plaintiff is in possession of other properties conveyed to him; he values the site at Rs. 250 and the value is not disputed in the written statement or in the evidence. I am of opinion that the plaintiff is entitled to a return of Rs. 250 in case the defendants elect to keep the house site claimed. I would set aside the decrees of the lower Courts and direct that, on payment by the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 of Rs. 250 in three months, the plaintiff's suit be dismissed, each party bearing his own costs, and that in default a decree be passed for possession as prayed with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

M. C. P.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 354, 355 AND 368 OF 1916.

February 18, 1918.

Present :—Justice Sir William Ayling, Kt, and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

IN APPEAL NO. 354 OF 1916

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY, BY ITS ATTORNEY
R.V. W. L. FERGUSON—DEFENDANT NO. 1
—APPELLANT

versus

AMALANADHUNI PATTABHI-RAMAYYA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

IN APPEAL NO. 355 OF 1916

JALADI AYYAPPASETTI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 16 AND 17—APPELLANTS

versus

AMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRA-MAYYA AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT NO. 15—RESPONDENTS.

— IN APPEAL NO. 368 OF 1916

GURRAM SESHIAH AND ANOTHER—
LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF DEFENDANTS
NO. 11 AND 15—APPELLANTS

versus

AMALANADHUNI PATTABHI-RAMAYYA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANTS NOS. 30 AND 31—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 61—Purchase in good faith from limited owner—Improve- ment effected by purchaser—Purchaser, position of—Recitals in deed, evidentiary value of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XX, r. 1, O. XXII, r. 6—Death of party before conclusion of arguments—Judgment, delivery of, after death, effect of.

AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. ANMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAMAYYA.

The principle of section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act applies to a purchase from a Hindu widow, where the purchaser believing in good faith that he has acquired an absolute title to the property, effects improvements on it, but it is afterwards held that there was no necessity for the sale. [p. 861, col. 1.]

In such a case the person seeking to set aside the sale is entitled to the market value of the property at the time of suit, excluding the value of the improvements effected by the purchaser. [p. 861, col. 1.]

The recitals in a deed of sale as to the object of the sale or the intended appropriation of the consideration therefor, are evidence, especially where the document is an old one, of the representation made to the purchaser. [p. 860, col. 2.]

Where a party to a suit died after arguments were partly heard and judgment was pronounced on a subsequent day when the arguments were closed without the legal representative of the deceased being brought on the record:

Held, that the judgment was a nullity and was not binding on the deceased's representative. [p. 864, col. 2.]

Order XX, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, contemplates that all arguments should be heard before the case can be regarded as ripe for judgment. [p. 864, col. 2.]

Appeals against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Guntur, in Original Suit No. 99 of 1914.

Appeal No. 355 coming on for hearing on the 9th August 1917 and Appeal No. 354 coming on for hearing on the 9th and 10th of August 1917, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

APPEAL NO. 354 OF 1916.

This appeal relates to item No. 1. It was purchased by Dr. Clough in December 1884 and was subsequently sold by him to the present appellants. The plaintiff as reversioner to the estate of Kesavulu Naidu sues to recover possession of this and other properties, on the ground that the alienations by Kesavulu's widow Lakshmi Devi are not binding on him. It is in evidence that on the death of Kesavulu, his mother created disturbances and that suits were brought to establish Lakshmi Devi's right. The litigation ultimately ended in favour of the widow. This was between 1874 and 1878. During this period and subsequently, the widow was alienating her husband's properties piecemeal. In 1884, she executed two documents (Exhibits XIX and XX), the one being an agreement to sell and the other the actual conveyance. The plaintiff contends that this conveyance Exhibit XX is not binding on him. The Subordinate Judge has held that necessity was not proved and has directed the appellant to remove the materials within a fixed time.

We are unable to uphold the decree. There can be no question on the evidence that the purchaser paid full and adequate consideration for the sale. We see no reason to disbelieve the evidence of defendant's 1st witness. The deed of sale refers to two previous documents as having been discharged, Exhibits XVI and XVIII. In Exhibit XVI it is recited that Rs. 300 was borrowed to execute repairs to the bungalow standing on item No. 1. This recital is evidenced, after the lapse of nearly 30 years from the date of the sale, of the representation that was made to the purchaser. See Nanda Lal v. Jagat Kishore Acharjya (1). That recital is corroborated by the evidence of defendant's 1st witness. We see no reason for holding that the sum of Rs. 300 was not paid for effecting the repairs upon the bungalow which was let out for rent to the Municipality. To this extent we hold that necessity has been proved. The Subordinate Judge was inclined to take this view, but he did not act upon his inclination, because the widow derived benefit by the improvement. We are unable to follow him in this. As regards the rest of the consideration, we have reluctantly come to the conclusion that its binding character has not been made out. Exhibit XVIII, which refers back to Exhibit P, deals only with the personal debts of the widow. There is no evidence to connect these debts with liabilities binding on the estate. It is true that the purchaser seems to have taken legal advice before purchasing. The extent of the advice given and the amount of the information disclosed to the legal adviser have not been spoken to by any one. We are unable to say, therefore, that the necessity for the remainder of the purchase-money has been made out.

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 420; 44 C. 186; 20 M. L. T. 335; 31 M. L. J. 563; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 336; 4 L. W. 458; 18 Bom. L. R. 868; 14 A. L. J. 1103; 24 C. L. J. 487; 1 P. L. W. 1; 21 C. W. N. 225; 10 Bur. L. T. 177; 43 I. A. 249 (P. C.).

AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. AMMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAMAYYA.

APPEAL No. 355 of 1916.

The only question now is how should the equities between the parties be adjusted. We are not satisfied that section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act is not applicable to the present case. Raj Kishore Das v. Jaint Singh (2) gives no reason for holding that transferees from limited owners are not within the purview of the section. There is nothing in the language of it to lead to such a conclusion. We are, therefore, inclined to hold that section 51 is applicable. Even if the section is not applicable in terms, we think the principle of it is applicable to the case. We feel no hesitation in holding that the purchaser acted honestly in believing that he secured an absolute right by the transfer from the widow. He took legal advice and secured some documents showing that there were previous debts. We accept the reasoning in Mathunsa Rowthan v. Apsa Bin (3) and hold that where the purchaser acts honestly and to the best of his information, he is protected by section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act. It is found that the purchaser spent nearly Rs. 10,000 in putting up a bungalow on the premises. Under these circumstances the proper decree to be passed will be to direct the appellant to pay the reversioner the difference between the present market value of the land without taking into account the building thereon and the sum of Rs. 300 which we hold is binding on the estate. We feel no doubt that the plaintiff ought to have intervened to prevent the costly building being put up on the premises. He may not be bound to sue for declaration, but his failure to sue is an element to be taken into account in considering whether the present holder should not be allowed to retain the property. We think that under the circumstances of the case, it would be highly inequitable to turn the appellant out of the property.

The Subordinate Judge must be asked to report to this Court within six weeks from this date the present market value of item No. 1, eliminating from his consideration the value of the building existing on it. Ten days will be allowed for filing objections.

(2) 23 Ind. Cas. 334; 35 A. 397; 12 A. L. J. 717.

(3) 12 Ind. Cas. 444; 36 M. 194; 21 M. L. J. 969; 10 M. L. T. 373; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 425.

We agree, with the Subordinate Judge that it is not shown that the sale of item No. 4 by Lakshmi Devi under Exhibit B to Bapayya was for necessity or for the benefit of the estate. We must, therefore, uphold his decree in so far as it directs defendants Nos. 15, 16 and 17 to deliver possession of that property. It is clear that these defendants added to the original extent by purchasing from others. The Subordinate Judge has held that as the property sold under Exhibit B could not be conveniently enjoyed by the plaintiff without the added property, the plaintiff should be given possession of the whole plot and that the appellants should be paid Rs. 45 as compensation. We think the Subordinate Judge is wrong in this. Plaintiff claimed and is only entitled to the properties of Kesavulu. No question of equitable adjustment by asking defendants to give up their property can arise in this suit. We must modify the decree by deleting the portion relating to compensation and by directing that plaintiff be put in possession only of the properties purchased under Exhibit B. Each party will bear his own costs in this Court.

In compliance with the order contained in the above judgment in Appeal No. 354, the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Guntur submitted the following FINDING.—I have been directed by the High Court to report the present market value of item No. 1, eliminating from consideration the value of the bungalow existing on it. The total extent of the site is acres 5 26 cents. The plaintiff alleged in the plaint that at the date of the sale to Dr. Clough in 1884, the suit site with the building which then stood on it was worth Rs. 3,000. The value of the building having been estimated in the plaint at Rs. 1,600, the site, according to plaintiff, was worth Rs. 1,400 at the date of the sale. It was pleaded by the 1st defendant in his written statement that the site was worth at that date, including the building on it, only the price paid for it, namely, Rs. 1,600. The building having been valued in the written statement at Rs. 600, the value of the site, according to the defendant, was Rs. 1,000 at the date of sale. My predecessor held that the building was worth only Rs. 600 as alleged by the defendant. It follows from that finding, that the site without the building was worth at the date of the sale Rs. 1,400 according to the plaintiff and Rs. 1,000 according to the defendant. Bearing that in mind, we have to see what its present market value is.

AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. AMMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAMAYYA.

2. The plaintiff has now examined 9 witnesses, and the 1st defendant, besides recalling and examining Mr. Baker (D. W. No. 9), has examined three witnesses. While the plaintiff's witnesses value the suit site at one rupee or one and a quarter rupee per square yard, Mr. Baker, who represents the Mission, and his 2nd witness Punnayya depose that the suit site is worth only about Rs. 600 per gorru and that the whole site does not, therefore, exceed in value Rs. 1,000. The plaintiff's witnesses state that, if the suit site is parcelled out and sold for building purposes, it would fetch about Rs. 25,000 at Rs. 1 to Rs. 1-1-0 per square yard. Mr. Baker and his 2nd witness depose that the suit site, being situated at the northernmost extremity of Ongole Town, is not likely to be taken up for building purposes at all. Mr. Punnayya, the witness examined by the Mission, was for a long time Municipal Councillor and for nearly 4 years Chairman of the Ongole Municipality. He corroborates Mr. Baker's statement that the Town of Ongole has extended east, west and south but has shown no tendency to extend and will not extend northwards for several reasons and that ordinary dwelling-houses will never be constructed on the suit site, as those reasons are specially applicable to it. They are:—(1) its vicinity to cemeteries and Panchama quarters, (2) its vicinity to exposed beef and meat stalls, (3) its situation in the midst of cultivated lands, (4) its isolation and consequent liability to attack from thieves and (5) its proximity to the tank into which all the village water is drained. It is admitted on behalf of the plaintiff that the suit site is within a very short distance of the Municipal market which was constructed about 25 years ago, and that the northern and eastern portions of the market measuring about acre 1 and odd have been lying absolutely vacant. It is proved by Mr. Punnayya that the Municipal market, which was constructed for the sale of both vegetables and meat, ceased to be a vegetable market on account of its distance from the dwelling-houses and its vicinity to exposed beef stalls. The few houses west of the Municipal market are mostly occupied by Mahomedans. The two Telaga residents in that locality occupy very humble positions in life being school masters. It is not denied that there is a large stretch of nearly 80 acres of land east of the Donka which forms the eastern boundary of item No. 1. There has been admittedly no attempt to build houses in all that area. A few cattle-sheds and houses have no doubt been built on Survey Nos. 80 to 86 marked in the Commissioner's plan Exhibit EE, but it is elicited from P. W. No. 3 that those houses and cattle-sheds are owned by persons whose cultivable lands lie immediately behind them.

3. In support of his contention that the suit site is worth one rupee per square yard, the plaintiff's Vakil relies upon 4 sale-deeds which relate to sites not far off from the suit site. Exhibit HH is a sale-deed taken by P. W. No. 3 of 6 gadis or 48 square yards of land for Rs. 90 for constructing a cattle-shed. P. W. No. 3 admits that the sale-deed was executed in his favour recently and that the price fixed thereunder was not intended to be the real price. It is elicited from him that the adjacent site belonging to his vendor has been proposed to be acquired by the Municipality for public purposes and that the price of the land covered by his sale-deed, Exhibit HH, was more or less fixed with a view to claim from the Municipality a high price for the land proposed to be acquired. Exhibits GG and GG-1 relate to Survey No. 214. Exhibit GG is a sale deed executed in 1909: It shows that a portion of Survey No. 214 measuring 30 gadis or 240 square yards fetched a price of Rs. 10). Exhibit GG 1, dated 5th January 1917, relates to a site immediately west of the site covered by Exhibit GG. It shows that $6\frac{3}{4}$ gadis equal to 50 square yards were purchased under it for Rs. 44. It is elicited from P. W. No. 2 who proves those sale-deeds that Survey No. 214 is in the vicinity of Brahmin quarters. Survey No. 214 is situated at a fairly long distance from the suit site and, in view of the admitted fact that it lies within the vicinity of Brahmin quarters, the price paid under Exhibits GG and GG-1 cannot be accepted as a standard for fixing the value of the suit site. The next sale-deed on the basis of which the plaintiff's Vakil urges that the suit site should be valued at Re. 1 per square yard is Exhibit JJ, dated 20th June 1917. Under it, P. W. No. 4 purchased 26 gadis of site for Rs. 200 in the Mahomedan quarters west of the Municipal market. The purchaser is admittedly a contractor from the Municipality of the slaughter house situated in the vicinity of the site comprised in his sale-deed. From the standpoint of his business, it is an advantage to him to own a site in the vicinity of that slaughter house. The price paid by him cannot, therefore, be accepted as a standard for determining the value of the suit site. P. W. No. 5, who recently purchased a site in that locality, has not chosen to produce his sale-deed which would throw light on the value of a site in that locality. He says that he paid Rs. 350 for that site but conveniently states that he does not know the extent comprised in his sale-deed.

AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. AMMALANDAHENI PATTABHIRAMAYYA.

4. It is urged on behalf of the Mission that the suit site is not worth more than Rs. 1,000 and in support of that contention reliance is placed on Exhibits XXIX and XXX filed by the 3rd and 4th witnesses examined on remand. Exhibit XXIX is a sale-deed, dated the 21st January 1917, relating to 17 cents of land immediately north of the suit site. That extent was purchased under that sale-deed, for Rs. 50 as proved by D. W. No. 3. Exhibit XXX is a sale-deed, dated 25th June 1917, relating to one acre and 29 cents of land immediately west of the suit bungalow. That extent was purchased under that deed for Rs. 200. If the value of the suit site is to be fixed with reference to the price paid under Exhibits XXIX and XXX, the present market value of the suit site would, no doubt, not exceed Rs. 1,000. It is, however, elicited from Mr. Punnayya, the Ex-Chairman of the Municipal Council, that the sites north and west of the suit site are certainly inferior in value to the suit site for building purposes. It is admitted that both these sites are situated at a lower level than the suit site, vide also the Commissioner's plan and report, Exhibits EE and EE-1. In this connection, the admission of the Mission that the suit site was worth Rs. 1,000 even in 1884 when it was purchased by Dr. Clough has to be borne in mind. It is a matter of common knowledge that the prices of lands have risen considerably within recent years.

5. The evidence recorded at the original trial shows that the building which stood on the suit site at the date of the sale to Dr. Clough fetched a monthly rent of Rs. 15. It is admitted by Mr. Baker that the Municipal Hospital was located in that building. In fixing the present value of the suit site, the existence of that building and the rent which was realised from it cannot be ignored. My predecessor was of opinion that the income from the fruit bearing trees which stood on the suit site at the date of sale was sufficient to cover the expenses of the repairs to that building. On a full consideration of the evidence adduced by both the parties, I am clearly of opinion that the claim made by the plaintiff at Re. 1 per square yard is grossly exaggerated and that the Mission's estimate of the present market value of the suit site at Rs. 1,000 is unduly low. I accepted the evidence of Mr. Baker and Mr. Punnayya that the extension of the town northwards is, for the reasons mentioned by them, highly problematical and that the construction of any houses on the suit site which is situated at the northernmost extremity of the town is utterly unlikely, but at the same time I am not prepared to accept their statement that the suit site is not worth more than Rs. 600 per gorru. Taking into consideration the fact that the suit site, with the building which stood on it at the date of the sale, yielded an annual income of not less than Rs. 180 and taking also into account the admissions of the plaintiff and the 1st defendant that, at the date of the sale in 1884, the site without the building (which was valued by my predecessor at Rs. 600) was worth Rs. 1,400 and Rs. 1,000, according to the plaintiff and the 1st defendant respectively, and the rise in the price of land since that date, I fix the present market value of that site at 20 times the aforesaid income and find that the present market value of item No. 1, eliminating from consideration the value of the existing building, is Rs. 3,600.

AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. AMMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAMAYYA.

Appeal No. 354 came on for final hearing after the return of the report of the lower Court upon the issue referred by this Court for trial, and Appeal No. 368 came on for hearing this day.

Messrs. Grant and Quatorez, for the Appellant in No. 354.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Respondent in No. 354.

Mr. Venkatasubramiah, for the Appellant in No. 368.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Respondent in No. 368.

JUDGMENT.

APPEAL No. 354.

We accept the finding of the Subordinate Judge and in modification of his decree direct that the 1st defendant be allowed to retain possession of item No. 1 in the plaint schedule and that he be directed to pay to the plaintiff-respondent the sum of Rs. 3,600, less Rs. 300 found binding on the plaintiff, with interest thereon at 6 per cent. from the date of the plaint till the date of payment. Each party will bear his own costs in this Court, including the costs of the finding called for. Plaintiff is entitled to his costs against the 1st defendant in the Court below. In other respects the decree of the Subordinate Judge is confirmed.

APPEAL No. 368.

On the merits we think the Subordinate Judge has come to the right conclusion. The evidence has been discussed by him fully and we see no reason to differ from him. At the last moment an argument was advanced to the effect that the decree against the appellant is a nullity. The facts bearing on this point are these: The case was argued after evidence was let in on the 15th of April 1916. It was adjourned to the 26th for further arguments. On the 20th, 14th defendant died: no legal representative of his was brought on the record and judgment was delivered on 3rd May, holding among other things that the alienation in favour of the 14th defendant was not binding on the plaintiff. The present 2nd appellant is the legal representative of the deceased 14th defendant. It is contended on her behalf that the decree passed behind her back after her husband's death was without jurisdiction and we are constrained to uphold this contention. Before Order XXII, rule 6, was enacted it was held by this Court in Raghunatha Thatha Charier v. Venkatesa Tawker (4) that a judgment pronounced after the argument was closed must be taken to speak not from the date on which it was actually pronounced but from and on the date that the judgment was reserved after argument. Order XXII, rule 6, gives legislative sanction to this view of the law. After the new rule was enacted, it was held in Subramania Aiyar v. Vaithinatha Aiyar (5) that a judgment pronounced under similar circumstances would be a nullity: Vide also Vishvanath Dnyanoba v. Lallu Kabla (6) and Narendra Bahadur Chand v. Gopal Sah (7). Mr. Ramadoss contended that the spirit of Order XXII, rule 6, will be satisfied, if the 14th defendant's arguments were heard before his death although the other parties had not concluded their arguments. We are unable to accept this contention. Order XX, rule 1, to which the learned Vakil for the appellants drew our attention, contemplates that all the arguments should be heard before the case can be regarded as ripe for judgment. The view of the Judicial Committee in Radha Prasad Singh v. Lal Sahib Rai (8) is also to the same effect. We must, therefore, hold that the decree passed against the 2nd appellant was made without jurisdiction. That decree must be set aside and the case should be remanded to the Subordinate Judge so far as the 2nd appellant is concerned. The lower Court will have to deal with any application that may be made to it to bring in the legal representative of the 14th defendant. The costs will abide the result. The appeal so far as the 11th defendant is concerned is dismissed with costs.

M. C. P.

Order accordingly.

(4) 26 M. 101; 12 M. L. J. 435.

(5) 31 Ind. Cas. 198; 38 M. 682.

(6) 4 Ind. Cas. 187; 11 Bom. L. R. 1070.

(7) 20 Ind. Cas. 506; 17 C. L. J. 634.

(8) 13 A. 53; 17 L. A. 150; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 600; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 33.

BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 142 OF 1918.

July 3, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr.
Justice Martineau.BALWANT SINGH AND ANOTHER—CONVICTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Jurisdiction, territorial, of British Courts—Subject of Native State, whether can be tried for abetting within State offence committed in British India—Arrest by British Police of subject of Patiala State on Railway lines within Patiala territory, legality of—Approver, evidence of—Corroboration, whether necessary.

Where a subject of a Native State is charged with abetting an offence committed in British India and the alleged abetment consists entirely of what the accused did or said at a place within the State territory, he cannot be tried in a Court in British India for such abetment. [p. 870, cols. 1 & 2.]

Reg. v. Pirtai, 10 B. H. C. R. 356, followed.

Emperor v. Chhotatal Babar, 14 Ind. Cas. 970; 14 Bom. L. R. 147; 13 Cr. L. J. 428; 26 B. 524, distinguished.

The accused, a subject of the Patiala State, was arrested in a Railway carriage at Bhatinda by the British Police:

Held, that the arrest was lawful as full and exclusive power and jurisdiction of every kind over the Railway lines and over all persons within those lines had been ceded by the Patiala State to the British Government. [p. 870, col. 1.]

Muhammad Yusuf-ud-din v. Queen-Empress, 6 P. R. 1897 Cr.; 25 C. 20; 24 I. A. 137; 2 C. W. N. 1: 7 Sar P. C. J. 239; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 14 P. C.), distinguished.

An approver giving his evidence under a promise of pardon cannot be believed unless he is corroborated by independent evidence. [p. 867, col. 1.]

Appeal from the order of the Sessions Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 24th January 1918, convicting the appellants.

Mr. Beechey and Mr. Ghulam Rasul for Mr. Kehr Singh, for the Appellants.

Lala Mul Chand, R. S., Public Prosecutor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh have been convicted under sections 302/149, Indian Penal Code, of having murdered Santa Singh and Nathal, residents of Dina in the Ferozepore District, and under section 395, Indian Penal Code, of having committed dacoities at the houses of Santa Singh, Banta Singh and Kala Singh, and Balwant Singh and Jot Ram—have been convicted of abetting those offences. All the convicts have been sentenced to death. They have appealed, and the case is also before us under section 374, Criminal Procedure Code, for confirmation of the sentences.

The offences were committed at Dina at about midday on the 18th September 1916, Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh are residents of Khota, a village about 5 kos. from Dina, and are said to have joined with Bhanga Singh and his brother Ganda Singh, residents of Dina, in committing the offences.

The deceased Santa Singh and Nathal were descendants of Baja, a great uncle of Bhanga Singh and Ganda Singh, and there was, as the learned Sessions Judge has shown, bitter enmity between Bhanga Singh and Ganda Singh on the one hand and Santa Singh and his brother Banta Singh on the other. There is also evidence that Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh were associates of Bhanga Singh and Ganda Singh, and that Gajjan Singh and Arjan Singh used often to go to Dina.

On the morning of 18th September 1916 Sucha Singh (P. W. No. 34), lambardar of Khota, saw Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh leaving the village and going towards Pattoke, which is in the direction of Dina. Gajjan Singh had a gun and the other two had chharis. Mahla Singh, who was under orders of internment in his village, called out to Sucha Singh to report to Kirpal Singh lambardar that he was going away and would not return. The witness informed Kirpal Singh (P. W. No. 35), who on the same morning made a report P. D at the thana.

Thakur Singh (P. W. No. 27) says he saw Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh going from Pattoke to Dina armed in the manner described by Sucha Singh.

Sub-Inspector Lehna Singh (P. W. No. 54) on receiving Kirpal Singh's report went to Khota and thence to Pattoke and from there towards Dina. But on the way he was met by a lambardar and chaukidar of Dina, who told him that murders and dacoities had taken place. He sent reports P. E and P. U to the thana, in which he stated that the offences had been committed by Ganda Singh, Bhanga Singh and three Jats of Khota.

The dacoits on assembling in Dina had first tried to catch Santa Singh's son Bakhtawar Singh, who, however, succeeded in escaping. They then went into Nathal's house, killed Santa Singh who was in a room in the house with chhavis, and shot dead Nathal who was in the verandah. They went after Banta Singh, but he escaped and hid in a field. After this they looted the houses of Santa Singh, Banta Singh and Kala Singh. Finally Musammatt Kishni, the sister of Bhanga Singh and Ganda Singh, told her brothers that they should kill her. A funeral pyre was prepared, on which she lay down, and then her brothers shot her and set fire to the pyre. The dacoits absconded after the commission of these crimes, and it was not till the following May that Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh were arrested, while Bhanga Singh and Ganda Singh are still at large.

BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR.

The evidence shows that at the time of the murders and dacoities Ganda Singh was armed with a gun, Bhanga Singh with a revolver, and Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh with chhavis and a stick. That there were the five men who committed the crimes is proved by the evidence of P. Ws. Nos. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 15, 17, 19, 29, 30 and 45, who saw them while the events described above were taking place. All five were known already to P. Ws. Nos. 6, 10, 15, 19 and 45, and all but Mahla Singh were known to P. Ws. Nos. 7 and 30. The evidence of Sub-Inspector Lala Ram Das, P. W. No. 59, also shows that Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh were identified out of a number of other men by P. Ws. Nos. 6, 7, 8, 10, 12, 29 and 30.

In addition to the evidence of the Dina witnesses and of Sucha Singh, Kirpal Singh and Thakur Singh and the report P-D mentioned above, it is proved that some gold earrings P-58, of which Banta Singh's wife Musammatt Atri, P. W. No. 11, was robbed, were pawned by Gajjan Singh, who was accompanied by Arjan Singh, Mahla Singh and two other men to Musammatt Sham Kaur, P. W. No. 37, and that the latter's husband, Jamna Das, P. W. No. 38, pawned them to Sardha Ram, P. W. No. 40, from whom the Police recovered them. It is further shown that Gajjan Singh came with Arjan Singh, Mahla Singh and two other men to Badan Singh, P. W. No. 42, and pawned to him some jewelry P-52 to P-57, which is part of that of which Musammatt Atri was robbed.

No evidence has been produced by Gajjan Singh, Arjan Singh and Mahla Singh, and the prosecution evidence mentioned above establishes their guilt beyond all doubt. We confirm the sentences of death passed on them and dismiss their appeals.

We have now to consider the case of Balwant Singh and Jot Ram, who live in Patiala State at the villages of Chukerian and Mansa respectively, which are said to be some 60 miles from Dina.

The learned Sessions Judge says that the case against these men is that they assisted Bhanga Singh and his companions in procuring arms with the object of removing some enemy or enemies of their own after Bhanga Singh and his party had murdered their enemies. This, however, is not a correct statement of the case. What Balwant Singh and Jot Ram have been charged with and convicted of is abetment of the murders committed at Dina (i.e., the murders of Bhanga Singh's enemies) and of the dacoities committed there, and not abetment of the murder of their own enemies. The case for the prosecution against Balwant Singh and Jot Ram is what the learned Judge mentions as an alternative case, namely, that they assisted in supplying arms to Bhanga Singh and his friends with the knowledge that these arms would be used for murderous purposes and that in this way they are guilty of having abetted the crimes committed at Dina.

The case against Balwant Singh and Jot Ram rests on the statements of Narsingh (P. W. No. 5), a resident of Dumwali in the Patiala State, and of Fateh Muhammad (P. W. No. 67), a dealer in arms in Delhi. The evidence of these two witnesses was obtained as the result of information given by Gajjan Singh's brother-in-law Gurdit Singh (P. W. No. 4), who on the 20th of April 1917 told the Deputy Superintendent of Police about the dacoits having obtained arms from Fateh Muhammad in Delhi. The Deputy Superintendent of Police on receipt of that information got Gurdit Singh to write a letter to Fateh Muhammad. Fateh Muhammad sent a reply Exhibit P-A, in which the name of Balwant Singh occurs. Fateh Muhammad's house was searched, and in a register in the house the names and addresses of Jot Ram and Narsingh were given. A pardon was tendered to Narsingh, and his statement was taken by the Magistrate on the 27th June. Fateh Muhammad was also tendered a pardon in respect of offences under the Arms Act.

BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR.

Balwant Singh and Jot Ram are first mentioned by Narsingh in his evidence in connection with an incident which is said to have occurred at Bhatinda about May 1916. Narsingh wanted a gun for use against his half brother Atma Singh with whom he had enmity, and Ganda Singh, with whom Narsingh became acquainted, wanted a revolver for dealing with his enemies at Dina. Narsingh says that they were unable to obtain the arms at Patiala, and that then he and Bhanga Singh, whom he had met at Dina, started to go to Mansa where Bhanga Singh intended to see Jot Ram. They had to change trains at Bhatinda and happened to meet Balwant Singh and Jot Ram at the hotel there. Narsingh stayed outside the hotel, and Bhanga Singh went in to speak to them, and then came and told Narsingh that Jot Ram had said that he would supply arms if he (Bhanga Singh) would murder the enemies of Jot Ram and Balwant Singh, and that Jot Ram and Balwant Singh would also pay him Rs. 1,000.

This accidental meeting with Balwant Singh and Jot Ram is somewhat curious. There is no corroboration of Narsingh's statement in regard to the incident, and corroboration is necessary not only because Narsingh has given his evidence under a promise of pardon, but also because he is an interested witness. His half brother Atma Singh (P. W. No. 84), with whom Narsingh is at enmity, (so much so that Narsingh once fired a pistol at him), says that Balwant Singh used to help him in his disputes with Narsingh. The latter has, therefore, a strong motive for giving evidence against Balwant Singh.

Even if the evidence be true it proves nothing against the appellants, as Narsingh's statement as to what Bhanga Singh told him would be no proof of what Balwant Singh and Jot Ram had said to Bhanga Singh. Even if we were to go further and assume that Balwant Singh and Jot Ram had given the undertaking which Bhanga Singh told Narsingh they had given, this would at the most be proof that they had abetted the murder of their own enemies, an offence with which they have not been charged. It would be no proof that they had entered into a conspiracy with Bhanga Singh to murder Bhanga Singh's enemies, and it is highly improbable that they would have entered into any such conspiracy as they were in no way interested in the feud between Bhanga Singh and his enemies.

Narsingh then goes on to say that a few days later he and Bhanga Singh went to Mansa, where they met Jot Ram, who gave them a card (P.B) on which he drew a sketch to show the position of Fateh Muhammad's shop in Delhi, and who also gave them a letter to Fateh Muhammad. They then went to Delhi, where Narsingh bought a gun and Bhanga Singh a Mauser pistol at Fateh Muhammad's shop. Fateh Muhammad corroborates Narsingh in this matter, and also says that they brought him a letter in which Jot Ram asked him to sell arms to them at low prices.

There is no very clear proof that the words written on the card P.B are in the handwriting of Jot Ram, and it is noteworthy that this document came into the hands of the Police not from Narsingh, but from his half brother Atma Singh, who accounts for his possession of it by saying that Narsingh had left it in a pocket when he gave his clothes to be washed, and that the woman who washed the clothes found it and gave it to Atma Singh's daughter. This explanation is not particularly satisfactory, and it seems strange that Atma Singh should have taken so much care to preserve the document, which was of no use to him, for nearly a year.

The letter which Jot Ram is said to have given to Narsingh for Fateh Muhammad is not produced, although Fateh Muhammad says it was among his papers and was taken by the Deputy Superintendent of Police. If this statement of Fateh Muhammad is true, it may be presumed that the letter, if it had been produced, would not have been favourable to the prosecution; and if the statement is false it would be unsafe to believe that Jot Ram gave any such letter.

But even supposing it to be true that Narsingh and Bhanga Singh went to Jot Ram and told him they wanted to buy arms, and asked him for a letter of introduction to Fateh Muhammad, and that he gave them a letter, they cannot by merely so doing be held guilty of abetting the crimes committed at Dina. Narsingh himself does not say that they told Jot Ram that the arms were required for the murder of Bhanga Singh's enemies, and it cannot be assumed without any evidence that he knew that the arms were required for such a purpose.

BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR.

The third piece of evidence relied on by the prosecution relates to the purchase of two rifles, one by Bhanga Singh and the other by Balwant Singh, from Fateh Muhammad in Delhi. It is alleged that Jot Ram, Balwant Singh and Bhanga Singh went together to Fateh Muhammad's shop and that Balwant Singh bought a rifle P 5 (afterwards produced by his mother) and Bhanga Singh a rifle P-2, which was found in the possession of Gajjan Singh when he was arrested. Narsingh and Fateh Muhammad have both deposed to this transaction, which is said to have taken place on the 29th or 30th July 1916, when Balwant Singh and Jot Ram were staying in Delhi at the Punjab Hindu Hotel, as shown by the hotel register. These witnesses have further deposed that after the rifles had been purchased Balwant Singh and Jot Ram said to Bhanga Singh that now that they had bought rifles for him he should do their business, to which Bhanga Singh replied that he would do his business first. The witnesses cannot, however, be believed on this point, as they made no mention of such conversation in their statements to the Police, nor did Narsingh mention it in the statement which he made on the 27th June 1917 on being tendered a pardon. Had that conversation, which is the most important part of the evidence against Balwant Singh and Jot Ram, actually taken place, it is most improbable that Narsingh and Fateh Muhammad would have made no reference to it in their original statements.

With regard to their evidence as to the purchase of the rifles it is urged that Narsingh had no particular object in taking the journey to Delhi, and that it is remarkable that he should have arrived, as according to Fateh Muhammad he did, just at the moment when the transaction was taking place. It is also a point in favour of the appellants that Fateh Muhammad says that it was on the 7th or 8th Ramzan that Balwant Singh, Jot Ram and Bhanga Singh came to him. Those dates correspond to the 8th and 9th July, whereas the dates of the appellants' stay in Delhi were the 28th, 29th and 30th July as shown by the hotel register. On the other hand the hotel register shows that one Bhanga Singh son of Kahan Singh had come with Balwant Singh and Jot Ram and was occupying the same room. Although he is entered as a resident of Atla and a servant of Balwant Singh, the parentage agrees with that of the absconding Bhanga Singh of Dina. It is difficult to believe that this can have been a mere chance coincidence, and we agree with the learned Sessions Judge in thinking that the Bhanga Singh who was in the company of Balwant Singh and Jot Ram at Delhi was Bhanga Singh of Dina. This fact makes it probable that the statements of Narsingh and Fateh Muhammad that the appellants and Bhanga Singh came together to Fateh Muhammad's shop and that the rifles P-2 and P-5 were bought at the same time, are true. The discrepancy in regard to the date may be due to want of recollection on the part of Fateh Muhammad.

But granting that the evidence as to the purchase of the rifles is true, this does not advance the case for the prosecution. What the prosecution have to prove is that the appellants intentionally aided the commission of the Dina murders and dacoities. How does their presence at the time of the purchase of the rifle P-2 by Bhanga Singh show that they rendered such aid? Bhanga Singh bought the rifle himself and supplied the money, which he had got from Gajjan Singh (see the evidence of Gurdit Singh). He obtained no help from either of the appellants in the matter, nor did he need their help, as he had already been introduced to Fateh Muhammad and had bought a pistol from him at his previous visit with Narsingh in May. The Delhi transaction, therefore, which is the one mainly relied upon by the prosecution, does not really prove anything against Balwant Singh and Jot Ram.

BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR.

There is one other incident mentioned by Narsingh. He says that after the purchase of the rifles he went with Jot Ram, Balwant Singh and Bhanga Singh to Mansa, and thence with Balwant Singh and Bhanga Singh to Chukerian. They tried the rifles in Balwant Singh's garden, and Balwant Singh then asked Bhanga Singh to state clearly his intentions, and Bhanga Singh said he intended to kill Santa Singh and Banta Singh, upon which Balwant Singh said he would show him the house of his own enemies, and the two men went off together. On their return the witness went back to his village.

The statement of Narsingh on this matter, like his statement about the incident at Bhatinda, is uncorroborated and its truth is questionable, as it does not appear what object Narsingh had in going to Chukerian and why he should not have gone straight home from Delhi. But here again, assuming the statement to be true, how does it help the prosecution? It proves nothing against Jot Ram, who is not alleged to have been present on the occasion, and all that it could prove against Balwant Singh would be that he instigated the murder of some enemy of his own—an offence which is not the subject-matter of the present case. Not only does it not show that Balwant Singh had been abetting the murder of Bhanga Singh's enemies, but it would tend to exonerate him so far as that offence is concerned, as the very fact of his asking Bhanga Singh what his intentions were would suggest that up to that time he was unaware that Bhanga Singh intended to use the rifle for killing his (Bhanga Singh's) enemies.

The statements of Narsingh and Fateh Muhammad discussed above appear to be the only evidence against Balwant Singh and Jot Ram. The lower Court has referred to some other evidence of the dealings which Balwant Singh and Jot Ram have had with Fateh Muhammad. We do not doubt the existence of those dealings, but they do not help to establish the charges on which the appellants have been tried.

The learned Sessions Judge has also referred to some evidence indicating a connection between the appellants and the dacoits. He says that the evidence of Mr. Donald (P.W. No. 61) and of Major Tara Chand, Inspector-General of Patiala Police, (P.W. No. 68) shows that Balwant Singh, when suspected by the Police of being connected with the dacoits, offered to assist in their arrest, and that it is curious that Jot Ram, who is a mere cloth merchant, should have volunteered to assist in the arrest of these dacoits, with whom he says he was not even acquainted. We do not, however, find from the evidence of Mr. Donald and Major Tara Chand that Jot Ram volunteered to assist in the arrest of the dacoits. Mr. Donald's evidence shows only that he tried to get Balwant Singh and Jot Ram to find out the dacoits, not that they made an offer to do so. In any case the fact that there may have been some connection between the appellants and the dacoits would not serve to show that the appellants helped the dacoits to obtain arms for committing the murders and dacoities which are in question.

The learned Sessions Judge then refers to the fact that Balwant Singh produced a rifle P.102 before Major Tara Chand and stated that he had borrowed it from Bhanga Singh ostensibly for shikar purposes, but really to facilitate Bhanga Singh's arrest. That rifle had been bought by Balwant Singh from Fateh Muhammad, and the learned Judge remarks that the fact that a rifle bought by Balwant Singh from Fateh Muhammad had come into the hands of Bhanga Singh is strong evidence that Balwant Singh was providing arms for Bhanga Singh. But here he has wrongly assumed that Balwant Singh's statement to Major Tara Chand that he had borrowed the rifle from Bhanga Singh was true. Evidently that statement was not true. Balwant Singh seems to have falsely pretended that he had borrowed the rifle in order to account for his possession of it, not wanting to admit that the rifle was his and that he had bought it from Fateh Muhammad.

Towards the end of his judgment the learned Sessions Judge says that he thinks there is no doubt that the appellants knew for what purpose Bhanga Singh required arms. There does not, however, appear to us to be any evidence of such knowledge, apart from the uncorroborated statement of Narsingh in regard to the incident of Chukerian, and even that statement (if believed) would show only that Balwant Singh came to know of Bhanga Singh's purpose after Bhanga Singh had bought the rifle.

BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR.

There is a further difficulty in the way of the prosecution in this case, viz., in connection with the question of jurisdiction. This question has arisen in two ways. It is argued, first, that Balwant Singh and Jot Ram were arrested in Patiala territory and that consequently they cannot be legally tried in a Court in British India; and second, that they cannot be tried in British India for anything which they are alleged to have said or done except in respect of the transaction at Delhi. We overrule the first contention. We agree with the finding that Jot Ram was arrested in Jullundur and Balwant Singh in a railway carriage at Bhatinda, and we also agree that the arrest of Balwant Singh by the British India Police was lawful as full and exclusive power and jurisdiction of every kind over the railway lines and over all persons within those lines had been ceded by the Patiala State to the British Government. As pointed out by the learned Sessions Judge in his order of the 29th October 1917, this case is distinguishable from the case reported as Muhammad Yusuf-ud-din v. Queen-Empress (1), which relates to jurisdiction on the line of railway in the Hyderabad State as the cession by that State of jurisdiction along the line of railway was only for the purpose of enabling the British Government to deal with offences committed on the railway or connected with the administration of the railway, whereas the cession by the Patiala State was not of that limited character.

But the second contention put forward by the defence, appears to be correct. With the exception of what took place at Delhi in July 1916, the alleged abetment consists entirely in what the appellants did or said at places in the Patiala State, and for offences of abetment committed in those places they cannot legally be tried in a Court in British India. Reg. v. Pirtai (2) is an authority on this point. Emperor v. Chhotalal Babar (3), which is cited on the other side, does not apply, as that was a case in which the abetment was begun outside, but completed within British India. The present case is not one of that nature. The appellants could, therefore, be legally tried in the Ferozepore Court only in respect of what occurred at Fateh Muhammad's shop at Delhi in July 1916. The evidence in regard to that incident, as we have pointed out above, does not in any way establish the case for the prosecution.

The Police were themselves perhaps conscious of the weakness of the case against Balwant Singh and Jot Ram, for although all the evidence against these appellants had been obtained by the 2nd June 1917, when Fateh Muhammad made his statement, it was not till the end of August that Mr. Donald decided to arrest them, and the reason for arresting them then was, as he admits, that they did not seem to exert themselves to find Bhanga Singh and Ganda Singh which he had been trying to get them to do.

Balwant Singh and Jot Ram may possibly have committed offences under the Arms Act, but it has not been proved that they abetted the murders and dacoities committed at Dina.

We, therefore, accept their appeal, set aside the convictions and sentences, and acquit Balwant Singh and Jot Ram.

Appeal accepted.

(2) 10 B. H. O. R. 356.

(3) 14 Ind. Cas. 970; 14 Bom. L. R. 147; 13 Cr. L. J. 426; 36 B. 524.

(1) 6 P. R. 1897 Cr.; 25 C. 20; 24 I. A. 137; 2 C. W. N. 1; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 239; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 14 (P. C.)

KRISHNAYYA v. EMPEROR.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 77-B OF 1918.

June 4, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Kotwal, Offg. A. J. C.

KRISHNAYYA—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 234—Joinder of charges—Offences against different individuals committed by one person, whether can be tried together—Procedure.

The conviction of an accused person at one trial for three acts of misappropriation committed against three different persons is not illegal.

Section 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not limited to cases where the offences have been committed against the same person.

Revision of the order of the Sessions Judge, East Berar, dated the 20th April 1918, in Criminal Appeal No. 46 of 1918.

ORDER.—I see no reason to interfere in revision. Grounds Nos. 2 and 4 are a repetition of grounds Nos. 1 and 3 of the memorandum of appeal before the Appellate Court and have been properly dealt with by that Court. The 1st ground urges that the 3 acts of misappropriation having been committed against three different persons the conviction of the appellant at one trial for all of them is bad and Empress of India v. Murari (1) is relied on. The case has been dissented from in Manu Miya v. Empress (2) and also in Sri bhagwan Singh v. Emperor (3). The present case is analogous to Queen Empress v. Juala Prasad (4). Section 234, Criminal Procedure Code, is not, in my opinion, limited to cases where the offences have been committed against the same person, see also Ohhatradhari Misser v. Emperor (5). There is no substance in ground No. 3. The judgment of the Appellate Court gives the points for determination, its decision thereon and the reasons for its decision quite fully and clearly.

(1) 4 A. 147; A. W. N. (1881) 156; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 735.

(2) 9 C. 371; 11 C. L. R. 522; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 896.

(3) 3 Ind. Cas. 319; 13 C. W. N. 507; 9 C. L. J. 149; 5 M. L. T. 349; 10 Cr. L. J. 272.

(4) 7 A. 174; A. W. N. (1884) 321; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 387.

(5) 28 Ind. Cas. 638; 19 C. W. N. 557; 16 Cr. L. J. 332; 43 C. 13.

EMPEROR v. MADHAV LAXMAN.

I do not see any illegality or impropriety in the Appellate Court's decision. The sentences are not severe. This application is dismissed.

Application dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVIEW No. 415 OF 1917.

April 3, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah and

Mr. Justice Marten.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

MADHAV LAXMAN AND ANOTHER—

ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 197, 215, 234, 239, 532—Sanction to prosecute public servant—Offence, designation of, whether necessary—Joint trial of two accused for cheating—Conspiracy—One transaction—Commitment, whether can be quashed by Sessions Judge.

Where a Collector sanctioned the prosecution of a Kulkarni and a Patil "for cheating or for such other offence with which it may be necessary to prosecute them in connection with obtaining money from ryots."

Held, that the offence or offences which might be established in connection with obtaining money from ryots were sufficiently designated in the sanction, and that the sanction was not invalid on account of vagueness. [p. 872, col. 2; p. 875, col. 1.]

In each case it is a question of fact whether the offences in respect of which more persons than one are charged at the same trial were committed in the same transaction, within the meaning of section 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that question must be determined with reference to the facts of each case. [p. 873, col. 2; p. 874, col. 1.]

Where it was alleged that the accused, the Kulkarni and the Patil of a village, conspired together and cheated certain persons on the same day, by asking them to pay certain sums in excess of what was properly payable by them as assessment:

Held, that there being clear proximity of time and space, clear continuity of action and sufficiently specific community of purpose, the offences committed by the accused must be held to be committed in the same transaction within the meaning of section 239 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so that the joint trial of the accused under that section was not illegal. [p. 873, col. 2; p. 876, col. 1.]

Under section 215 of the Criminal Procedure Code a commitment can be quashed by the High Court only and only on a point of law. Section 532 of the Code applies only to a case where a Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which are not so conferred; commits an accused person to a Court of Session. It has no application to a case where the Court of Session considers that a commitment made by a competent Court is illegal. [p. 872, cols. 1 & 2; p. 875, col. 1.]

EMPEROR V. MADHAV LAXMAN.

Revision against the order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Dharwar.

Mr. S. V. Palekar, amicus curiæ, for the Accused.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

SHAH, J.—The facts relating to this case are briefly these. The accused, who are the Kulkarni and the Patil of the village of Bhandiwad, were committed to the Court of Session on the 15th August 1917 on a charge of cheating three persons. They were tried by the Additional Sessions Judge of Dharwar with the aid of Assessors. The evidence and the opinion of the Assessors were recorded. The case was then adjourned for judgment.

On the 10th September 1917 the learned Additional Sessions Judge made an order under section 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code quashing the commitment and directing a fresh enquiry. This order was originally brought to the notice of this Court by the District Magistrate; but the Court refused to entertain the reference made by him against the order of the Additional Sessions Judge. The order made by the Additional Sessions Judge having been brought to the notice of this Court, a Rule was issued with a view to determine the legality of this order.

We have now heard the learned Government Pleader, who contends that the order is illegal. As there was no appearance on behalf of the accused, we requested Mr. Palekar to present the arguments in favour of the order, and we are obliged to Mr. Palekar for having done so.

The order of the lower Court is based on two grounds: first, that the sanction under section 197 of the Code is invalid, and, secondly, that the joint trial of the two accused for three distinct offences of the same kind is illegal.

In the first place the order is wrong, because section 532 has no application to a case of this kind. That section applies to a case where any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise the powers duly conferred, which are not so conferred, has committed an accused person for trial to a Court of Session. In the present case there is no question that the Magistrate, who committed the accused for trial to the Court of Session, had the power to do so, and consequently, in my opinion, even assuming for the sake of argument that the grounds, upon which the order is based, are valid, the lower Court would have no power to quash the commitment and direct a fresh enquiry under section 532. The proper procedure for the lower Court would have been to make a reference to this Court with a recommendation that the commitment should be quashed, as under section 215 of the Code, a commitment can be quashed by the High Court only and only on a point of law.

In the view, however, I take of the grounds upon which this order is based, it is unnecessary to deal with the order in question on the footing that section 532, Criminal Procedure Code, has no application. The first ground relates to the form of the sanction. The sanction in this case is given by the Collector of Dharwar for the prosecution of Madhavrao Luxman Kulkarni and Ningangowda Dymangowda Patil "for cheating or for such other offence with which it may be necessary to prosecute them in connection with obtaining money from ryots." It seems to me that the sanction is not invalid on account of vagueness in the designation of the offences in respect of which the prosecution is sanctioned. The sanction in the present case is in form very much like the sanction that was given in the case of Imperatrix v. Lakshman Sakharam (1), where the sanction directed that the accused be "placed on his trial under section 466, Indian Penal Code, or any other section which may seem applicable after farther investigation". This sanction was held by the learned Judges in that case to be sufficient under section 466 of the Code of 1872, corresponding to section 187 of the present Code; and it seems to me that the present sanction is equally valid and proper. Even apart from this authority, I should have taken the same view as to the validity of the sanction.

(1) 2 B. 481; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 743.

EMPEROR V. MADHAV LAXMAN.

The case of Queen Empress v. Samavir (2), which has been relied upon by the learned Additional Sessions Judge in support of his view, does not seem to me to have any application. There the Board of Revenue sanctioned the prosecution of a Deputy Tahsildar by the Collector of the District "for bribery or such of the charges set forth in the Deputy Collector's report as he thinks likely to stand investigation by a Criminal Court." The judgment in the case shows that this sanction was held to be invalid, because the resolution of the Board of Revenue was read as not sanctioning the prosecution of the accused in that case for any offence designated by itself, but as merely delegating to the Collector the power of selecting out of several such charges as he thought likely to stand investigation.

In the present case in my opinion there is no such delegation. The sanctioning authority has applied its mind to the facts of the case and sanctioned the prosecution of the accused persons and has also, in my opinion, sufficiently designated the offence or offences which may be established in connection with obtaining money from ryots. Thus the case of Queen Empress v. Samavir (2), which must be taken with reference to the facts in that case, does not show that the sanction in the present case is invalid in any way. It is significant to note that no objection was taken to the validity of the sanction by the accused at the trial.

In this view of the case, it is not necessary to consider the further point, which has been urged by the learned Government Pleader, that no sanction under section 197 is necessary for prosecuting the accused persons on a charge of cheating. Several cases have been referred to in the course of the argument; but, in view of the decision in Imperatrix v. Lakshman Sakharam (1), it may not be easy to accept the argument. It is not necessary, however, to express any opinion on this point.

The second ground relates to the joint trial of the two accused persons on the charge of cheating the three persons specified in the charge. The learned Additional Sessions Judge has come to the conclusion that the cheating of these three persons cannot be said to form part of the same transaction within the meaning of section 239, that section 234 of the Code does not apply to the trial of more persons than one, that consequently there has been a misjoinder of charges and that the joint trial is illegal. It is not necessary to refer to the various cases to which the learned Judge has referred in order to decide this point. The whole question is, whether on the facts alleged by the prosecution, these acts, viz., cheating the three persons mentioned in the charge, were committed in the same transaction or not. The case for the prosecution is that the two accused, the Kulkarni and the Patil, conspired together and cheated certain persons on the 17th of March 1916 by asking them to pay certain small sums in excess of what was properly payable by them as assessment. The case for the prosecution in effect is that the purpose of the two accused was one and the same, namely, to induce the different persons who went to pay the land revenue on that day to pay more than what was legally payable by them to the Government, that they acted in concert and that the purpose was not merely the general purpose of cheating the villagers, but that the scheme adopted by them was a common scheme.

Having regard to the meaning put on the word "transaction" in the various decisions of this Court, it is clear to my mind that according to the prosecution case these offences were committed in the same transaction. There was clear proximity of time and space, there was clear continuity of action, and there was sufficiently specific community of purpose.

Under these circumstances, it seems to me that the charge as framed is in no way illegal, and that there is nothing in the charge which can be properly held to vitiate the trial.

The case of the Sub-Registrar [Girwar-dhari Lal v. Emperor (3)] and the case of the Directors [Ohoragudi Venkatadri v. Emperor (4)] referred to by the lower Court are clearly distinguishable from the present case. In each case really it is a question

(3) 4 Ind. Cas. 13; 13 C. W. N. 1062; 10 Cr. L. J. 463.

(4) 5 Ind. Cas. 547; 33 M. 502; 20 M. L. J. 220; 7 M. L. T. 299; (1910) M. W. N. 65; 11 Cr. L. J. 252.

(2) 16 M. 468; 3 M. L. J. 227; 2 Weir 220; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1033.

EMPEROR V. MADHAV LAXMAN.

of fact whether the offences in respect of which more persons than one are charged at the same trial are committed in the same transaction, and that must be determined with reference to the facts of the case. In holding at this stage that there is nothing illegal about the charge, I am only taking the story of the prosecution without expressing any opinion as to the merits of that story.

The result, therefore, is that both the grounds on which the lower Court has based its order fail, that neither the commitment nor the trial is illegal, and that the order of the lower Court must be set aside.

The question still remains as to what order we should now make. The trial was all but complete, when this order was made, and ordinarily I should have preferred to direct that the trial should be resumed from the stage where it was left and finished according to law. But the difficulty has arisen in consequence of the delay owing to this order, and the subsequent proceedings which became necessary in consequence of the order. By asking the learned Judge now to write his judgment, we would be practically asking him to weigh the evidence recorded more than six months ago. It is not reasonable to expect the learned Judge to refresh his memory of the evidence without the aid of further arguments: and on principle it is desirable that the course which necessitates the writing of a judgment in a Sessions trial, in which the evidence is recorded more than six months ago, should be avoided. My learned brother is definitely of opinion that under such circumstances, the proper course is to direct a re-trial and under the peculiar circumstances of this case, I have also come to the conclusion that though the trial, so far as it has proceeded, is legal and proper, the best course would be to order a re-trial according to law. The accused have not appeared before us, though the terms of the Rule issued by this Court clearly gave them notice that a re-trial might be ordered by this Court. It is unfortunate that we have to deal with this matter at an interlocutory stage and to direct a re-trial owing to the lapse of time; but it is the best order that could be made under the circumstances in the interests of justice.

I would, therefore, set aside the order made by the lower Court and direct that the accused be re-tried according to law.

I desire to make it clear that the discretion of the trial Court under the provisions of the Code in framing the charge or charges against the accused and in directing a joint trial is not to be fettered in any way by the view which I have taken as to the legality of the present charge and the trial.

[The rest of the judgment is not reportable.]

MARTIN, J.—The course which the learned Additional Sessions Judge, Mr. Ferrers, took in this case was as unusual as it is embarrassing in the result. The case was heard in the ordinary way, evidence was taken, the Assessors gave their opinions, and then the learned Judge reserved his judgment. So far everything followed a normal course, but apparently in the course of considering his judgment, the learned Judge thought that it was his duty, in following what he conceived to be the English practice, to undertake the conduct of the defence. In fact the time for conducting the defence was over as the hearing had been finished, but in his judgment the learned Judge raised two technical objections, which, as far as I can ascertain, were never put to the Government Pleader or argued before him and which ought to have been taken at the beginning of the trial, if at all. Then having considered those technical objections, he decided that they were good, and having next held that section 532 applied, the learned Judge quashed the commitment and directed a fresh enquiry. In other words, the whole proceedings were to commence de novo.

Now in the first place, I think the learned Judge has stated what I have understood to be the English practice far too broadly. He says;—"It is, I believe, the traditional practice of the British Courts of justice that where a prisoner is undefended, the Judge himself undertakes the conduct of the defence. Following what I believe to be the traditional course, I feel it my duty to advert to certain particulars which the accused have allowed to pass in silence." Now in England if a prisoner is undefended the Judge very frequently asks a Barrister to conduct the case for the defence. But if that course is not followed, I think it is inaccurate to say that the Judge conducts the case for the defence. That to my mind implies that the Judge, instead of being an independent officer holding the balance even between the Crown on the one side and the prisoner on the other, leaves that position and adopts the position of an Advocate. If he does adopt the position of an Advocate, then at once he is in this danger of thinking that the points he himself has taken are sound ones. I cannot help thinking that the learned Judge arrived at the conclusion, which he eventually did, in this case, largely owing to the mistaken idea of the course that he should adopt where a prisoner is undefended. That all proper points should be brought out on behalf of the prisoner, that if necessary a Judge should closely examine the Crown witnesses, and that he should put the points for the defence to the Jury, is all commonplace, but I protest against the notion that a Judge, whether the prisoner is defended or undefended, should deviate from his position of strict impartiality between the Crown on the one side and the prisoner on the other. I must not, however, be understood as thinking that the Judge erred in taking the objections at that late stage. It was unfortunate that they did not occur to anybody before, but that may happen, however careful Judge and Counsel are. Whenever they did occur, I think it was right to take them.

EMPEROR V. MADHAV LAXMAN.

Next, turning to the section under which the learned Judge acted, viz., 532, I agree with my learned brother that even if the learned Judge's objections were well founded, that section did not enable him to quash the present commitment, so that in any event his actual decision seems to be erroneous.

Next, taking the technical objections which I have referred to, they were two. One was that the sanction given to prosecute was inadequate, because it amounted, as the learned Judge thought, to delegation, and, secondly, that there was a misjoinder of charges. Now, as regards the first point as to the sanction, the learned Judge seems to have followed the decision in Queen-Empress v. Samavir (2), without considering closely enough the facts of the case and the precise sanction given in that case and in this. I think that when the two sanctions are read side by side, there is a clear difference between them. In the case of Queen-Empress v. Samavir (2) I think there was a complete delegation to the Deputy Collector to bring any such charges as he, the Deputy Collector, would think likely to stand investigation. That is the way I read the sanction given in the Madras case. But here the words are different, for the sanction given was "for cheating or for such other offence with which it may be necessary to prosecute them in connection with obtaining money from ryots." As I read those words, it means this, that cheating was put as what I may call the primary offence, but if for technical reasons it was necessary to add some other offences in connection with the same set of facts, then the proper authority was at liberty to do so. Personally I think, that is allowable. In the decision which my learned brother referred to in Imperatrix v. Lakshman Saktharam (1), the sanction is expressed I think in better terms than the one we have got to deal with here. But it amounts to the same thing, namely, that a person is to be put on trial under a particular section or any other section which may seem proper after further investigation. In that respect I agree with what was said in Girwardhari Lal v. Emperor (3), that these sanctions are not to be looked upon as if they were the precise charge to be framed. Some latitude must be given to the gentleman who has to frame the legal charge in precise language. At the same time I quite see that the sanction given must be substantially definite, but I do not think it is an objection if some words are added which do enable the accused to be put on trial in conformity with one particular section or with such other sections of the Code as may seem proper under the circumstances and arising out of certain facts referred to definitely in the sanction.

I accordingly think that the sanction given in the present case was sufficient, but in saying that I do not mean to say that I think it should be adopted as a precedent. I think the form that was used might very well have been improved upon, but I think it was sufficient under the Act. I express no opinion on the point whether sanction was necessary at all but will assume for the purposes of this case, though without deciding the point, that sanction was necessary.

EMPEROR V. MADHAV LAXMAN.

Then the next point is as regards the misjoinder of charges. Here the three villagers, who are alleged to be the victims of the accused, were all paying the same Government tax on the same day and all together before the two accused. The case for the prosecution, as I understand it, is that there was really a conspiracy between the two accused to defraud each of these villagers in connection with the payment of this tax. In my opinion, on the facts of this case, this amounted to "the same transaction" within the meaning of section 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code. There certainly was the same continuity of purpose as regards the accused and taking the other circumstances into consideration, viz., that all the three accused were there at the same time paying the same tax, I think it does amount to the same transaction. In that view there could be no misjoinder of charges. In this respect I think the decision in Emperor v. Ganesh Narayan Dikshit (5) affords a useful guide to what is proper under the circumstances. Personally I feel that a wide meaning ought to be given to the words "the same transaction." Then it will be for the Judge in any particular case at the trial to say that although there is one charge yet he would direct separate trials of certain matters in that charge. That is the remedy if he thinks that any embarrassment may be caused to the prisoners at the trial by joinder of charges.

Then as regards the case that was relied on the other way, viz., Girwardhari Lal v. Emperor (3), really no decision was arrived at by the Court. All that the Court did was to say that as it could not ascertain the facts as to what the nature of the offences was they were not inclined to interfere in revision, as no objection had been made at the trial as to any misjoinder.

The next question is: What course are we to take? Judgment was given seven months ago. Everything was finished except the judgment, and the learned Judge did not take the course which, as at present advised and without hearing arguments on the point, I should have thought he might have taken, namely, to have given an alternative judgment, based on the one hand on the hypothesis that his technical objections were right and on the other hand that they were wrong, and then sent the case up to the High Court. If he had taken that course, we should have been in a position to say finally what should be done. But as it is, it seems to me the only alternatives before us are either to direct in effect the learned Judge to write his judgment on the merits or to have a re-trial. Personally I am opposed to the idea that a proper judgment may be written seven months after the case has been tried, and nonetheless so because the case is of a criminal nature. It is almost impossible to imagine that the facts can remain fresh in the Judge's mind or that he will have any real recollection of the witnesses when he comes to make up his mind on which side the truth lies. I do not think it sufficient to say that the learned Judge can read up his notes of the case and notes of the argument. That won't necessarily bring back the faces of the witnesses and what he thought of them at the trial.

Therefore, I am clearly of opinion that the proper course in the present case is to direct a re-trial. We have got here very unusual circumstances, but I think that when such unusual circumstances do arise, the safest rule ordinarily is to begin de novo, and try the matter over again.

I accordingly agree that there should be a re-trial in the present case, and of course the learned Judge's order must be set aside.

At the re-trial it will be in the discretion of the Judge who tries the case to direct separate trials if he thinks fit as regards anyone or more of these villagers who are alleged to have been defrauded. That is a matter for his discretion, but as far as I can see on the facts, so far as they have been put before me, there is no necessity for ordering separate trials. But our judgments must not fetter his discretion in any way.

(5) 17 Ind. Cas. 705; 14 Bom. L. R. 972; 13 Cr. L. J. 833.

EMPEROR V. MUHAMMAD SHAH.

[The rest of the judgment is not reportable.]

Re-trial ordered.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

July 13, 1918.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 118 OF 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and

Mr. Justice Martineau.

EMPEROR—APPELLANT

versus

MUHAMMAD SHAH AND ANOTHER—

RESPONDENTS.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 415—Cheating—Offences, ingredients of—Harm, not necessary consequence of act—Offence, whether committed.

In order to constitute the offence defined in the second part of section 415 of the Penal Code:

(1) there must be deception practised upon a person;

(2) by that deception the person must be induced to do or omit to do something which he would not have done or omitted to do, had he not been so deceived;

(3) such act or omission must cause, or be likely to cause, to the person deceived damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property. [p. 878, col. 1.]

To constitute the offence of cheating under section 415, Indian Penal Code, the damage or harm caused or likely to be caused to the person deceived in mind, body, reputation or property must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom. [p. 878, col. 2.]

The accused presented certain recruits before a Recruiting Officer, who rejected them. Subsequently the accused offered the same recruits to one M., on condition that the latter would pay Rs. 50 for each recruit. It was arranged, however, that the money would only be paid if the recruits were accepted by the Recruiting Officer. Before the Recruiting Officer it was discovered that the recruits had already been rejected:

Held, that there being only a possibility that M. might suffer annoyance owing to the discovery that the recruits had already been rejected and to the fact that his explanation might not be believed at once by the Recruiting Officer, the accused were not guilty of cheating under section 415 of the Penal Code. [p. 878, col. 2.]

Appeal from the order of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Lyallpur, dated the 31st October 1917.

Mr. C. Bevan Petman, Government Advocate, for the Appellant.

Mr. Badr-ud-Din Qureshi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the Local Government from the order of a First Class Magistrate acquitting Muhammad Shah and Babu Ram of the offence of cheating and of attempting to cheat under sections 417 and 420/511, Indian Penal Code.

The alleged facts of the case are as follows:—Certain recruits were presented by Babu Ram before the Assistant Recruiting Officer at Lahore and were rejected by him as unfit. Muhammad Shah accused met another rejected recruit in the Lahore Bazar and took him to Babu Ram accused. Both of them then brought the rejected recruits to Lyallpur and offered them to Muhammad Kasim Lambardar on condition that he would pay Rs. 50 for each recruit. It was arranged that this money would only be paid if the recruits were accepted by the Recruiting Officer. At the same time Muhammad Kasim asked the accused whether the recruits had already been rejected or not, and they replied in the negative. Muhammad Kasim then presented the recruits to the Assistant District Recruiting Officer, whose orderly Muhammad Shah told them that they had already been rejected in Lahore. When enquiries were made from the recruits themselves, they confirmed this and admitted that they had been rejected. Upon this the District Recruiting Officer made a report to the local authorities and the result was that the accused were chalaned under section 420, Indian Penal Code.

Admitting the facts to be as stated, the Magistrate was of opinion that the accused had committed no offence. It was conceded by the Public Prosecutor that there was no offence under sections 420/511, because the money was not to be paid by the Lambardar unless the recruits were accepted. It was, however, contended that the offence of cheating as defined in the second part of section 415, Indian Penal Code, had been committed, because the act of the Lambardar in presenting the rejected recruits to the Recruiting Officer was one likely to cause him damage or harm in his reputation. The Assistant District Recruiting Officer admitted in his statement that the Lambardar was not liable to any punishment departmentally, as merely presenting rejected recruits is not by itself an offence unless it is done knowingly. As the Lambardar did the act unknowingly he was safe from the wrath of the District authorities. The lower Court says: "Hence that act did not cause him harm in body or property." It went on to say that if it did him any harm in reputation in the eyes of his fellow villagers, the harm was so slight that it would be covered by section 95, Indian Penal Code. It is not now contended by the learned Government Advocate that any offence under section 420/511 has been committed, because Muhammad Kasim was only to pay Rs. 50 per recruit if the recruits were accepted. It is contended, however, that an offence has been committed such as is defined in the second part of section 415, Indian Penal Code. In order to constitute the offence there defined:—

ARUNACHALAM PILLAI v. PONNUSWAMI PILLAI.

(1) there must be deception practised upon a person;

(2) by that deception the person must be induced to do or omit to do something which he would not have done or omitted to do, had he not been so deceived;

(3) such act or omission must cause, or be likely to cause, to the person deceived damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property.

Now, assuming the facts to be as stated, the first and second ingredients of the offence exist in the present case. But the question is, as put by the learned Magistrate, whether the act of the Lambardar in offering the rejected recruits caused, or was likely to cause to him damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property. The learned Government Advocate does not say that this act would injure his reputation in the eyes of his fellow villagers. What he urges is, that if the Lambardar's explanation to the effect that he did not know that the recruits had been previously rejected had not been accepted, he would then have been reported to the Deputy Commissioner, who might have punished him departmentally. What actually happened was that Muhammad Kasim's explanation was accepted and no action was taken against him. Under the circumstances it cannot, in our opinion, be said that the Lambardar's action in presenting the rejected recruits, seeing that he presented them not knowing that they had been previously rejected, was one likely to cause him any harm or injury at all. There was, in our opinion, only a possibility that he might suffer annoyance owing to the fact that his explanation was not at once accepted. The possibilities contemplated by the learned Government Advocate are, in our opinion, too remote. In Mojei v. Queen Empress (1) it was held that to constitute the offence of cheating under section 415, Indian Penal Code, the damage or harm caused or likely to be caused to the person deceived in mind, body, reputation or property must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom. We are quite unable to hold that damage to Muhammad Kasim's reputation was the necessary consequence of his offering rejected recruits. There is no reason to assume that there was any likelihood that his explanation would be rejected and we see as a matter of fact that it was accepted. Under the circumstances we are unable to hold that there was any reasonable likelihood of Muhammad Kasim's suffering any damage or harm whatsoever from the fact that he innocently presented rejected recruits to the Recruiting Officer.

We, therefore, dismiss the appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 17 C. 606; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 943.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS PETITIONS NOS. 83
AND 349 OF 1918.

August 20, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and
Mr. Justice Napier.

ARUNACHALAM PILLAI—RESPONDENT
No. 2—PETITIONER

versus

PONNUSWAMI PILLAI—PETITIONER—
RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 144,

ARUNACHALAM PILLAI v. PONNUSWAMI PILLAI.

195—Disobedience of order under s. 144—Sanction for prosecution granted by District Magistrate—Order, whether administrative or judicial—Appeal, whether lies—'Court' in s. 195 (7), meaning of—Public servant passing orders under s. 195 (1), whether acts judicially—Administrative orders—High Court—Revision, interference in.

An order passed by a Magistrate under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code is a judicial order and the authority issuing the order cannot be separated from the authority granting sanction for prosecution for disobedience of it. [p. 580, col. 2.]

Where, therefore, a Magistrate grants sanction for prosecution for disobedience of an order issued by him under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code, he acts as a 'Court' within the meaning of section 195, sub-section 7 of the Code. [p. 581, col. 1.]

The summonses and orders referred to in the group of offences mentioned in clause (a) of sub-section 1 of section 195, when issued by a Magistrate or Judge, are issued judicially and where sanction is given to prosecute for disobedience of such summonses or orders, such sanction is issued by the same authority, namely, the Court. [p. 581, cols. 1 & 2.]

Sankram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar, 2 Weir 155, explained.

The word 'Court' in sub-section 7 of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, is not confined to clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section 1 of the section. Sub-section 7 is enacted for the purpose of explaining what is subordination within the meaning of sub-section 6, where the authority giving or refusing is a Court, and does not purport to confine its operation to clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section 1. [p. 581, col. 2.]

Where, therefore, sanction is given with reference to an offence against a Court, the appeal is governed by sub-section 7. [p. 581, col. 2.]

The High Court has no appellate or revisional authority over administrative orders of a District Magistrate. [p. 580, col. 1.]

A public servant—qua public servant is not subordinate to the authority of the High Court as required by section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code. [p. 580, col. 1; p. 581, col. 2.]

A Sub-Magistrate having refused to accord sanction for prosecution of the petitioner for disobedience of his order passed under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, the opposite party appealed to the District Magistrate, who granted the sanction applied for. Against this latter order the petitioner appealed to the Sessions Judge, who refused to interfere with the District Magistrate's order on the ground that it was passed administratively.

Held, that the order of the District Magistrate was a judicial order, against which an appeal lay to the Sessions Judge. [p. 581, col. 2.]

Petitions under section 195, clauses 6 and 7, Criminal Procedure Code and under section 195, clauses 6 and 7, and sections 436 and 439, Criminal Procedure Code, praying that in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavit filed with Criminal Miscellaneous Petition No. 83 of 1918, the High Court will be pleased to revoke the sanction to prosecute the petitioner herein, granted by the District Magistrate of Trichinopoly in his proceedings D. Dis. No. 24 of 1918, dated 12th January 1918, (preferred against the order of the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Trichinopoly, in Miscellaneous Case No. 10 of 1917) and to revise the order of the Sessions Court, Trichinopoly, dated the 1st March 1918, in Criminal Miscellaneous Petition No. 10 of 1918, declining to interfere with the above order of the District Magistrate.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. R. V. Seshagiri Row, for the Respondent, took the preliminary objection in Miscellaneous Petition No. 83 that no appeal lay to the High Court direct from the order of the District Magistrate without resort in the first instance to the Sessions Court. If the order of the Sub Magistrate refusing sanction should be treated as an executive and not as a judicial order, equally so was the order of the District Magistrate an executive order, over which the High Court had no appellate or revisional authority. If the order was passed by the Magistrate qua public servant, section 195 (7), Criminal Procedure Code, would not apply.

Mr. C. Rajagopala Aiyangar, for the Petitioner.—As the order was passed by the District Magistrate as a public servant, petitioner was entitled to come to the High Court in revision. With regard to Miscellaneous Petition No. 399 the order appealed against was one passed by a Court. The original order out of which the sanction proceedings arose was also passed by a Court. The Sessions Judge should not have declined to exercise jurisdiction. If the sanction was accorded by a Court, it attracts the provisions of sub-section 7. Clause (a) of section 195 should not be narrowed or restricted to orders passed by public servants in their character as public servants. Clauses (b) and (c), which refer to Courts, do not exclude orders passed judicially under clause (a).

Messrs. E. R. Osborne and P. R. Narayanaswami Aiyar, for the Crown.

ORDER.

NAPIER, J.—These are two petitions, one to revise an order of the District Magistrate of Trichinopoly of the 12th January 1918, the other to revise the order of the Sessions Judge of Trichinopoly of the 1st

ARUNACHALAM PILLAI-V. PONNUSWAMI PILLAI.

March 1918. The order of the District Magistrate was made on appeal from an order of the Stationary Sub-Magistrate of Trichinopoly refusing to sanction the prosecution of the present petitioner and another for an offence under section 183, Indian Penal Code. The petitions were the result of an order of the Stationary Sub-Magistrate passed on the 8th May 1917 under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, restraining this petitioner and others from taking the Pidari deity in procession through a lane claimed to be the private property of the present counter petitioners. This order was alleged to have been violated and hence the petition for sanction.

The Stationary Sub-Magistrate declined to grant the sanction on two grounds, one, that the order should not have been passed and that, therefore, disobedience cannot be considered to be an offence; the other, that the petition for sanction was the outcome of previously existing spite. The present counter-petitioner appealed to the District Magistrate of Trichinopoly, who decided that, the order having been passed, rightly or wrongly, disobedience to it was an offence and granted the sanction. This is one of the orders appealed against. The petitioner appealed from that decision to the Sessions Judge, who passed the following order: "The order appears to have been made by the District Magistrate as an administrative officer, and I think, therefore, that no appeal lies to this Court. Petition is dismissed." This is the other order appealed against.

The petitioner before us first argued that the order of the District Magistrate granting sanction against him was passed by him as a public servant, that no appeal lay to the Sessions Judge and that, therefore, he was entitled to come to the High Court. On this petition it is, in our opinion, enough to say that if the order was passed by the District Magistrate administratively, the High Court has no appellate or revisional power. We asked the learned Vakil to invite our attention to any provision either in the Government of India Act or the Letters Patent, or in the Criminal Procedure Code which makes a public servant qua such servant and not qua Court subordinate to the authority of the High Court as required by section 195, sub-section 6, and he was unable to show us any. We, therefore, dismiss this petition.

On the second petition by way of what is, for convenience, called an appeal from the order of the Sessions Judge, the petitioner took up the opposite position, namely, that the order was one of a Court and that, therefore, the Sessions Judge was in error in declining to exercise his jurisdiction. We have, therefore, to decide whether the (appeal) provisions in section 195, sub-section (7), Criminal Procedure Code, apply to this order. We are clear that the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, in passing this order refusing sanction, was acting judicially, for the original order which, it was alleged, was disobeyed was an order passed under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code. These orders have always been treated as judicial orders and we cannot separate the authority issuing the order from the authority granting sanction for disobedience of it.

But the more difficult question is whether, on the language of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, even though the order was passed by a Court, the "appeal" lies to another Court. Section 195, sub-section (1), deals with three classes of offences. The first group are sections 172 to 188 of the Indian Penal Code, which are classed in Chapter X of the Code under the heading "of contempt of the lawful authority of public servants;" the second group refers to section 193 and others, which are classed in the Code under the heading "of false evidence and offences against public justice"; and the third group contains the sections in Chapter XVIII of the Code and classed "of offences relating to documents and to trade and property marks." With regard to the first group section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any such offence except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of the public servant or of some public servant to whom he is subordinate. With regard to the second group, the provision is that no Court shall take cognizance of any such offence when such offence is committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any Court, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, etc. With reference to the third group it is provided that no Court shall take cognizance of any such offence when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, etc. With reference to the second and third groups, the section provides that the term "Court" means Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court, but not a Registrar. The appeal in all cases is provided for by sub-section 6: "Any sanction given or refused may be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it is subordinate." Then sub-section 7 provides: "for the purposes of this section every Court shall be deemed to be subordinate only to the Court to which appeals from the former Court ordinarily lie." The question is whether the word "Court" in sub-section 7 refers to Court mentioned in sub-section (1), clauses (b) and (c), only, or whether it applies also to order made by a public servant as a Court under sub-section (1), clause (a). The Sessions Judge took the former view, following the decision of this Court reported as Sankaram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar (1). That decision is, however, no authority for his view, as the High Court held that the order was not one of a Court. It is, of course, clear that the offences grouped in clause (a) include disobedience of orders of Courts, such as contempt of summonses issued by Courts (section 172, Indian Penal Code), refusal to produce documents before Courts (section 175), refusal to take an oath or affirmation before a Court (section 178), giving false information to Court (section 181), obstructing sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of the Court (section 184), and disobeying a direction to abstain from a certain act promulgated by a Court under section 188, which is the present case. There can be no doubt that the various summonses and orders referred to in those sections when issued by a Magistrate or a Judge are issued judicially, and as pointed out above, it surely must follow from that that the sanction to prosecute for disobedience of such summons or order must be issued by the same authority, namely, the Court.

ARUNACHALAM PILLAI v. PONNESWAMY PILLAI.

But this still leaves the other question open, namely, whether sub-section 7 applies to such sanction. I am of opinion that the word 'Court' in sub-section 7 is not confined to clauses (b) and (c). The Legislature must have been aware that offences against the authority of the Courts were covered by Chapter X of the Indian Penal Code and there is, of course, no reason why any difference should be made with regard to appeals between offences against the lawful authority of Courts and offences against public justice in relation to proceedings in Courts. The word 'public servant' was obviously used in clause (a) because it is used in the Penal Code throughout the provisions in Chapter X and 'public servant' is defined in section 21 of the Code as including Judges and Magistrates. Sub-section 7 is, I think, enacted for the purpose of explaining what is subordination within the meaning of sub-section 6, where the authority giving or refusing sanction is a Court, and does not purport to confine its operation to clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1), nor do I think that the Legislature had that intention. It seems to me that the word 'Court' was used in clauses (b) and (c) because it was intended to limit the operation of those clauses to proceedings in relation to Courts, thereby constituting a narrower class than is dealt with in clause (a), and I see no reason why, because a narrower class of cases confined to Courts only is provided for in those two clauses, the word 'Court' in sub-section 7 should be confined to those two groups and not read as applicable to the wider group in clause (a), which applies to both Courts and other public servants, both of whom are clearly covered by the word 'authority' in sub-section 6.

In the result I hold that where the sanction is given with reference to an offence against a Court, the appeal is governed by sub-section 7. The order of the Sessions Judge is set aside and he is directed to take the petition on his file and dispose of it according to law.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—I agree entirely. It is not essential for the decision of this case

(1) 2 Weir 155.

ABDUL SUTTAR v. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR.

to express an opinion on the question whether the particular order of the Sub-Magistrate mentioned in Criminal Revision Case No. 136 of 1903 reported as Sankaram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar (1) was rightly held by this Court on the facts of that case to have been passed by that public servant, not as a Criminal Court but as a public servant who was not a Court. It is, however, necessary to guard myself from subscribing to the opinion suggested by a sentence in that decision, that opinion being that a Sub-Magistrate would act as a Court only when he grants sanction for offences mentioned in section 195, clauses (b) and (c), that he could never act as a Court when he grants sanction for any of the offences mentioned in clause (a) and that therefore sub section (7) could never apply to a sanction given by a Sub-Magistrate for such an offence.

Order of Sessions Judge set aside.

M. C. P.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 11 OF 1915.

February 16, 1915.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brookman, J. C.
ABDUL SUTTAR—APPLICANT

versus

THE SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Municipal Act (XVI of 1903), s. 86—Notice to erect latrine, contents of—Directions, whether should be given—Committee, duty of.

It is clear from the language used in sub-section (1) of section 86 of the C. P. Municipal Act that a notice under that section is itself to contain the directions as to the nature and position of the required latrine. The law does not contemplate delegation to an individual officer of the power to give the necessary directions, though the Committee are at liberty to guide themselves by the advice of any expert in their employ.

Revision against the order of the Assistant Commissioner and Magistrate, 1st Class, Nagpur, in Criminal Case No. 428 of 1914, dated the 12th October 1910.

Mr. P. O. Kotwal, for the Applicant.

Mr. R. R. Muley, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—The applicant for revision owns a chul in the town of Nagpur and has been convicted and fined under section 139, C. P. Municipal Act, 1903, for disobeying a notice issued to him under section 86 (1), ibid., which required him to erect a latrine for the tenants occupying the rooms in the said building.

Certain technical objections taken in the application for revision have been shown by the learned District Magistrate in reporting on the case to be groundless. The only point which now falls to be considered is that the notice was invalid for want of particulars regarding the manner in which the Committee desired the latrine to be provided. The direction given is to apply to the Health Officer of the Municipality and to erect a latrine in accordance with such order as he may give. The power conferred on the Committee by sub-section (1), section 86, of the Act is thus described in that provision:—to require the owner of any building to provide, in such manner as the Committee directs, any privy...which should, in the opinion of the Committee, be provided for the building or the land appurtenant thereto. In my opinion it is clear from the language used that the notice itself is to contain the directions of the circumstances deemed appropriate. The law does not contemplate delegation to an individual officer of the power to give the necessary directions, though the Committee are of course at liberty to guide themselves to a decision by the advice of any expert in their employ. As pointed out in Ramdularay v. Ohhinduvara Municipality (1), a Municipal Committee must keep rigidly within the limits of the authority entrusted to it. In the present case, moreover, the time allowed for moving the Health Officer and erecting a latrine was only 10 days, a period which might easily prove insufficient for securing the necessary directions from that official.

I hold that the Committee should have formulated and included in their notice specific directions as to the nature and position of the required latrine and that for want of these the notice issued is bad in law. The conviction and sentence in the applicant's case are accordingly set aside and the fine (if paid) will be refunded.

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 431; 6 N. L. R. 53.

SIKANDAR V. EMPEROR.

I would add in conclusion that the trying Magistrate has entirely ignored the defence that the applicant has on his own land no site on which to erect a latrine. If this be the fact, the Committee will have to provide a site and the notice under section 86 (1), if again issued, should show the position selected.

Conviction set aside.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 211 OF 1918.

October 3, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and
Mr. Justice Broadway.

SIKANDAR AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 99, thirdly, 148, 149; 302—Rioting—Death caused in riot—Parties engaging deliberately in fight—Right of private defence—Public authorities, protection of, not claimed, effect of—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 25—Report made to Police, admissibility of, against person who made it.

There is no right of private defence where two parties arm themselves for a fight and deliberately engage in one. [p. 886, col. 1.]

A dispute arose over the possession of a plot of land between two parties of villagers. After an altercation each party retired to their own well and armed themselves with spears, hatchets and dangs. One party then advanced to attack the other and the latter came out to meet the attack. In the fight which ensued, one man on each side was killed and others received injuries. The thana was only a mile away and each party had ample time to send word to the Police and claim the protection of the Police Authorities, but neither of them did so:

Held, that the members of each party were guilty of offences under section 302 of the Penal Code, inasmuch as the common object of each party was to cause injury and hurt to those they attacked and they must have known that the use of the formidable weapons they used would in every likelihood result in the causing of death. [p. 884, col. 2; p. 885, col. 1.]

A report made to the Police which amounts to a confession is not admissible in evidence against the person who makes it. [p. 885, col. 2.]

Appeal from the order of the Sessions Judge, Attock, at Campbellpur, dated the 26th February 1918.

Dr. Shuja ud Din, for the Appellants.

Mr. C. Bevan Petman, Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of the cases out of which this and Criminal Appeal No. 219 of 1918 have arisen are given in ample detail in the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge. It is, therefore, unnecessary to repeat them at length here. Briefly they are as follows:—On the 4th July 1917 a serious fight took place at Mauza Bhangri, some four miles from Hazro. The parties to this fight were Pathans of the said village, to the north of which there is some barani land regarding which there was a boundary dispute between, what may be termed, the parties of Shahzada and Sarwar, respectively. It is said that early in the morning of the 4th July Shahzada together with Sher Bahadur and Hayat Khan attempted to plough up certain reeds growing along the boundary. They were prevented from so doing by Sikandar, Aynb, Shahbaz and Sarwar. An altercation ensued but a fight was averted. Shahzada and his friends then retired to their well known as Sadhuwala, while Sarwar and his companions fell back on to their well known as Gobindawala. These two wells are some 65 karams apart, Sadhuwala well being some 30 karams away from the village abadi. It is said that, at these wells, each side was reinforced and weapons such as spears and hatchets were procured from the village. It soon got bruited about in the village that a fight was imminent and a crowd collected to witness it. At Sadhuwala well were Shahzada, Hajun, Sher Bahadur, Hayat Khan, Az'z Khan, Najim Khan and Shahinchi, while the party collected at Gobindawala well consisted of Sarwar, Sikandar, Shahbaz, Fazal Khan and Mawaz. Both sides are alleged to have been armed with spears, hatchets and dangs. As has been said above, the two wells are only 65 karams apart and it is easy to understand that a certain amount of abuse must have been exchanged. Finally, it is said that Sarwar led his men to the attack and made for Sadhuwala well. Shahzada and his following advanced to meet their opponents and the two sides met at a distance of some 8 karams from

SIKANDAR V. EMPEROR.

Sadhuwala well where the fight took place, in the course of which on Sarwar's side Sikandar, Shahbaz and Ayub received simple injuries while Sarwar himself was killed. The medical evidence shows that Sarwar, Sikandar and Shahbaz received injuries from spears or cutting weapons while Ayub received injuries caused by lathis. On the other side Shahzada was killed, having received injuries from spears and cutting weapons, while Shahinchi, Najim Khan and Hayat Khan also received hurts caused by lathis and cutting weapons as well as by spears. The injuries received by Shahinchi were grievous, as being dangerous to life, while Najim Khan's injuries were also serious though simple. Reports were made at the thana by both sides, that on behalf of Sarwar's party being made by Shahbaz and that on behalf of Shahzada's party being made by Shahinchi. The thana, it should be noted, is one mile from the scene of the occurrence. The Police reached the spot and in due course sent up both sides for trial on charges under sections 302 and 148-149, Indian Penal Code. The persons tried in the one case were Sikandar, Shahbaz, Ayub, Fazal Khan and Mawaz and in the other Hajun, Sher Bahadur, Hayat Khan, Aziz Khan, Najim Khan and Shahinchi. The learned Sessions Judge acquitted Mawaz, giving him the benefit of certain doubts that he entertained as to his having actually taken part in the fight, but convicted all the other persons in both cases, finding them guilty under sections 148 and 302, Indian Penal Code, and sentencing them all to transportation for life.

Both sides have preferred appeals to this Court and we have heard Mr. Shuja-ud-Din for Sikandar and his party and Mr. Ram Lal for Hajun and his companions, while the learned Government Advocate has addressed us on behalf of the Crown. The trials were held separately, as was necessary, but as the two cases dealt with the same incident, the learned Sessions Judge has written one main judgment and this present judgment will dispose of both the appeals.

The case against the appellants in Criminal Appeal No. 211 of 1918 (Sikandar, etc.) is that they were the aggressors and attacked the opposite party. It has been abundantly proved that the actual fight took place some 8 karams from Sadhuwala well, which shews conclusively that Sikandar and his party were the actual assailants and directly responsible for the fight. For them it was urged that the story for the Crown was incorrect, and that the truth was that Hayat Khan was seen cutting down the reeds early in the morning and was asked by Sikandar not to do so, that a quarrel ensued and the parties separated, Sikandar going back to his well and going about his ordinary avocations; that apparently the other faction had collected at Sadhuwala well and that by chance Sarwar happened to pass within a few paces of it whereupon he was attacked and killed, and that when Sikandar went to the spot he too was beaten. Those of the appellants in this case who received no injuries assert that they were not present. This story has been disbelieved by the learned Sessions Judge and we have no hesitation in holding that he has taken a correct view. The defence story is not supported by any evidence, and the report made by Shahbaz at the Police station shews that it was Sikandar who is said to have passed by the well and to have been attacked, whereas the story now told is that Sarwar was the unfortunate victim.

Mr. Shuja-ud-Din took exception to the admissibility of this report on the ground that it was a statement made to the Police by an accused person, and reliance was placed on Harji v. Emperor (1). This case, however, does not afford Mr. Shuja-ud-Din any assistance, as the statement made by Shahbaz is not in the nature of a confession and therefore is not excluded by the Evidence Act or by the principles enunciated in the case cited. It was then urged that in a fight of this nature, when both sides, being equally armed, joined willingly in a fight, a conviction under section 302, Indian Penal Code, could not be legally passed. In this we are unable to agree. When a number of men armed with spears, hatchets and dangs deliberately attack another party similarly armed, the attackers, at least, cannot be considered to have any right of self-defence. The common object of these appellants was clearly the causing of injury and hurt to those they attacked, and they must have known that the use of the formidable weapons they used would in every likelihood result in the causing of death. We accordingly hold that Sikandar and his party have been rightly convicted of murder under section 302/149, Indian Penal Code.

(1) 45 Ind. Cas. 273; 4 P. R. 1918 Cr. 19 Cr. L. J. 513.

SIKANDAR V. EMPBROR.

As to the individual appellants there can be no doubt at all that those persons who actually received injuries were in the fight, and, after a consideration of the evidence in the case, which has been very fully described and dealt with by the learned Sessions Judge, we see no reason to differ from his conclusions and hold that all the appellants in this case were concerned in the attack and have been rightly convicted. We accordingly dismiss their appeal.

The evidence in both cases consists of the same witnesses. There seems every reason to believe that the villagers, as well as the various persons concerned in the fight, had agreed to tell as little as possible of what they actually saw. As pointed out by the learned Sessions Judge the witnesses are clearly biased towards one side or the other but their evidence leaves no doubt that all the persons named by them actually were present at the fight and took part in it. We agree with the learned Sessions Judge in thinking that P. W. Ghulam Muhammad Chaudhary is an independent witness, who has substantially spoken the truth. We, therefore, have no hesitation in holding that Hajun and his co-appellants were concerned in this fight and indeed, as far as we understood him, Mr. Ram Lal did not seriously urge that any of his clients were not concerned in the affair. He contended, firstly, that the trial had been vitiated so far as his clients were concerned in that after one of the three assessors had given his opinion, the learned Sessions Judge addressed the remaining two assessors for the second time, and he cited Nasimuddi v. Emperor (2) as authority for his contention. What occurred is described by the learned Sessions Judge in his judgment, and it appears that the first assessor had clearly failed to understand the case, for he gave his opinion that the death of Sarwar had been caused at the place where the reeds had been uprooted, a story that was not alleged by either side. The learned Sessions Judge points out that he had noticed that this particular assessor had been somewhat sleepy during the case and that in re-addressing the remaining assessors he carefully refrained from indicating to them what his own views were. We are unable to hold that the course adopted by him vitiated the trial.

It was next contended that the report made by Shahinchi was not admissible in evidence. Mr. Pritman admitted quite correctly that this contention had force, inasmuch as the statement amounts to a confession. It should be noted here that although the learned Sessions Judge placed this, and the report made by Shahbaz, on the record, he specifically states in his judgment that he excluded them from consideration. Mr. Ram Lal then contended that his clients were entitled to an acquittal on the ground that all they did was to defend themselves. He pointed out that after the first quarrel at the place where the reeds were growing Shahzada and his companions fell back on to their own well Sadhuwala, thus avoiding a conflict. He contended that the statement of Allah Din should not be believed but that in any event, even assuming that Allah Din spoke the truth when he stated that he saw three of this party coming from the village with spears, his clients were perfectly entitled to arm themselves so long as they used those arms only in defence of themselves. We can see no reason for doubting the correctness of Allah Din's story and there can be no doubt that Shahzada and his friends, after the affair at the reeds, took the precaution of procuring arms in order to meet eventualities.

Next it was urged that as the fight undoubtedly took place on lands belonging to the appellants, they were entitled to resist the attack. Emphasis was laid on the fact that on this side while Shahzada was killed Shahinchi and Najim Khan received very serious injuries, while, with the exception of Sarwar, the injuries received by his companions were slight in comparison. Mr. Ram Lal claimed that when the appellants saw the other party advancing towards them armed with spears and hatchets, they undoubtedly had a reasonable apprehension that grievous hurt at least would be caused, and that therefore they were entitled, in exercise of their right of private defence, to go to the length of causing death. He urged that the law imposed no duty on the person assailed to continue to retreat indefinitely, and the fact that his clients went forward to meet the assailants for a few paces did not deprive them of the rights the law gave them. He referred to Alingal Kunhinayan v. Emperor (3). Doubtless this is correct but, as pointed out by Mr. Petman, Mr. Ram Lal lost sight of section 99, Indian Penal Code, the third clause of which lays down that there is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities. This clause places an important restriction on the exercise of this right of private defence. There is no right of private defence where two parties arm themselves for a fight and deliberately engage in one. In the present case it is clear that the appellants deliberately armed themselves and collected at Sadhuwala well, knowing full well that owing to what had already occurred at the reeds and also seeing that the opposite party had collected at a well only 65 karams away, a fracas was imminent. The Police station was only a mile away, and thus they had ample time to send word to the Police and claim the assistance of the public authorities. Instead of doing this they returned to the village, obtained arms and then re-assembled at Sadhuwala well, which is a clear indication of their eagerness for the fight, and in such circumstances we think that it does not really matter which party actually commenced hostilities. In this view we are supported by Kabiruddin v. Emperor (4), cited by the learned Government Advocate. We are of opinion that these appellants had no right of private defence and that they are, therefore, guilty of an offence under sections 302 and 149, Indian Penal Code. The evidence on the record clearly shows that all the appellants were present at, and joined in, the fight. The fact that some of them were armed with spears and hatchets must have caused all of them to realise that death would in all probability be caused and they are, therefore, all equally guilty. We, therefore, maintain the convictions of all of these appellants.

(2) 15 Ind. Cas. 541; 40 C. 163; 13 Cr. L. J. 497.

GAMBHIR CHAND v. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR.

It seems, however, that the appellants were in a lesser degree responsible for this fight and were it possible, we would inflict lesser punishments but as they are clearly guilty under section 302, Indian Penal Code, we are unable to interfere.

We accordingly dismiss both appeals.

In view of the fact that the appellants in Criminal Appeal No. 219 of 1918 (Hajun and 5 others) were attacked at their own well and were not primarily responsible for the fight, we consider that their offence is less heinous and that they are deserving of lesser punishment. As we are, however, unable to award less than transportation for life, we forward the record to the Local Government for such action as may be deemed expedient, under section 401, Criminal Procedure Code.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 24 of 1915.

March 6, 1915.

Present: - Sir Henry Drake-Brookman, Kt.,
J. C.

GAMBHIR CHAND—APPLICANT
versus

THE SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Municipal Act (XVI of 1903), s. 159—Complaint, whether necessary in respect of each accused tried jointly—Master, whether criminally responsible for acts of servant.

A complaint has to be made as required by section 159 of the C. P. Municipal Act in order to enable a Court to take cognizance of an offence punishable under the Act. But once cognizance has been legally taken of an offence, the Magistrate is seized of the whole matter as to all other accused whose guilt may appear during the trial of the case. [p. 887, col. 1.]

A master is criminally responsible for the acts of his servants if those acts are shown to have been done with his co-operation or under his authority. [p. 887, cols. 1 & 2.]

Local Government v. Lakshmichand, 8 C. P. L. R. 19, followed.

(3) 28 M. 454; 3 Cr. L. J. 43.

(4) 35 O. 368; 7 C. L. J. 359; 12 C. W. N. 384; 7 Cr. L. J. 256; 3 M. L. T. 385.

EMPEROR V. HARNAM SINGH.

Revision of the order of the Assistant Commissioner and Magistrate, 1st Class, Nagpur District, passed on the 3rd November 1915, in Criminal Case No. 253 of 1914.

ORDER.—In this case the accredited prosecutor of the Nagpur Municipal Committee complained against one Narain for introducing within octroi limits dutiable goods without paying the tax leviable thereon. The Magistrate, on hearing Narain's statement taken at the commencement of the trial, joined the present applicant as an accused and eventually convicted and fined the latter, as Narain's employer who had caused Narain to introduce the goods.

It is objected here that no complaint had been laid against the applicant as required by section 159, C. P. Municipal Act, 1903, and that his protest against being tried jointly with Narain was improperly disregarded. With regard to the first contention I observe that a complaint has to be made as required by section 159 of the said Act in order to enable a Court to "take cognizance of an offence punishable under the Act." This provision, however, does not oust the operation of the principle applied in Sarwa v. Emperor (1) that once cognizance has been legally taken of an offence, the Magistrate is seized of the whole matter as to all other accused whose guilt may appear. That principle was very recently applied by a Divisional Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Dedar Bux v. Syamapada Malakar (2). I hold, therefore, that the Magistrate must be taken to have acted on the complaint against Narain and to have been justified in so doing. The joint trial of the two men is legalised by section 239, Criminal Procedure Code, and in conceding that the alleged protest was lodged, I cannot think the Magistrate was bound to order separate trials. The matter is a petty one and it is difficult to conceive a case in which joint trial would be proper if this is not one.

On the merits I see no reason to interfere. The application does not impeach the Magistrate's finding that the applicant is Narain's employer and there is positive evidence of that relation. That a master is criminally responsible for the acts of his servants if those acts are shown to have been done with his co-operation or under his authority was recognised in Local Government v. Lakhmichand (3). In the present case the applicant and Narain were in the same tonga shortly after the latter removed the bag from the station and the applicant, instead of offering to pay duty when stopped, tried to induce the octroi peon to release the goods. The Magistrate evidently disbelieved the Tongawala, for he writes that the story of how the applicant entered the tonga at the Cotton Market is inherently improbable. In this connection I would observe also that the Cotton Market is only a few yards from the railway station.

I decline to interfere. The application is rejected.

Application rejected.

(3) 8 C. P. L. R. 19.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 157 OF 1918.

October 1, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and
Mr. Justice Broadway.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

HARNAM SINGH—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 345, 439—Revision—Composition of offence—High Court, power of, to allow composition.

The High Court sitting as a Court of Revision under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code has no power to allow the composition of an offence under section 345 of the Code. [p. 889, col. 1.]

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Amritsar, with his No. 59-G of 1918.

GROUND.—The accused Harnam Singh applied to have his conviction set aside on revision, while the complainant Bishen Das filed an application for enhancement of sentence. The parties have now come to terms and as the offences of which Harnam Singh has been convicted are compoundable, they ask that the accused should be acquitted by the Chief Court and that the fine should be refunded. The authorities differ as to whether a High

(1) 19 Ind. Cas. 946; 9 N. L. R. 65; 14 Cr. L. J. 230.

(2) 24 Ind. Cas. 954; 41 C. 1013; 13 C. W. N. 921;
15 Cr. L. J. 546.

EMPEROR V. HARNAM SINGH.

Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction can give effect to the composition of an offence after conviction. In Ram Piyari v. Emperor (1) it was held that the High Court had this power, but a different view was taken in Ram Chandra v. Emperor (2), Adhar Chandra Dey v. Subodh Chandra Ghosh (3) and Sankar Rangayya v. Sankar Ramayya (4). The Chief Court appears to have held in Nidhan Singh v. King-Emperor (5) that this power can be exercised in revision, though I have not been able to obtain a copy of this ruling. I accordingly forward the case on revision for the orders of the Hon'ble Judges. The statement of the complainant to the effect that he has compounded the offence has been recorded here.

ORDER.—The question referred to this Court on the revision side by the Sessions Judge of Amritsar is whether an offence can be compounded by this Court in exercise of its powers of revision under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code. The authorities on the point are conflicting. In Ram Piyari v. Emperor (1) it was held by a Division Bench consisting of Knox and Karamat Hussain, JJ., that a High Court can, in the exercise of its powers of revision under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, give leave for the composition of an offence under section 325, Indian Penal Code. In Ram Chandra v. Emperor (2) Knox, J., sitting by himself held that a High Court had no power to allow a case to be compounded in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. No reference was made by the Judge to the earlier decision. In Criminal Revision No. 63 of 1903 of this Court Chatterji, J., allowed a case to be compounded, though his judgment shows that he doubted whether he had power to do so. Similarly in the case reported as Nidhan Singh v. King-Emperor (5) the same Judge allowed the composition of an offence in revision, though again he expressed his doubt as to whether he had the power to do so. In Criminal Revision No. 788 of 1900 Mande, J., allowed an offence under section 325, Indian Penal Code, to be compounded, but he did not discuss the question whether this Court had the power to allow such a composition in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. In the case reported as Adhar Chandra Dey v. Subodh Chandra Ghosh (3) it was held that the parties had no locus standi to ask the Judges sitting neither in the Court of Original Jurisdiction nor in the Court of Appeal to treat a compromise which they had made as one coming under section 345, Criminal Procedure Code.

The matter was fully discussed in the case reported as Sankar Rangayya v. Sankar Ramayya (4), in which Ayling and Tyabji, JJ., held that an offence cannot be allowed to be compounded when the matter is before the High Court in revision, and that section 345, Criminal Procedure Code, is exhaustive of the circumstances and conditions under which a composition can be effected. Tyabji, J., after referring to the various sub-sections of section 345, Criminal Procedure Code, continued as follows:—

"The section mentions the Court before which the prosecution is pending, to which the accused is committed for trial and before which an appeal is pending. There is no reference to the High Court in its revisional powers. Conversely it is noteworthy that section 439 (which defines the powers and functions of the High Court in revision) does not refer to section 345.

"It would, therefore, seem that if an offence were allowed to be compounded when the matter is pending before the High Court in revision, it could not be said that the composition was as provided by section 345, in two respects (1) as to the stage of the proceedings, (2) as to the Court which, it is provided by the section, must give leave. It follows that the offence cannot now be compounded.

"It was argued before us that we are empowered (sitting in revision) to allow the composition to be made by reason of section 423 (1) (d) read with section 439 (1). For this argument it is contended that the giving of leave to compound is merely a consequential or incidental order, a contention that was accepted in Ram Piyari

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 696; 32 A. 153; 7 A. L. J. 103; 11 Cr. L. J. 203.

(2) 28 Ind. Cas. 103; 37 A. 127; 13 A. L. J. 104; 16 Cr. L. J. 247.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 176; 18 C. W. N. 1212; 15 Cr. L. J. 728.

(4) 51 Ind. Cas. 350; 29 M. L. J. 521; 18 M. L. T. 381; 16 Cr. L. J. 750; 39 M. 604.

(5) 67 P. L. R. 1904.

MOHAMAD YACUB V. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR.

v. Emperor (1), but rejected in Ram Chandra v. Emperor (2). Knox, J., who decided the latter case sitting alone was a party to the earlier decision also but his attention was not drawn to it and he does not notice it.

"In connection with this argument I observe that the Code in no place specifically empowers any Court to give permission to compound; nowhere is there any special provision conferring distinct powers to sanction compositions. In section 345 (2) the permission of the Court is referred to as a condition precedent to the act of the parties having any effect; and in section 345 (5) the absence of such permission is mentioned as depriving the composition of any effect; but in each case it is assumed that the Court has power to give permission, provided there is any occasion for granting permission.

"The point of view from which the sub-sections are drafted is, however, that it is the injured person who has to be empowered to compromise and the difficulty in the way of compromise in revision is, in my opinion, not so much that the revision Court has not been specifically authorised to grant permission, but that the parties are not allowed to compound except at the stages when the prosecution is pending, or the accused has been committed for trial, or an appeal is being heard from a conviction. The absence of any power being given to the injured person to compromise when matters are before the revision Court is fatal by reason of section 345 (7)."

Ayling, J., concurred in these remarks. It will be seen that the Allahabad cases were considered and that the Judges were unable to agree with the dictum in Ram Piyari v. Emperor (1) that an order permitting composition can be treated as an incidental order within the meaning of clause (d), section 423, Criminal Procedure Code. We fully agree with the reasoning of the Judges in this Madras case and in accordance therewith we hold that this Court sitting as a Court of revision has no power to allow the composition of an offence.

We, therefore, reject the petition for revision.

Revision rejected.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 42 OF 1913.

March 25, 1913.

Present.—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman
Kt., J. C.

MOHAMAD YACUB—APPLICANT

versus

THE SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Municipal Act (XVI of 1903), ss. 66, 139—Continuing breach—Daily fines, whether can be imposed for future breaches—Application for permission to build—Delay in passing orders, effect of.

The daily fine which may be imposed under section 139 of the C. P. Municipal Act must relate to a period anterior to the Magistrate's order of conviction. There cannot be punishment under that section for a future breach. [p. 590, col. 1.]

Empress v. Gangaram, 6 C. P. L. R. 32, followed.

Under section 66 (4) of the C. P. Municipal Act, delay in passing orders on a valid notice given under section 66 (1) of the Act may, if followed by a failure to reply to a written reminder, lead to a conclusion that the proposed building has been absolutely sanctioned. [p. 589, col. 2.]

Application for revision of the order passed by the Magistrate, 1st Class, Nagpur, dated the 13th February 1913, in Criminal Case No. 4 of 1913.

ORDER.—The applicant has been fined Rs. 5 for failing to remove an upper storey added to his house in the town of Nagpur without the sanction of the Municipal Committee. The notice to remove allowed only one day for removal, which on the face of it is an unreasonably short period. But apart from this the applicant pleaded before the trying Magistrate that he applied to the Municipal Committee for permission to build. In the face of this plea the trying Magistrate should have inquired and placed on record details of the application relied on. Under section 66 (3), C. P. Municipal Act, 1903, delay in passing orders on a valid notice given under section 66 (1), ibid., may, if followed by failure to reply to a written reminder, lead to a conclusion that the proposed building has been absolutely sanctioned. As pointed by the learned District Magistrate, it is impossible from the trying Magistrate's meagre record to ascertain exactly what the defence set up was, much less to determine whether it is valid or not. Moreover the trying Magistrate is wrong in thinking that it suffices by way of giving reasons for conviction as required by section 263, Criminal Procedure Code, to state the bald fact that a notice to remove was disobeyed. That fact being found, it remains to add, as required by clause (h) of the last cited section, "a brief statement of the reasons therefor."

GADDAM PENCHULU REDDI, In re.

The sentence passed is also illegal: It requires the applicant to pay Re. 1 per diem "until he removes the unsanctioned building," besides mulcting him in the fixed sum of Rs. 5. There is nothing in section 139 of the Municipal Act to justify such an order. That section lays down that in the case of a continuing breach a fine may be imposed for every day after the first during which the breach is proved to have been persisted in. It is clear, therefore, that the daily fine which may be imposed must relate to a period anterior to the Magistrate's order of conviction. There cannot be punishment under the section for a breach still in futuro.

The decision in Empress v. Gangaram (1), though based on section 97, C. P. Municipal Act, 1889, is in point and should have been followed by the trying Magistrate.

The conviction and sentence are set aside and there must be a fresh trial at which the accused person's defence will be set out in such details as to enable this Court, if again moved in revision, to understand the nature of that defence and to decide whether in spite of it the accused is liable to punishment for not removing the upper storey objected to by the Municipal Committee. The trying Magistrate's attention is directed in this connection to Emperor v. Bhikia (2). His omission to examine the complainant has already been brought to his notice.

Retrial ordered.

(1) 6 C. P. L. R. 82.

(2) 13 C. P. L. R. 171.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION NO. 219
OF 1918.

August 30, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and
Mr. Justice Napier:

In re GADDAM PENCHULU REDDI—
PETITIONER

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195 (1) (a), (6), (7)—Arms Act (XI of 1878), s. 25—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 182—Information given to District Magistrate of person being in possession of fire-arms without license—Issue of search-warrant by Magistrate—Act, whether judicial or executive—Information found to be false—Sanction for prosecution for giving false information to public servant—Appeal to Sessions Judge, whether maintainable.

A Magistrate directing the issue of a warrant to search premises, on information received that the owner or occupant thereof is in possession of fire-arms without a license, acts as a Court and not merely as a public servant, whether he purports to act under the Criminal Procedure Code or under section 25 of the Arms Act, [p. 892, col. 2.]

Where a District Magistrate accords sanction for the prosecution of an informant on the ground that his information proved to be false, he acts judicially and his order is appealable to the Sessions Judge under section 195 (7). [p. 893, col. 1.]

Sankaram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar, 2 Weir 155, dissented from.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Every Magistrate acting judicially is a Criminal Court. A Magistrate to whom, as a Criminal Court, a report is made in order that he might take action as a Criminal Court, receives that report as a Court. The terms 'Court' and 'Magistrate,' wherever used in the Criminal Procedure Code, are generally used as convertible terms. [p. 894, col. 1.]

Petition presented under section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, against the order of the Court of Session of the Nellore District, in Criminal Miscellaneous Petition No. 2 of 1918, dismissing the petition to revoke the order of sanction granted by the District Magistrate, Nellore, for prosecuting the petitioner herein, in No. 1239 D 1 Magl., dated the 23rd October 1917.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. K. Krishnaswami Aiyangar, for the Petitioner.—The information given to the District Magistrate in this case is virtually a complaint. The object of the informant was that the Magistrate should take action on his information. The issue of a search warrant by the Magistrate was an act done by him as a 'Court,' and not as a public servant. He could only have acted under the statutory power vested in him under the Code of Criminal Procedure. The fact that no formal, sworn statement was taken from the complainant does not affect the question. Even if the action taken purported to be under section 25 of the Arms Act, the issue of a search-warrant could only be justified by resort to Chapter VIII (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code, though the special procedure in the Arms Act was followed. The warrant can only be issued by a Court.

GADDAM PENCHULU REDDI, In re.

The fact that, under section 25 of the Arms Act, the Magistrate should record the grounds of his belief before taking action makes it obvious that his functions are judicial and not merely administrative. The grounds for the proceeding are intended for the benefit of the Tribunal of Appeal. Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore Roy (1) and Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore Roy (2). The Sessions Judge should have disposed of the appeal on the merits.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.—The information given that a person was in possession of fire-arms is not a 'complaint' within the meaning of that word in the Criminal Procedure Code. The information was given to a public servant so that he might take action under the Arms Act. The sanction given by him was as a public servant and was an executive act. Sankaram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar (3). In that case it was clearly laid down that, sanction granted for offences comprised in clause (a) of section 195 is not a judicial sanction and is not appealable.

ORDER.

NAPIER, J.—This is an application for revocation of sanction to prosecute the petitioner for an offence under section 182, Indian Penal Code, in that he gave false information to a public servant. The petitioner wrote to the District Magistrate, informing him that one Soora Chinna Venkata Reddi had in his custody without license 3 pieces of arms and submitted to the District Magistrate that the possession of such weapons "by such a person in our village will be dangerous to our lives and that they are without any license." The house of Venkata Reddi was searched and no arms were discovered. Venkata Reddi then put in a petition to the District Magistrate under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code asking for sanction for the prosecution of the person who gave the information for an offence under section 182, Indian Penal Code. The District Magistrate granted the sanction. The petitioner then appealed to the Sessions Judge, who dismissed his petition holding that the order was passed by the District Magistrate not as a Court but as an Executive Officer and that, therefore, no appeal lay to his Court. He expressly followed a decision of this Court in Sankaram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar (3). In that case a report had been made by a Village Munsif under section 45, Criminal Procedure Code, to the nearest Magistrate of the occurrence in the village of a death under suspicious circumstances or of the commission of an offence of murder. The High Court held that a report made under this section was not made to a Court and that, therefore, the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from a sanction granted by a Magistrate for the offence of giving false information to a public servant. With great defence to the learned Judges, I think that this view is incorrect, and if the information in this case had been given under that section, we might have thought it necessary to refer the matter to a Full Bench. But as I think the information is given under a special Act, we feel at liberty to dispose of it.

(1) 2 Ind. Cas. 436; 36 C. 433; 9 C. L. J. 293; 13 C. W. N. 458; 5 M. L. T. 367.

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 501; 39 C. 953; 23 M. L. J. 32; (1912) M. W. N. 760; 12 M. L. T. 171; 10 A. L. J. 193; 16 C. L. J. 231; 16 C. W. N. 865; 14 Bom. L. R. 717; 13 Cr. L. J. 693; 89 I. A. 163 (P. C.).

(3) 2 Weir 155.

It is argued that the information constituted a complaint under the Code. But I do not think that it can be so treated. Under section 28 of the Indian Arms Act (Act XI of 1878) every person aware of the commission of an offence shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, give information of the same to the nearest Police Officer or Magistrate. I have no doubt that the intention of the informant was to act under this section, especially in view of the language of his prayer which states that "the possession is without any license," this being an offence punishable under section 19, clause (f) of the said Act. The informant did not go to the Magistrate to make the complaint, and he was not examined on oath as he would have been if it had been a complaint. It appears that the Magistrate directed the issue of a warrant for the search of the house and the Police procured the warrant from the nearest Magistrate. I am not clear whether the Magistrate in directing the issue of a warrant purported to act specifically under the Criminal Procedure Code with reference to an offence which had been brought to his notice or purported to act under section 25 of the Indian Arms Act. If he was acting under the Code of Criminal Procedure, it would be very difficult to argue that the information on which a Court issues a warrant is not information given to the Court, and it would not matter that the action was taken under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (c), of the Criminal Procedure Code and not on complaint. But if he did not think at that stage that it was necessary to take cognizance of an offence, but only acted under section 25 of the Indian Arms Act, the question is more difficult, for if such action is not by a Court, it would necessarily follow, as held by the Sessions Judge, that the information was given to an Executive Officer and not to a Court. Section 25 provides that where a Magistrate has reason to believe that any person has in his possession any arms for an unlawful purpose, or that such person cannot be left in the possession of any such arms without danger to the public peace, such Magistrate, having first recorded the grounds of his belief, may cause a search to be made, and may seize and detain the arms, although covered by a license, in safe custody for such time as he thinks necessary. The information in this case was to the effect that the possession of these arms is dangerous to the lives of the persons in the village, and it may very likely be that the Magistrate was proceeding under section 25 of the Act (Act XI of 1878) as a preliminary to any further proceedings which might be necessary for an offence under the Act. Assuming that he did so, I am still of opinion that he was acting as a Court. It is true that the section does not say he shall issue a warrant. But I know of no procedure by which the Police have a power of search except under the Code, and it would seem to follow that except by a warrant the Magistrate could not authorise the Police to make a search. It would seem to follow, therefore, that the Magistrate in exercising his powers under this section must have recourse to the powers under Chapter VII (B) of the Criminal Procedure Code of issuing search warrants, subject, of course, to the special procedure contained in section 25 of the Indian Arms Act and such warrants are, of course, under the language of the section, issued by a Court.

GADDAM PENCHULU REDDI, In re.

There is another reason why I think the Magistrate is acting as a Court, and that is the use of the words "having first recorded the grounds of his belief." If the Magistrate is not a Court when proceeding under section 25, the provision can have no value whatsoever. These words are always inserted where the Legislature intends to provide that a Court shall put on record the information on which it is acting for the benefit of any superior Court having jurisdiction to review its action. I am fortified in this view by the opinion expressed by Brett, J., in Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore Roy (1). In that case a District Magistrate, having received information of a formidable riot in which fire-arms were used, came to the spot and, being informed that the fire-arms were being kept in certain houses, searched the houses. It was held by the majority of the Bench that his action was justified neither by the Criminal Procedure Code nor the Arms Act. On appeal to the Privy Council [Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore Roy (2)], the first view was negatived, but the latter view was upheld on the ground that he had not recorded his reasons as required by section 25 of the Arms Act. Neither the Privy Council nor the majority of the Bench expressed any opinion on the question whether action under section 25 was the action of a Court, but the dissenting Judge states his opinion on that point definitely. He considers the matter on page 476* and says as follows:—"The distinction between a judicial and an executive act in India is not very clearly drawn, as many acts which are purely administrative are generally described as executive. The main distinction between the two appears to be that judicial acts are those acts done or orders passed in the exercise of the judicial discretion or power with which an officer is vested under the law, while executive acts are of a ministerial character either carrying judicial orders into effect or discharging duties not of a judicial nature. In the case of Hope v. Evered (4), to which we have been referred, it has been clearly laid down that the issue of a search-warrant is a judicial act and in the case of Mahomed Jackariah and Co. v. Ahmed Mahomed (5) and in the case of Lakshmidas Naranji, In re (6), a similar view has been taken by the High Courts in India."

*Page of 36 C.—Ed.

GADDAM PANCHULU REDDI, In re.

I agree with the learned Judge that it is often difficult to say what acts of a Magistrate are administrative and what are judicial. But I think that where, as in the case of a search or the issue of a search-warrant, the action of a Magistrate under a special Act is analogous to his action as a Court under the Code, the better view would be to hold that he was acting as a Court. We have already decided in Criminal Miscellaneous Petition No. 83 of 1918 [Arunachalam Pillai v. Ponnuswami Pillai (7)] that sanction by a Court under section 195, sub-section 1 (a), is appealable under sub-section 7. It follows, therefore, that the view of the Sessions Judge is incorrect and that he had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. The petition is allowed and the case will be remitted to the Sessions Judge, who will take it on his file and dispose of it according to law in the light of the above observations.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—I agree with the order proposed by my learned brother and I further agree generally and in substance with the reasons given by him. I wish, however, to add some words of my own. The powers given by section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code of the superior "authority" to revoke or grant a sanction given by a subordinate "authority" is a specific statutory power. There is no express procedure laid down for the party to follow who wishes to move the superior authority to interfere with the proceedings of the subordinate authority. It seems to be usual to call the application to the superior authority

(4) (1886) 17 Q. B. D. 338; 55 L. J. M. C. 146; 55 L. T. 320; 34 W. R. 742; 16 Cox C. C. 112.

(5) 15 C. 109 at p. 141; 12 Ind. Jur. 259; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 658.

(6) 5 Bom. L. R. 980 at p. 982.

(7) 48 Ind. Cas. 878; 35 M. L. J. 454; 8 L. W. 422; 24 M. L. T. 396; (1918) M. W. N. 824.

a petition of "appeal," though I am doubtful whether it could be called an "appeal." The mere fact that, under clause 7, the superior authority is (where the subordinate authority is a Court) the Court to which in most cases [though not in all, see sub-clause (c)] appeals "ordinarily lie" is not a complete justification for the use of the word "appeal." However, the description of such an application as an appeal is convenient and I only wish to guard myself against the use of that term tending to mislead the mind in certain contingencies.

With the greatest respect to the decision in Criminal Revision Case No. 136 of 1903 [Sankaram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar (3)]. I feel constrained to dissent from that decision. In that case a Village Munsif sent a false report to the Sub-Magistrate accusing a man of murder. It is clear that he did so in order that the Sub-Magistrate might, as a Criminal Court, take cognizance of the alleged offence. The Sub-Magistrate accorded sanction to prosecute the Village Munsif for an offence under sections 177 and 182, Indian Penal Code. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate revoked the sanction. The Sessions Judge "restored" the Sub-Magistrate's order. [According to section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is not, strictly, a restoration of the Magistrate's order but the fresh granting of the sanction by the Sessions Judge himself. The Sessions Judge in that case treated himself as an appellate authority instead of an authority who was given a special statutory power and, as I have said above, was misled by the use of the term 'appeal' to indicate an application made to a higher authority under clause (6). Then, on revision to the High Court, the learned Judges (Benson and Bashyam Aiyangar, J.J.) held (a) that the sanction to prosecute was granted by the Sub Magistrate of Turaiyur in his capacity as a public servant and not in his capacity as a Court; (b) that he would have acted in his capacity as a Court only if the offence for the prosecution of which sanction was applied for was one of those mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of section 195 (1) and not if it fell under section 195 (1) (a); and (c) that the

ABDUL SATTAR V. EMPEROR.

Sub-Divisional Magistrate did not act as a Court but only as an Executive Officer and the superior authority over the Sub-Magistrate in revoking the sanction granted by the Sub-Magistrate and (d) that the Sessions Judge had, therefore, no jurisdiction to interfere under sub-sections 6 and 7 of section 195.

It seems to me that every Magistrate acting judicially is a Criminal Court. A Magistrate to whom, as a Criminal Court, a report is made in order that he might take action as a Criminal Court receives that report as a Court. The Presiding Officer of the Court is, no doubt, almost always a "public servant" [also section 195, clause (a)] and is also, an "authority" [clause (6)]. When he grants a sanction in respect of an offence falling under sections 177 and 182, Indian Penal Code [which are two of the offences mentioned in section 195, clause (1) (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code], he clearly grants the sanction as a Magistrate, that is, as a Court and clause (7), in my opinion, directly applies. In the case of Clarke v. Brojendra Kishore Roy (2) their Lordships of the Privy Council decided that a Magistrate making a search, even in the absence of a complaint and on his own knowledge that an offence had been committed, is acting as a Criminal Court. At page 966* they say: "It would seem that the Trial Judge and both the learned Judges who formed the majority of the Court of Appeal were misled by the use of the word 'Court' in section 96. For the sake of brevity the Code uses the terms 'Court' and 'Magistrate' generally, if not always, as convertible terms. Section 6 headed 'Classes of Criminal Courts' enacts that: 'Besides the High Courts and the Courts constituted under any law under this Code for the time being in force there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts in British India, namely: (1) Courts of Session, (2) Presidency Magistrates, (3) Magistrates of the First Class, (4) Magistrates of the Second Class, and (5) Magistrates of the Third Class.'" Then their Lordships say that a search made by a Magistrate is a proceeding conducted by him when "acting in the discharge of his judicial functions." I think that this dictum of their Lordships of the Privy Council must be held as overruling the opinion expressed in Criminal Revision Case No. 135 of 1903 [Sankaram Aiyar v. Sakkarappa Mudaliar (3)] that a Sub-Magistrate, to whom a report is made as such Magistrate and who grants sanction to prosecute, is not acting as a Court but as a public servant other than a Court.

* Page of 39 C.—Ed.

M.C.P.

*Petition allowed;
Case remitted.*

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 10 OF 1918.

June 27, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Thornhill.

Sheikh ABDUL SATTAR—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR ON THE APPLICATION OF ADALAT HOSSAIN—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195, 476—Order under s. 476 made without taking evidence, legality of—Jurisdiction—Court, power of, to order prosecution of person not party to proceedings—S. 476, scope of.

A Court, while proceeding under section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is required to arrive at findings upon some evidence before it. If there is no evidence on the record and the Court proceeds to order the prosecution of a person for forgery in relation to a proceeding before it, the discretion vested in the Court under the section is illegally exercised and the order is liable to be set aside. [p. 895, cols. 1 & 2.]

Section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code is a self-contained section and the reference to section 195 in that section is only made for the sake of brevity and refers not to the conditions enumerated in section 195 but merely to the offences enumerated in that section. [p. 895, col. 2.]

Section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code confers jurisdiction upon an executing Court to order the prosecution of a person for forgery, even though not a party to the execution proceedings, if the offence is brought to the notice of the Court in the course of the proceedings. [p. 895, col. 2.]

Revision against an order of the Munsif, Purneah, dated the 27th April 1918.

Mr. E. L. Dutt, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Manohar Lal, Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

MULLICK, J.—This application arises out of an order made by the Munsif of Purneah directing the prosecution of the petitioner for the offence of forgery. The facts appear to be these: A decree was obtained by Musammât Bachah Mayi against Adalat Hossain for a sum of money, and an execution petition was filed on the 30th July 1917, purporting to have been signed by the pen of Abdul Sattar. When notice was issued upon the judgment-debtor, he appeared and said that Bachah Mayi had died before the 30th July 1917 and that before her death he had paid off the judgment-debt to her. The Munsif thereupon dismissed the execution case, holding that it had been satisfied. Whether that dismissal was correct or not upon the evidence before him, is a matter with which we are not concerned at the present moment, but the judgment-debtor thereupon filed a petition before the Munsif stating that Abdul Sattar, the petitioner now before us, was the person who had forged the name of Bachah Mayi on the execution petition and praying that proceedings might be taken against Abdul Sattar under the criminal law.

ABDUL SATTAR v. EMPEROR.

Notice was issued upon the petitioner and he appeared and contended that he had had nothing whatsoever to do with the execution petition.

The Munsif thereupon without making any investigation directed the prosecution of the petitioner under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code.

Now it is clear that the Munsif had no materials before him. There is nothing whatever on the record to show that this petitioner had any connection with the execution petition or that he ever took any part in the execution of the decree. The learned Munsif states in his explanation that it is sufficient that he should be satisfied that there is a case against the petitioner and so long as he is satisfied he is competent to make an order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. That is doubtless true, but the law requires that the findings of the Court should be arrived at upon some evidence and if in this case there was no evidence, then the discretion vested in the Munsif has been illegally exercised. The learned Munsif is of opinion that the Pleader who filed the execution petition, if examined, is sure to prove the case against the petitioner. On what ground the Munsif has come to this conclusion is not disclosed and we cannot on mere surmise take for granted that the Pleader, if examined, will support the Munsif.

The proper order, therefore, for us to make is that the order directing the prosecution of the petitioner be set aside and the case be remanded to the learned Munsif for further enquiry.

A point has been raised by the learned Vakil for the petitioner that inasmuch as the alleged forgery in this case was committed by a person who was not a party to the execution proceedings, no prosecution can be directed under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, and that the person aggrieved should be left to take his remedy by ordinary complaint in the Criminal Court. Reliance is placed on In re Kallaru Ramalingam (1), but the ruling of this Court in Rajkumar Singh v. Emperor (2) settles this point so far as this Court is concerned. It was decided in that case that section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, is a self-contained section and that the reference to section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, in this section is only made for the sake of brevity and refers not to the conditions enumerated in section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, but merely to offences enumerated in that section. In my opinion section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, confers jurisdiction upon the Munsif to order the prosecution of the petitioner, even though not a party to the execution proceedings, if the offence of forgery is brought to the notice of the Munsif in the course of a judicial proceeding.

THORNHILL, J.—I agree.

Case remanded.

(1) 31 Ind. Cas. 653; 18 M. L. T. 498; 2 L. W. 1135; 16 Cr. L. J. 797; 40 M. 100.

(2) 37 Ind. Cas. 487; 18 Cr. L. J. 135; 3 P. L. W. 83; 1 P. L. J. 298.

BASHIR AHMED v. EMPEROR.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No 96.B OF 1918.

October 5, 1918.

Present :—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

BASHIR AHMED—ACCUSED—APPLICANT
versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 122, scope of—Entry, original, lawful—Breaking open lock of waggon without permission, whether renders entry unlawful.

Accused, a dawal, entered the Railway goods shed line to take delivery of a consignment on behalf of the consignee and without the permission of the goods clerk broke the seal of a waggon. It was found that dawals were allowed to enter the goods shed without express permission from a Railway servant:

Held, (1) that the accused could not be convicted under section 122 (1) of the Railways Act as the original entry being lawful, the subsequent unlawful act did not relate back and render the entry unlawful;

(2) that as the accused never refused to leave the Railway on being requested to do so, he could not be committed under sub-section (2) of section 122.

Sub-section (1) of section 122 of the Railways Act makes an unlawful entry punishable and sub-section (2) provides for cases where the original entry was lawful as well as unlawful.

Revision of the judgment and finding given by the Magistrate; 1st Class, Nagpur, on the 28th June 1918, in Criminal Case No. 43 of 1918.

Mr. M. T. Shareef, for the Applicant.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. K. Dick, Standing Counsel for the Crown.

ORDER.—The applicant has been convicted under section 122, sub-section (1) of the Indian Railways Act. The charge against him is that he unlawfully entered the goods shed line and without the permission of the goods clerk or the unloading foreman broke the seal of waggon number 563 containing 527 bundles of jaggery.

The accused is a dawal and came to take delivery of the consignment of jaggery on behalf of one Haji Yusuf Gani. It is in evidence that dawals are allowed to enter the goods shed without an express permission from a Railway servant. The Railway Sub-Inspector (P. W. No. 3) says that he advised the goods clerk and the accused that the accused should not enter the goods office without the permission of the Railway authorities. This, however, was not a prohibition but only advice and it is doubtful whether the witness had any authority to pass an order. On behalf of the prosecution the entry of the dawal is not complained of. It is the subsequent act of breaking the seal of the waggon which is urged as unlawful.

Section 122 runs thus :—

(1) "If a person unlawfully enters upon a Railway, he shall be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

(2) If a person so entering refuses to leave the Railway on being requested to do so by any Railway servant, or by any other person on behalf of the Railway administration, he shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and may be removed from the Railway by such servant or other person."

The case does not come under the second class, as the accused never refused to leave the Railway on being requested to do so. Now the original entry being lawful, it is difficult to hold that the subsequent unlawful act related back and rendered the entry unlawful. It seems to me that sub-section (1) makes an unlawful entry punishable and sub-section (2) provides for cases where the original entry was lawful as well as unlawful.

The argument that the applicant should be deemed to have entered with the intention of breaking the seal of the waggon is far-fetched and cannot be accepted, nor do I find that the Magistrate has come to any such finding. The result is that the order of the lower Court is set aside and the applicant is acquitted. The fine, if paid, is ordered to be refunded.

Order set aside.

ZEMINDAR OF KALAHASTI V. GANAPATHI IYER.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 68 OF 1913.

November 1, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim
and Mr. Justice Burn.Raja DAMARA KUMARA THIMMA NAYANI BAHADURGARU, ZEMINDAR OF KALAHASTI
AND TRUSTEE OF THE KALAHASTI TEMPLE—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

P. R. GANAPATHI IYER,
SECRETARY, DHARMAKSHANA
SABHA, AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
RESPONDENTS.

Trust, public—Trustee, hereditary, removal of—Misconduct of trustee—Inefficient management—Accounts, failure to keep—Mixing up trust moneys with private funds—Expenditure in excess of income, credit for, whether can be allowed—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 23 (c), applicability of, to public trusts.

The rule laid down in section 23 (c) of the Trusts Act, though applicable only to private trusts, may be adapted in the case of public trusts with such modifications as the circumstances of each case require [p. 898, col. 2.]

The duty of a trustee is to carry out the directions of the founder and not to encumber the trust property by systematically incurring expenditure beyond the limits of its income, nor can he claim credit for such expenditure. [p. 899, col. 1.]

Andrews v. McGuffog, (1886) 11 A. C. 313, explained.

If the continuance of a person who is a hereditary trustee and a descendant of the founder in the office is likely to endanger the interests of the institution, he is liable to be removed. It is not, however, every mistake or neglect of duty or inaccuracy of conduct that will induce a Court to remove a trustee. The acts or omissions must be such as to endanger the trust property or to show a want of honesty, or a want of proper capacity to execute the duties of the office or a want of reasonable fidelity. [p. 899, col. 2; p. 900, col. 1.]

One of the most important duties of a trustee is to keep separate and distinct accounts of the trust property and to keep the trust property separate from his own property. The omission to perform this duty will entail the removal of the trustee. [p. 900, col. 1.]

In order to justify the dismissal of a trustee it is not necessary to show that he has dishonestly misappropriated the trust funds. It is enough if he is a necessitous man who may not resist the temptation to misappropriate trust funds, or that his want of prudence in managing his own affairs does not warrant the hope that he would successfully manage an endowment [p. 900, col. 2.]

Where a trustee is found guilty of misappropriation, the proper course is to dismiss him and not to suspend him till he makes good the amounts misappropriated. [p. 901, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, North Arcot, dated the 9th December 1912, in Original Suit No. 19 of 1911.

JUDGMENT.—The suit in which the appeal arises was instituted under section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure against the defendant, the Raja of Kalahasti, who is the hereditary trustee of the Kalahasti temple and its endowed property. By a preliminary decree the Subordinate Judge who tried the suit ordered accounts to be taken from Faslis 1315—1320 and objections have been taken before us, in the first place, to a number of items in the accounts as finally settled by the Court of first instance. Then there is the important question whether the order suspending the defendant from the office of trustee until he pays certain debts due to the temple is right. The contention of the appellant, the defendant in the suit, is that the order of suspension ought to be set aside altogether, while the plaintiffs contend that the defendant should be removed from his office.

We shall first deal with the items of account to which objections have been taken on one side or the other. It is necessary to state that this temple was founded and endowed by the Raja of Kalahasti, and the properties which formed the endowment are mainly the village of Kalahasti, and half of two other villages. There are also certain Rasums and Merahs which are payable to the temple by the tenants of the Kalahasti Zemindary. Incorporated with the temple properties are the funds called Ubhayam funds, which have been endowed by various persons with the object that certain festivals may be held in their honour in the temple with the income of those funds. There are also the collections made in the temple and the offerings. The entire income may be taken to be about Rs. 10,000 or so a year.

The Zemindary of Kalahasti as well as the trust property in the suit were under the management of the Court of Wards from 1899 till August 1905 on the ground of incapacity of the defendant. It was then handed over to him apparently because the Court of Wards found it a hopeless task to clear the Zemindary from debts. Accounts have been taken from 1905 till 1910; when the Court of Wards made over the trust property to the Rajah, there was a sum of Rs. 37,000 due to the temple from the previous trustees, the predecessors of the defendant, and a sum of about Rs. 8,000 in the hands of the Court of Wards on account of Ubhayam. This Rs. 8,000 was handed to the defendant, but it appears that he used the amount for his own personal purposes and executed a mortgage on some of the Zemindary properties for that sum plus Rs. 37,000 which was already due to the trust. The mortgage is Exhibit C and it was executed on the 22nd August 1905. It may be mentioned at once that the Subordinate Judge has acquitted the defendant of all charges of dishonest misappropriation of the trust funds, and in fact those charges at the time of trial were not pressed before him. He has found, however, on taking accounts under various heads that altogether a sum of about Rs. 11,000 or thereabouts was due by the defendant to the temple. At the same time the Subordinate Judge found that the defendant spent something like Rs. 17,800 in performance of ceremonies and festivals in connection with the temple over and above the income of the temple property. He says, however, that the Raja was not entitled to have credit for this amount as against what has been found due from him. In dealing with the accounts an important fact to be borne in mind is that the defendant never kept any separate account of the trust property and the expenditure in connection with the temple except as to the offerings and Hundi collections. So far as the income of the landed property was concerned and especially of what was received by way of Rusums and Merahs, there was no separate account; what was receivable by the temple was mixed up with the Zemindar's private account. There is also the fact that the defendant did not produce all the books of account, such as they were, which would have shown what was the amount under certain heads to which the temple was entitled as distinguished from what was received by the Zemindar on his own personal account from the Zemindary. The learned Vakil for the appellant has emphasized the fact that, if the defendant did not keep any separate account, he was only following the practice of his predecessors and of the Court of Wards which had the management of the property for several years. But that is no excuse in law for the defendant not keeping the moneys belonging to the temple entirely separate from his own moneys and if any difficulties in taking accounts have arisen owing to this fact, every presumption is to be made against the defendant and in favour of the trust. I shall take the items in the order of the argument before us.

ZEMINDAR OF KALAHASTI V. GANAPATHI IYER.

The next objection relates to the interest on the Rs. 8,000 which was borrowed by defendant at the time he received charge of the trust property from the Court of Wards. Exhibit C provides for six per cent. interest with annual rests, and the contention is that it ought to be 9 per cent. compound interest at half-yearly rests or at least six per cent. with half-yearly rests. The question what is the proper interest to be charged against the defendant was in the discretion of the Subordinate Judge and we are not prepared to say that under the circumstances the defendant ought to have been charged a higher rate of interest than six per cent.

Our attention has been drawn to section 23 of the Trusts Act, clause (e). The section itself applies only to private trusts and a rule of that nature can only be adapted with such modifications as the circumstances of each case require. The respondent also urged that compound interest ought to have been allowed instead of simple interest upon the items dealt with in the judgment of the Subordinate Judge in paragraphs 40 and 41. We are not prepared to hold for reasons already stated that the Subordinate Judge's conclusion is wrong.

Then there is the question whether the defendant ought to be given credit for any amount which he has spent on religious worship and ceremonies over and above the income from the temple property. The Subordinate Judge has held that he is not entitled to any credit on this account, and we think he is right.

No authority has really been cited by the defendant for the proposition that a trustee of a public charity, who chooses year after year to spend moneys not required by the terms of the endowment out of his own pocket, should be allowed credit for such expenditure. If such a proposition were accepted, it would lie in the trustee's power to put an end to the endowment by extravagant expenditure. The duty of the trustee is to carry out the directions of the founder and not to encumber the trust property by systematically incurring expenditure beyond the limits of the income of the trust property. Reference was made to Andrews v. McGuffog (1), but we do not find that the case lays down any proposition to the contrary. As stated by Lord Watson, the money which the trustees there were said to have misapplied had been spent in executing, according to the specific directions of the testator, one of the main purposes of the trust and the only administrative error which they committed consisted in their having honestly mistaken the mode in which the testator's purpose was meant to be attained. It is contended by the learned Pleader for the appellant that there was, as a matter of fact, a surplus left after meeting the expenditure of the Ubhayams and the defendant was justified in spending that surplus for the benefit of the temple. But such a case was never sought to be made and what is found is that the defendant spent about Rs. 17,000 in excess of the income of the temple during the six years that the accounts have been taken, and not that he utilised the surplus of one particular fund for the benefit of the other fund. Further, as it is pointed out on behalf of the respondent, these Ubhayams are special funds which have nothing whatever to do with the ordinary worship in the temple and the expenditure of the income of those funds must be regulated according to the direction of the respective founders of those funds.

ZEMINDAR OF KALAHASTI v. GANAPATHIYER.

The only objection to the scheme of management framed by the Subordinate Judge, which has been taken before us, relates to the question whether, having regard to the facts disclosed, the defendant should be retained at all in the office of trustee and, if so, whether the order suspending the defendant from trusteeship until payment of the amounts due under Exhibit C and what he is found liable for in this case should be upheld or what modification should be made in this connection in the scheme of management.

(1) (1886) 11 A. C. 313.

The amount due under Exhibit C is Rs. 45,000, which is charged upon some of the Zemindary properties belonging to the defendant, and under the decree he is liable for a sum of nearly Rs. 12,000. Having regard to the fact that the defendant's Zemindary is heavily encumbered and his financial affairs are extremely embarrassed, it is open to grave doubt, whether the condition attached by the decree to resumption by the defendant of the duties of Dharmakartha will ever be satisfied. The direction of the Subordinate Judge, therefore, practically amounts to removal of the defendant from the office of trustee, but it cannot be satisfactory in the interests of the trust that there should be no trustee for an indefinite time.

It is argued on behalf of the appellant that the order of suspension is wrong and the provision made for the appointment of a treasurer and for a proper system of accounting will be sufficient to protect the interests of the institution. No doubt these provisions provide some check on the action of the Dharmakartha, but the Dharmakartha has still certain important powers, for instance, the collections are all to be made by him and so also the expenditure, although expenses are to be regulated by a budget prepared at the beginning of every Fasli year. It is argued on the other hand on behalf of the plaintiffs that the defendant has shown want of capacity in managing the institution and its properties. Besides, he owes a large sum of money to the trust and having regard to the facts which have been proved in the case, it will be entirely detrimental to the interests of the trust to permit the defendant to continue as Dharmakartha.

Much stress was laid on behalf of the appellant on the fact that the temple was founded and endowed by his own ancestors and that he is the hereditary trustee according to the terms of the dedication. He is not, however, entitled to any pecuniary benefit from the trust and the law is well established, and this was conceded before us, that if the continuance of a person who is a hereditary trustee and a descendant of the founder in the office is likely to endanger the interests of the institution, he is liable to be removed, Vide

ZEMINDAR OF KALAHASTI v. GANAPATHI IYER.

Fakurudin Sahib v. Acken Sahib (2) and also Anantanarayana Ayyar v. Kuttalam Pillai (3), and in Ohintaman Bajaji Dev v. Dhondo Ganesh Dev (4) the trustee was removed mainly on the ground that he did not keep proper accounts and in Anantanarayana Ayyar v. Kuttalam Pillai (3) the trustee was removed because he systematically failed to submit accounts to the committee of management. The grounds which justify a Court in removing trustees are well expressed in Storey's Equity Jurisprudence, section 1289, adopted by the Privy Council in Letterstedt v. Broers (5). That was a case of a private trust but the principle enunciated there is applicable a fortiori to trustees of public trusts: "But in cases of positive misconduct, Courts of Equity have no difficulty in interposing to remove trustees who have abused their trust. It is not, indeed, every mistake or neglect of duty or inaccuracy of conduct of trustees, which will induce Courts of Equity to adopt such a course. But the acts or omissions must be such as to endanger the trust property or to show a want of honesty or a want of a proper capacity to execute the duties or a want of reasonable fidelity."

There can be no doubt whatever that the defendant's conduct shows a want of capacity to manage the trust properties. He does not appear to have realised the elementary duties of a trustee. He started upon his office by appropriating to his own use a sum of Rs. 8,000 belonging to the trust funds, and no portion of that money has yet been restored. The fact that the previous Rajahs acted in a similar way which resulted in their owing to the institution a sum of Rs. 37,000 does not justify the conduct of the defendant. It only shows that the duties and responsibilities of a trustee were not understood even by his predecessors in office. One of the most important duties of a trustee is to keep separate accounts and to keep the trust property separate from his own property. Here also the Raja failed in his duty throughout. Then his management of the trust properties cannot be said to have been at all efficient. A sum of nearly Rs. 12,000 is payable by him to the trust on this account. The defendant's own affairs are in a practically insolvent condition. Almost the greater portion of the ancient and valuable Zemindari of Kalahasti is now in the hands of creditors. To what extent this result has been contributed by the defendant himself has not been investigated in this case, nor was it necessary to do so. Our duty is to look entirely to the interests of the trust and we feel convinced that, in the circumstances, it will not be for the benefit of the institution to allow it to remain under the management of the defendant. He admits in his own evidence that he himself never looked into the accounts or the correspondence and was content to leave everything to his Dewan. And that is exactly what one would have inferred from the history of the trust. In the present impecunious condition of the appellant who still must have considerable position and influence in the locality, it would not be fair either to himself or to the institution that he should continue to hold the office of trustee. The appellant has not been found guilty of any dishonest misappropriation and without suggesting any reflection on his honesty we think that the observation of Jessel, Master of Rolls, in Barker's Trusts, In re (6), affords a proper guidance to the Court in cases of this character: "A necessitous man is more likely to be tempted to misappropriate trust funds than one who is wealthy and besides a man who has not shown prudence in managing his own affairs is not likely to be successful in managing those of other people." We have also carefully considered whether it would not have been sufficient to safeguard the interests of the temple if we appointed a board of control to exercise proper check and supervision over the management or if a co-trustee was appointed to work conjointly with the appellant. But we have come to the conclusion that any such provision would not tend to the smooth working of the institution.

(2) 2 M. 197; 4 Ind. Jur. 280; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 409.

(3) 22 M. 481; 9 M. L. J. 203; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 345.

(4) 15 B. 612; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 413.

(5) (1884) 9 A. C. 371; 53 L. J. P. C. 44; 51 L. T. 169.

(6) (1875) 1 Ch. D. 43; 45 L. J. Ch. 52; 24 W. R. 204.

DAMADAJI v. MARTAND.

In the result the appeal will be dismissed and the memorandum of objections allowed to this extent, that the decree of the lower Court will be modified by directing that the defendant be removed from the office of Dharmakarthi of the Kalahasti temple and its endowed properties. It will also be declared that the Subba Naidu Tope belongs to the temple and in addition to the amount decreed by the Subordinate Judge the defendant is liable to the temple for Rs. 156-11-0, which is the difference between the profits of the Subba Naidu Tope not accounted for by the defendant and the amount wrongly charged against him on account of straw. The lower Court will be directed to appoint a fit and proper person as trustee in place of the defendant. The appellant will bear the costs of this appeal. Each party will bear his own costs of the memorandum of objections. The costs of the respondents will come out of the trust estate.

M. C. P.

*Appeal dismissed;
Memo. of objections partly allowed.*

ACHHAIBAR SINGH v. JANG BAHADUR SINGH.

JUDGMENT.—I am unable to see any sign of life in this appeal. There is a clear finding of fact that prior to the issue of the second Sanad in the names of both appellant and Chimnaji, a previous Sanad had been granted more than a quarter of a century previously in favour of Chimnaji only, who was separate from his brother Punjaji, the father of appellant. Chimnaji mortgaged this severalty and had lost it by foreclosure absolute before the second Sanad was obtained, whether owing to fraud or error, because it is manifest that where a transferable grant in perpetuity has been made in favour of one person who has transferred the same to a third person, no subsequent Sanad in favour of the transferor or any other person can be legally issued so as to constitute a fresh grant, unless the transfer can be avoided. Moreover, plaintiff's case is not one of fresh but of an original joint grant and as to this the finding of fact is against him. An 1899 Sanad in favour of two persons is no evidence that an 1872 Sanad in favour of one person was intended for two. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 715 OF 1909.
March 17, 1910.

Present:—Mr. Stanyon, A. J. C.

DAMADAJI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MARTAND AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Grant in perpetuity, transferable—Transfer of grant—Issue of fresh sanad after transfer, legality of.

Where a transferable grant in perpetuity has been made in favour of one person who has transferred the same to a third person, no subsequent sanad in favour of the transferor or any other person can legally be issued so as to constitute a fresh grant, unless the transfer can be avoided.

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the Additional District Judge, East Berar, dated the 4th August 1903.

Mr. M. R. Dixit, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. Mitra, for the Respondents.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 28 OF 1918.
August 14, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

ACHHAIBAR SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JANG BAHADUR SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Father, separate property of, nature of, when passing to sons—Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), s. 2—Oudh Estates (Amendment) Act (III of 1910), ss. 2, 21—Grantee, original, dead before passing of Oudh Estates Act—Heirs of grantee and their descendants, succession of, before passing of Oudh Estates (Amendment) Act—Law governing grant.

Under the Hindu Law when the separate property of a father descends on his death to his sons, it becomes their joint ancestral property. [p. 902, col. 2.]

Where an original grantee died before the passing of the Oudh Estates Act and his estate passed to his brother as his heir and after the latter's death, to the latter's sons before the passing of the Oudh Estates (Amendment) Act:

ACHHAJIBAR SINGH V. JANG BAHADUR SINGH.

Held, that the estate in the hands of the original grantee's nephew and their descendants was governed by the rules of their ordinary personal law. [p. 903, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the District Judge, Rae Bareilly, dated the 20th April 1918, reversing the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Partabgarh, dated the 31st January 1918.

Babu Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a defendants' appeal against an order of remand made by the lower Appellate Court.

The suit was brought by three plaintiffs, the sons of Sheo Balak Singh, for the purpose of setting aside an alienation of a share in certain property made by their father Sheo Balak Singh on the 30th of May 1906. This alienation was made in favour of the defendants Nos. 1 to 4 or their predecessors-in-title. The case for the plaintiffs was that at the time the alienation was made they and their father constituted a joint Hindu family, that their father had no authority to sell the property and that there was no legal necessity for the sale.

The principal defence was that the property in question was not joint ancestral property and that the plaintiffs had no right to maintain the suit. Various other pleas relating to legal necessity and the like were raised.

The Court of first instance on its construction of the Oudh Estates Act (Act I of 1869) held that Sheo Balak Singh was the sole owner of this property and the plaintiffs (his sons) had no interest in it at the time the sale was made. The suit was accordingly dismissed.

In appeal the learned District Judge has held that the law as laid down in Act I of 1869 did not apply as regards succession to the property. The judgment of the first Court was reversed and the suit was remanded for disposal on the merits.

It is admitted that the property in dispute formed a portion of a grant which was made to one Sheo Lal after the annexation of Oudh. Sheo Lal's name was entered in List VI prepared under section 8 of Act I of 1869, although it is admitted that he died long before the Act was passed. There seems to be no doubt that Sheo Lal died without issue in the year 1860 and that the property then came into possession of his brother Jai Dayal. Jai Dayal also seems to have died very soon after he succeeded, for we have it that in the khewat which was prepared at the first Regular Settlement of 1862, this property was recorded in the names of Jai Dayal's three sons, one of whom was Parmeshar. There is no evidence on the record to show when Parmeshar died, but at any rate it is clear that he must have died before the year 1906 when the alienation now in question was made. Sheo Balak Singh, the man who sold the property, is the son of Parmeshar and the three plaintiffs are Sheo Balak's sons and, therefore, Parmeshar's grandsons.

The learned Judge was of opinion that the provisions of Act I of 1869 relating to succession did not apply in this case because Sheo Lal, the original grantee, died before the passing of the Act. It is quite clear that Jai Dayal who succeeded his brother Sheo Lal was not an heir within the meaning of that expression as defined in Act I of 1869, for according to that definition "heir" means "a person who inherits property, otherwise than as a widow, under the special provisions of this Act." Jai Dayal, therefore, could not have inherited the property under the provisions of the Act; and if this be so it must, I think, be taken that it came to his hands as property governed by the ordinary Hindu Law. So far as Jai Dayal is concerned he took the property as his separate property, but on his death it descended to his three sons of whom one was Parmeshar, and so it appears to me, that in the hands of Parmeshar this property became joint ancestral property under the Hindu Law.

The argument for the appellants is that the learned Judge did not take into consideration the fact that the definition of the term "heir" as used in Act I of 1869 has been altered by the Amending Act which was passed in the year

RIPON PRESS AND SUGAR MILL COMPANY, LIMITED v. NAMA VENKATARAMA CHETTY.

1910. Under section 2 of this latter Act "heir" now means "a person who has inherited or inherits, otherwise than as a widow or mother, an estate or a portion of an estate whether before or after the commencement of this Act." Further by the provisions of section 21 of the Amending Act this definition operates retrospectively, and so the contention is that although before the passing of the Amending Act neither Jai Dayal, Parmeshar or Sheo Balak could have been heirs according to the original definition, they nevertheless must now be deemed to have taken as heirs by virtue of the provisions of the new Act. Consequently the argument is that Sheo Balak took this property as an "heir" within the meaning of the Act and, therefore, under section 11 of the Act he had full power to dispose of it as he pleased.

On the other hand the learned Counsel for the respondents points out that although by the terms of section 21 of the Amending Act retrospective effect is given to the definition of "heir", it is nevertheless provided in the saving clause that no rights already vested are to be affected by the alteration made in the definition; and so it is argued that inasmuch as the property had become joint ancestral property before the new Act was passed, Sheo Balak's three sons (the plaintiffs in the present case) had acquired a vested interest in the property by reason of their birth and that this interest cannot be divested or affected in any way by reason of the alteration made in the definition of the term "heir."

I think this argument on behalf of the respondents is correct and must be accepted, and on this ground I hold that the judgment of the Court below must be affirmed. In the circumstances the sons were entitled to set up the case that the property was joint ancestral family property and that their father was not competent to alienate it without some justifying necessity. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL No. 371 of 1917.

July 29, 1918.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

RIPON PRESS AND SUGAR MILL COMPANY, LIMITED, BELLARY, BY ITS CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, MR. VENKATA RAO—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

NAMA VENKATARAMA CHETTY—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 116—Suit by share-holder for recovery of dividend against registered company, period of limitation for—'Registered,' meaning of—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (45).

A suit by a share-holder for the recovery of dividend against a registered company is governed by Article 116 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act, [p. 904, col. 2.]

The word 'registered' in Article 116 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act must be read as defined in section 3, clause (45), of the General Clauses Act, and the term 'registered' in the latter Act includes documents registered under any special law such as the Companies Act or the Copyright Act as well as registration under the Registration Act. [p. 904, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Court, Bellary, in Original Suit No. 12 of 1917.

Mr. C. Sambasiva Row, for the Appellant;

Mr. H. Bala Krishna Row, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal raised an interesting question on the law of limitation as to which, so far as we are aware, there is as yet no authority in India, namely, as to the period of limitation for a suit by a share-holder against a registered company to recover dividends. In England, it is well settled that a dividend is a speciality debt for which a period of 20 years is allowed by 3 & 4 William 4, Ch. 42, section 3. This was first pointed out by Lord Justice Christian in Smith v. Cork & Brandon Railway Co. (1), which has been followed in later cases and in England in Artisans' Land & Mortgage Corporation, In re (2).

In India, we have to look to the provisions of our Limitation Act. The right to receive a dividend which has been duly declared is one of the rights of every share-holder by virtue of the contract which he is deemed to have entered into with all the members of the Company under section 39 of the Indian Companies Act, 1882. The terms of that contract are to be found in the memorandum of association and in the special articles of association, if any, and if there are no special articles of association and in so far as they are not inconsistent with them, then in table A which is appended to the Act. Prima facie, the provisions of Articles 72 to 76 in table A, which deal with the declaration and payment of dividends, are applicable and form the contract under which the dividends are payable. Now, the memorandum of association is required by law to be registered, and the articles in table A, in so far as they are applicable, are by section 38 of the Companies Act to be deemed to be the regulations of the Company, in the same manner and to the same extent as if they had been inserted in the articles of association, so that by virtue of section 38 the debt here must be deemed to have arisen from a memorandum and articles of association duly registered under the Companies Act.

(1) (1870) Ir. Rep. 5 Eq. 65.

(2) (1904) 1 Ch. D. 796; 73 L. J. Ch. 581; 52 W. R. 330; 12 Manson 98.

RAJA UDRAM v. KHANBEG AMIRBEG.

Now, Article 115 of the Limitation Act is 'for compensation for the breach of any contract, express or implied, not in writing registered and not herein specially provided for.' There is no special article for the recovery of dividends, and, therefore, Article 115 will apply, unless Article 116 is applicable. Article 116 is 'for compensation for the breach of a contract in writing registered,' and it is now settled that that means for breach of any contract in writing registered. 'Registered' in the Limitation Act must be read as defined in the General Clauses Act of 1897. Section 3, clause 45, of that Act says, 'registered' used with reference to a document, shall mean "registered in British India under the law for the time being in force for the registration of documents." It has been contended for the appellant that the law for the time being in force for the registration of documents must mean the Indian Registration Act for the time being. That, however, appears to us to be unduly restricting the meaning of that clause. The Companies Act provides for the registration of the memorandum and the articles of association, which are documents, and there may be other Statutes such as the Copyright Acts, which provides for the registration of other documents. There is, we think, no reason why the term 'registered' within the meaning of the General Clauses Act should not include documents registered under any special law of that kind as well as registration under the Indian Registration Act. We are, therefore, of opinion that the present suit is for compensation for the breach of a contract in writing registered and that the period of limitation, therefore, under Article 116 is six years and the suit is not barred. The other contentions of the appellant also fail.

In the result, the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

M. C. P.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 308-B OF 1917.

June 24, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

RAJA UDRAM alias DEVIDAS—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KHANBEG AMIRBEG—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Notice, registered, sent through post—Refusal, proof of.
Where a defendant denies the receipt of notice alleged to have been sent to him through registered post, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to call the post-peon to prove that the registered post-card was tendered to and was refused by the defendant. [p. 905, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Second Additional District Judge, Akola, in Civil Appeal No. 10 of 1917, dated the 14th May 1917.

Mr. M. V. Joshi, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. V. Kakde, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal and Second Appeal No. 310-B of 1917 have been disposed by the lower Appellate Court in one judgment, and this judgment will, therefore, govern the disposal of both the second appeals.

POYYALI NAICKER v. SUBBA NAICKER.

The plaintiff sues for ejectment of the defendants on the allegation that their tenancy has been determined by a notice to quit under section 79, Berar Land Revenue Code. The suit has been dismissed on the ground that service of the notice has not been sufficiently proved. The defendants denied having refused the notice sent by the plaintiff by registered post. There is an endorsement of refusal on the back of the registered post-card. The dak-peon has not been called as a witness. The address of the addressee given on the post-card is vague. The lower Court has held that as the defendants deny the notice it was incumbent upon the plaintiffs to call the post-peon to prove that the registered post-card was tendered and refused by the defendants. This view is supported by the judgment in Gobinda Chandra Saha v. Dwarka Nath Patita (1). On this finding the suit has been rightly dismissed and I can see no error of law in this finding.

The lower Appellate Court has also held that the plaintiff has failed to prove his title by proper evidence. It is, however, unnecessary to examine the correctness of this finding. The decree of the lower Appellate Court is confirmed and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 26 Ind. Cas. 962; 19 C. W. N. 489; 20 C. L. J. 455.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 413 OF 1917.

April 24, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

POYYALI NAICKER—DEFENDANT—
PETITIONER

versus

SUBBA NAICKER—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata between co-defendants—Conflict of interests inter se, absence of, effect of—Implied adjudication, whether res judicata.

Actual adjudication on an issue in a suit is not necessary to constitute the decision res judicata in a subsequent suit. If the decision come to in the earlier suit impliedly decides the point which is in issue in a subsequent suit, it would be res judicata. [p. 906, col. 1.]

Fakirchand Lallubhai v. Naginchand Kalidas, 33 Ind. Cas. 423; 40 B. 210; 17 Bom. L. R. 1106 and Sankaramahalisingam Chetty v. Muthulakshmi, 43 Ind. Cas. 860; 33 M. L. J. 740, followed.

Where the parties to a suit were co-defendants in an earlier suit and there was nothing to show that there was a conflict of interests inter se between them, the decision in the earlier suit will not operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. [p. 906, col. 2.]

Kandiyl Cheriya Chandu v. Zamorin of Calicut, 29 M. 515 and Nallappa v. Vridhachala, 25 Ind. Cas. 898; 37 M. 270, distinguished.

Petition, under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the judgment, dated the 11th December 1916, of the Court of the District Munsif, Tuticorin, in Small Cause Suit No. 969 of 1916.

Mr. K. Raja Aiyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. O. Krishnamachariar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The suit is brought by the Karaswan against the defendant whom he alleges to be a subscriber to the chit. The defendant denied he was a subscriber. The District Munsif came to the conclusion that the defendant's plea is barred by res judicata by virtue of the decision in Small Cause Suit No. 1400 of 1915 on the file of the District Munsif's Court, Tuticorin. In that suit, a third party who claimed to be a subscriber to the chit fund brought a suit against the present plaintiff and the defendant, who were arrayed as 1st and 2nd defendants respectively, for recovering the amount of the subscription which he had paid. The 1st defendant pleaded that he had asked the 2nd defendant who was also a subscriber to pay the amount and, consequently, he was not liable. The 2nd defendant pleaded that he was not a subscriber at all and that he never undertook to pay the plaintiff. After the pleas were recorded, the plaintiff in the previous suit exonerated the 1st defendant and was content to take a decree against the 2nd defendant alone. The District Munsif states in his judgment in that case: "I find that no reason has been shown why the plaintiff should institute a false suit against the 2nd defendant. If the 2nd defendant and 1st defendant were on bad terms, there is no reason whatsoever why plaintiff iff should lend himself to the designs of the 1st defendant." The judgment does not decide any rights inter se between the 1st and 2nd defendants. There is nothing in the pleadings to which I have been referred which in terms say that the liability undertaken by the 2nd defendant was as a subscriber. It may be a case of novatio. The plaintiff to whom money was due from the 1st defendant might have agreed to take it from the 2nd defendant and to give up his claim against the 1st defendant. The records of the suit are not inconsistent with the view that the 1st defendant was exonerated because there was a new agreement with the 2nd defendant, who undertook the liability which the 1st defendant was under. The conclusion in the previous suit does not necessarily entail the finding that the 2nd defendant was a subscriber. Therefore, in my opinion, the present plea is not barred by res judicata on the face of the pleadings and of the judgment in the former suit.

POYYALI NAICKER v. SUBBA NAICKER.

I do not agree with the contention of the petitioner's Vakil that there must be an actual adjudication. If the decision come to impliedly decides the point which is now in issue, it would be res judicata. That was recognised even in Bombay. See Fakirchand Lallubhai v. Naginchand Kalidas (1). In this Court a Bench, to which I was a party, has held that all findings which are necessary for giving the ultimate decision will be res judicata. Sankaramahalingam Chetty v. Muthulakshmi (2). But the real difficulty as regards the judgment of the District Munsif arises from the facts that not only was the claim against the 1st defendant withdrawn but that there was no adjudication regarding the right of the 1st and 2nd defendants inter se. In Ramchandra Narayan v. Narayan Mahadev (3) West, J., stated the law thus:—"But for this effect to arise, there must be a conflict of interest amongst the defendants and a judgment defining the real rights and obligations of the defendants inter se." Following the decision, the Madras High Court in Narasimha Ammal v. Srinivasa Bagava (4) say: "The necessity for an active controversy between the co-defendants is uniformly recognised." Applying the principle enunciated by these two decisions, it seems to me that the conclusion come to in the previous case cannot be regarded as res judicata because there has been no adjudication regarding the rights of the defendants inter se. The learned Vakil for the respondents drew my attention to the decision in Kandiyil Cheriya Chandu v. Zamorin of Calicut (5). In that case the learned Judges specifically put the plea of res judicata on the ground of active contest. This is what Benson and Bhashyam Aiyangar, JJ., say in that case: "The then 5th defendant not only supported the then plaintiff but took an active part in the controversy and was represented by a Vakil in all stages of the suit, both in the Courts below and in the High Court." They further say that an adjudication is absolutely necessary to decide the rights of the two defendants inter se. That case does not help the respondent. The decision in Nallappa v. Vridhachala (6) proceeds upon the principle of equitable estoppel, which has no bearing on the present case.

For these reasons I am of opinion that the previous decision does not operate as res judicata in the present case and that there must be an enquiry into the facts of the case. I reverse the decision of the District Munsif and remand the suit to him for disposal on the merits. Costs to abide the result.

M. C. P.

Decree reversed; Case remanded.

(4) 5 Ind. Cas. 760; 33 M. 112 at p. 114; 7 M. L. T. 89.

(5) 29 M. 515.

(6) 25 Ind. Cas. 888; 37 M. 270.

(1) 33 Ind. Cas. 423; 40 B. 210; 17 Bom. L. R. 1106.

(2) 43 Ind. Cas. 860; 33 M. L. J. 740.

(3) 11 B. 216 at p. 220, 11 Ind. J. 1; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 142.

LOBHAJI V. NARAYAN.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 182 OF 1918.

November 6, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C.

LOBHAJI—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus—

NARAYAN—PLAINTIFF—NON-APPLICANT.

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25—Revision—Different view of evidence, whether ground for interference.

The fact that the Revisional Court might take a different view of the evidence from that taken by the Court of Small Causes is not a justifiable ground for interference in revision under section 25 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act.

Revision of the judgment of the Small Cause Court, Nagpur, passed in Civil Suit No. 1242 of 1917, dated the 25th March of 1918.

Mr. G. L. Subhedar, for the Applicant.

Mr. A. C. Roy, for the Non-Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—It is merely a question of weight of evidence. It is impossible to consider that it has not all been considered. It is quite possible, I might have taken a different view of the evidence, if I had been the Small Cause Court Judge, but this does not justify interference in revision. The application is dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

July 2, 1918.

Present:—Lord Sumner, Sir John Edge, Mr. Ameer Ali and Sir W. Phillimore, Bart.

Raja JAGAVEERA RAMA VENKA-

TESVARA ETTAPPA MAHARAJA

IYEN AVERGAL, SINCE DECEASED

—APPELLANT

versus—

ALAWARASA ASARI AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII Mad. of 1865), s. 11—Land law of Madras—Rent, rates of—Custom—Contract, whether paramount to status and usage—Contract implied from payment and acceptance of rent—Consideration for promise to pay enhanced rent, whether necessary.

Under section 11 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act of 1865 the rent payable by a tenant to his landlord is determined primarily by contract, which may be either express or implied. Failing such contract, resort is had, when no settlement has taken place, to local usage; but if such usage establishes a proper rent, then either party, if dissatisfied with it, may require resort to the Warum customary in the village for division of the crop. Failing proof of such customary Warum, it is the Collector's duty to fix the rent. All these methods, however, are only applicable in cases where no contract is proved. [p. 509, col. 2.]

JAGAVEERA RAMA V. ALAWARASA ASARI.

The expression "implied contract" in the section is an English term of art, and must be so construed. It involves the legal incident of some consideration moving from the landlord, as that incident is understood in English Law. [p. 509, col. 2.]

A number of ryots had for years paid rent at the rate of 4 fanams, which was the prevalent rate for dry lands. At various dates, having dug wells at their own expense, they took up garden cultivation, and were thereafter charged, and for several years paid, rent at the rate of 8 fanams prevailing for wet lands. For Fasli 1912, however, they refused to accept Pattahs at that rate. It was found, in view of the long continuance of payments at the 8-fanam rate, that there was an implied contract to go on paying that rate, but that there was no consideration for the new promise, the land being already held on a contract to pay 4 fanams:

Held, that the implied contract was not legally enforceable, and that the ryots were entitled to Pattahs at the old rate. [p. 513, col. 1.]

Consolidated appeals from several decrees of the Madras High Court, dated the 21st September 1910, reported as 8 Ind. Cas. 330, reversing the decrees of the District Judge, Madura, and restoring those of the Sub-Collector, Dindigul.

FACTS of the case will appear from their Lordships' judgment and from the report of the earlier proceedings in Armugam Ohetty v. Jagaveera Rama (1).

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C. (with him Mr. Dube), for the Appellant, submitted that the rents were fixed on the kind of crop raised: 8 fanams was the landlord's share of the crop raised. The practice, before cash rents were fixed, was for the Zemindar to take a share of the produce. According to the local usage rent is payable, not according to whether the land is Punja (dry) or Nanja (wet), but according to the crop raised. If there is no contract, the Court will under section 11 of the Madras Act VIII of 1865 fix the rent according to the local usage, but if not satisfied with that, we can resort to the Warum or division in kind.

(1) 8 Ind. Cas. 330; 35 M. 134; 9 M. L. T. 76; (1910) M. W. N. 679.

JAGAVEERA RAMA v. ALAWARASA ASARI.

The invariable practice in India from time immemorial was for the Zemindar to have a share of the produce. Fifth Report of 1912, Madras part, page 8. When a money rent was fixed, it was fixed with reference to the crop produced. It does not matter to us when the wells were dug, and the nature of the crop changed; we are not enhancing the rent, we have all along been entitled to that rent on that crop. It has never been found that there was any contract that the ryots should pay 4 fanams for garden lands. They have raised a more valuable crop, and so we get a higher rent.

The answer to the argument as to want of consideration is that there never was a contract to pay 4 fanams irrespective of the crop, the rate was not permanently fixed at 4 fanams; when the garden crop was raised the Zemindar asked the tenant to pay 8, and the tenant agreed.

The contract to pay that 8 fanams was at first express and is now implied, it is implied from the fact that for years the ryots have in fact paid 8 fanams.

The Madras Rent Recovery Act does not prohibit contracts which give the landlord a share in the benefit of the tenant's improvements. Natesa Gramani v. Venkatarama Reddi (2), where at page 516 this very case is referred to.

When the Warum is commuted into a money rent, an agreement to pay an increased rent for a particular cultivation is not illegal, nor is a custom to pay such an increased rent. Suppa Pillai v. Thumbichi Naicker (3). In the absence of contract the rent is settled every year for that year only: from the fact that the tenants for many years paid 4 fanams there is not to be implied a contract that they were to go on paying only 4 fanams. Parthasarathi Appa Row v. Chevantra Venkata Narasayya (4).

Mr. Dube followed. The custom to pay a minimum of 8 fanams for garden cultivation has been abundantly proved. Some of these tenants have been paying that rate for 40 years.

Mr. J. M. Parikh, for the Respondents, referred to Wilson's Glossary, page 154. "Faisal Tirwai" is there explained as "the rates settled on each field at the time of the original survey assessment (Madras)." As defendant-appellant's written statement admits, the Faisal rates were fixed in Fasli 1210=1803, when the original survey and assessment were made, vide also the Fifth Report and Venkatagopal v. Rangappa (5). The point is that the assessment was according to the land, not according to the crop grown.

The policy of Government, as set out in Regulation XXX of 1802 (repealed by Madras Act VIII of 1865), was to give the tenants fixity of tenure at a permanent rate of rent.

[SIR W. PHILLIMORE.—I don't understand that what was dry land then was always to be assessed as dry land.]

The assessment was on particular pieces of land, it was made with the tenants on the same lines as the Permanent Settlement with the Zemindars.

The documents, Pattahs and Muchalikas, filed in the case lend no support to the appellant's argument: they show that the same crop might be grown on Punja (dry) land and on garden land.

The appellant now relies upon a custom of enhancement and alternatively, upon an implied agreement to pay an enhanced rate. This was not his case in the lower Courts. Those Courts have assumed that the 4 fanams rate is the permanent rate, and that the burden of proving variation is on the Zemindar. The only evidence of such variation is that the tenants have in fact paid the enhanced rate without protest for periods varying from 2 to 40 years. To have a contract there must be mutual consent; and the tenants must know their rights. The so-called implied contract is a mere inference of law from certain facts found.

[SIR JOHN EDGE.—Surely it is an inference of fact?]

It may be presumptive evidence, but it is rebuttable; it could be rebutted for instance by proving mistake on the part

(2) 30 M. 510; 17 M. L. J. 518; 2 M. L. T. 455.

(3) 31 M. 19; 17 M. L. J. 511; 3 M. L. T. 103.

(4) 6 Ind. Cas. 988; 37 I. A. 110; 33 M. 177; 14 C. W. N. 938; 20 M. L. J. 596; 8 M. L. T. 141; 12 C. L. J. 233; (1910) M. W. N. 466; 12 Bom. L. R. 648 (P. C.).

(5) 7 M. 365 at p. 369; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 835.

JAGAVEERA RAMA V. ALAWARASA ASARI.

of the tenant. The High Court say there is very meagre evidence to support the District Judge's finding of an implied contract, I say there is none. Secondly, I say that even if there is such a contract, it is not enforceable for want of consideration.

The three cases cited against us are all distinguishable. In Parthasarathi Appa Row v. Chevandra Venkata Narasayya (4) the rent was not fixed permanently. In Natesa Gramani v. Venkatarama Reddi (2) the land was unassessed land and no question of consideration was raised, nor was there any question of cancelling the contract on the ground of mistake: there was no mistake. In Suppa Pillai v. Thambichi Naicker (3) there is a special finding of fact that there was an express contract, when the Warum was commuted, to pay a special rate for betel cultivation.

There is no such thing in Madras as tenancy from year to year; the ryots are permanent, irrespective of the Pattahs they may give from time to time.

To sum up, the land here is permanently assessed land; the burden of proving a variation is on the Zemindar, and there is no proof of such consent as an implied contract requires.

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C., in reply.—As to mistake section 21 of the Indian Contract Act provides that a contract is not voidable for a mistake of law.

The District Judge was justified in finding that there was an implied contract to pay the higher rate in future years; and if that finding is one of fact, it is binding.

JUDGMENT.

LORD SUMNER.—This was a consolidated appeal in suits brought by a number of ryots in the Zemin of Gandamanaickanoor against their landlord, the Zemindar of Ettiyapuram, in the district of Tinnevely. He had tendered Pattahs for Fasli 1312, at 8 fanams per guli, at which rate they had paid rent for several years. These the ryots rejected, claiming that the proper rate was 4 fanams only; and brought these suits under section 8 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865) to obtain such Pattahs as they said they were entitled to receive.

The Act of 1865, though since repealed by the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), was the Act then in force, and in suits "involving disputes regarding rates of rent," section 11 provides that "all contracts for rent, express or implied, shall be enforced." Though this Statute does not define "rent," section 3, which makes the delivery of Pattahs and Muchalikas mutually obligatory, requires that they shall state "the amount and nature of the rent," according as "it is payable in money or in kind or by a share in the produce." Regulation XXX of 1802, which had provided for such written records, and for fixing rents by the rates in the Government assessment, was generally silent as to rents fixed by contract between the parties. Venkatagopal v. Rangappa (5) explains the circumstances under which, between 1802 and 1865, it had become necessary to give effect to contracts and not merely to status and usage, and more particularly to such contracts as are implied from bare payment and acceptance of rent at a particular rate or measured in a particular way. Whether the framers of the Act fully appreciated its effect or not, the expression "implied contract" is an English term of art, and must be so construed. It involves the legal incident of some consideration moving from the landlord, as that incident is understood in English Law. Accordingly the scheme of the section was as follows: If a contract, express or implied, and legally enforceable, was once established, the issue was determined, and the proper Pattah was one giving effect to that contract. If, on the other hand, no such contract could be established, then, since in the words of the District Judge on the second hearing in his Court, "it is not pretended that this Zemindari was surveyed by Government before the 1st January 1859," local usage could be proved. If such usage established a proper rent, then either party, if dissatisfied with it, could require resort to the Warum customary in the village for the division of the crop between landlord and tenant (of which no evidence was given or could have been given in these suits, as events happened), and, failing proof of such a customary Warum, it would have been the Collector's duty to fix such rate as he thought just,

JAGAYEERA RAMA V. ALAVARASA ASARI.

"after ascertaining if any increase in the value of the produce or in the productive power of the land has taken place, otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot." It followed, under this scheme, that if these ryots failed to prove an implied contract at 4 fanams enforceable between the parties, and, if the landlord succeeded in proving such a contract at 8 fanams, no further issue arose for decision.

The course which the litigation took was this: Thirty-eight suits were begun in 1903 and, although the ryots came from different villages in the Zemindari, and had paid the garden rate for very varying terms, one alone, taken as typical of the rest at any rate so far as concerns the present appeal, was gone into. It was the suit brought by Arumugam Chetti, of the village of Poomalaignundu, in the Zemin of Gandamanaikanoor. The common state of facts was this. At some date, which varied a good deal from case to case, the ryot had made a well or tank at his own expense to water the land, which had been "Punja" or dry land before, and thereafter, thanks to the water-supply, he resorted to garden cultivation. No permission for the working of these wells was required on the part of the Zemindar. Rent had previously been paid at the rate of 4 fanams per guli, the usual "dry" rate: thenceforward, it was always demanded and paid at the rate of 8 fanams per guli, which was alleged to be the usual rate for "garden" cultivation. There seems to have been no demur to the 8 fanams rate till 1903, and presumably Pattahs and Muchalikas at this rate were regularly exchanged, in accordance with the Act.

Arumugam Chetti, the selected plaintiff, pleaded, rather indefinitely, that the field in question "was a Punja land, bearing 4 fanams rate of assessment," but that since the well had been sunk "the defendant had been charging garden assessment," without having any right to do so. The Zemindar did not deny the ryot's statement quoted above, but, besides relying on the actual payment of rent without dispute at the rate of 8 fanams, pleaded "a long standing custom for the Zemindar to collect Teerva from the ryots according to the following rate:

(1) from 8 fanams to 10 fanams per guli for garden cultivation, and that, "in the said Zemindari, the Faisal rates have been fixed in Fasli 1210 at 15 fanams per guli for garden cultivation." The record leaves the actual course taken at the trial on these pleadings somewhat conjectural.

The Sub-Collector rejected the Zemindar's evidence of custom, and made decrees in favour of the ryots, observing that their lands were "lands formerly paying Punja rates (4 fanams)." He appears to have understood the custom pleaded by the Zemindar to have been "a general custom to charge enhanced rents for garden crops, when raised by plaintiffs, irrespective of any improvement or alteration in the land made at plaintiffs' expense," and he held such a custom to be bad in law, as being contrary to the policy of the Act, relying on the case of Venkatagiri Raja v. Pitchana (6) and Fischer v. Kamakshi Pillai (7). There is nothing in his judgment to show, that a contract, existing before the wells were made, for a rent at the dry rate of 4 fanams was either expressly proved on the one hand, or expressly questioned on the other, but there is good ground for thinking that the case could not have taken the course it did, unless the Zemindar had conceded the existence of such a contract before the wells were made, and had alleged its supersession by another contract, since the payments at the garden rate began. In the High Court on the first hearing, Subramania Aiyar, J., says in terms that, "in the lower Courts the parties throughout proceeded in all these cases on the footing, that there were no facts to try, except as to the existence of the alleged custom," and then proceeds to discuss the validity of such a custom, and whether or not the alleged contract to pay at the 8-fanam rate was or was not nudum pactum. This is only consistent with his having taken the view above stated of the course of the case at the trial on the arguments presented to the Court. Twenty-seven of these suits were appealed to the District Judge. In these cases the maximum period since the wells were made and payment of the garden rate of rent began was eighteen years. Eleven others, in which the period was over forty years, and therefore went back to a date before the passing of Act VIII of 1865, had been reserved by the Sub Collector for separate trial.

(6) 9 M. 27; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 415.

(7) 21 M. 136; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 452.

JAGAVEERA RAMA V. ALAWARASA ASARI.

The District Judge allowed these appeals and made an order for a remand. On appeal to the High Court there was a difference of opinion on the first hearing, and on a second, under section 15 of the Letters Patent, the order of the District Judge was affirmed and the cases were sent back to the Sub-Collector. It is important to observe two things: (1) the Zemindar had not appealed against the order as actually made by the District Judge; he appears to have been satisfied with it as it stood, whatever its true meaning and effect might be; (2) the High Court interpreted that order as meaning merely that the Sub-Collector ought to try the question, whether a presumption of the fact of an implied contract arose in any particular case, on the facts of that case, and declared that "Under the order of remand it is not competent to either party to re-open the question of custom raised in the first preliminary issue." Accordingly, neither on the remand nor in the subsequent proceedings until the appeal to their Lordships' Board has this question of custom been further raised. As the now appellant acquiesced in its being thus disposed of, and as the judgment appealed against accordingly does not deal with it, their Lordships cannot now entertain this point as a ground of appeal. It is enough to say that, if the custom was meant to refer to the determination of rates of rent "according to local usage," the evidence was irrelevant, unless and until it appeared that no contract, express or implied, had been made on the subject; and if, on the other hand, it was meant to be, as the Sub-Collector understood, a general custom to enhance rent if the tenant enhanced the value of the land at his own expense, then the Zemindar was asking the Sub-Collector to do what the Act forbade him to do, at any rate when, in the last resort, and in default of proof of contract or of "Warum," he came to fix a rent which he considered to be just. It never appears to have been suggested that what was meant was a custom of the country, with reference to which the ryots or their predecessors must be deemed to have contracted when they began to occupy the land in the first instance, or that the Zemindar's claim was merely to have the original contract applied to new circumstances according to its terms, and was not a claim to alter those terms, and to imply a new contract for that purpose.

The hearing upon the remand took place in 1907. By this time seventeen of the thirty-eight suits of 1903 had been disposed of, or in some way had disappeared; but further suits had been brought for 1904 and 1905, respectively, thirty-one and thirty-eight. Thus ninety suits were eventually dealt with; but again the suit of Arumugam Chetti was treated as typical of all, though he had "paid this enhanced rate for the first and only time in Fasli 1311, the year before suit" (Record page 185). Again the Sub-Collector decided for and the District Judge against the ryots, though neither Sub-Collector nor District Judge was the same person who had officiated before. Again, on appeal to the High Court, the ryots succeeded, and now it is the Zemindar who appeals to their Lordships' Board.

The judgment of the High Court, now appealed against, says, "in the present suits it is admitted that, prior to the construction of the wells, the tenants had always been paying at the uniform Punja rate of 4 fanams a guli for the suit lands, and this as far back as can be traced." From such facts it would be a legitimate inference that a contract to hold the land at a 4-fanam rate of rent might be implied, and, when this is taken in conjunction with the terms of ryoti tenure, such a contract has at any rate an element of fixity, since so long as the ryot's rent is paid the Zemindar cannot dispossess him against his will. It need not necessarily be inferred that such an implied contract gives a right of occupation at the Punja rate in perpetuity. It would be enough for the purpose of the present case if its duration is implied to be so long as circumstances affecting the holding remain unchanged, otherwise than by the labour and outlay of the ryot himself. This is the basis of the decisions in favour of the ryots. How then is another and subsequent contract to be implied replacing the contract at the "dry" rate by a new one at the "garden" rate? The District Judge found as a fact, at the second hearing in his Court, that, in view of the long continuance of payments of rent at the garden rate, "in each and every case there was an implied contract to go on paying those rates, if not as long as the relationship of landlord and tenant continued, certainly as long as the conditions remained unchanged," and on this Ayling, J., delivering the judgment of the High Court, which is now under review, says—

JAGAVEERA RAMA V. ALAVARASA ASARI.

"The existence of an implied agreement is deduced mainly from the payment of the enhanced rate by the litigating tenants for a number of years varying from two to forty. The corroborative evidence is meagre, but I am not prepared, in second appeal, to set aside the District Judge's finding in this respect."

The question for their Lordships then comes to be that of consideration for the subsequent agreement at garden rate thus implied. What is this consideration to be? The mere letting of the land by the landlord will not do, for it was let at the dry rate already, and the ryot was entitled to continue in occupation at that rate, and no fresh consideration, therefore, moved from the landlord for the ryot's assumed promise to pay at the 8-fanam rate. The District Judge appears to have found consideration in the landlord's abstention from exercising his right to resort to the "Warum" system, if the ryots refused to consent to pay at the rate of 8 fanams, but, under the Act, if there was an implied contract for the 4-fanam rate, that contract had to be enforced, and there was no question of resorting to the "Warum" system. By the admissions, such an implied contract did exist. As, by consent, all the cases have been treated as typified sufficiently by Arumugam Chetti's case, no point can be made that in the cases where the 8-fanam rate had been paid for over forty years, the question arose before the Act of 1865 was passed; but, even if it could, there is no evidence that there was any "Warum" in the village in question. If it be said that at any rate the landlord could have put the tenants to the trouble of proceedings in the Sub Collector's Court and forbore to do so, there is no evidence that there was actually any such forbearance. Besides, if he had done so, still by the hypothesis, proof of the implied contract for the dry rate would have promptly defeated him, nor can it be said that a valid consideration can be found for the abandonment of the ryot's rights in the Zemindar's submission not to raise a hopeless and groundless dispute of those rights, any more than a promise to pay a sovereign in satisfaction of a debt of a guinea is supportable by the consideration that it saves the creditor the trouble of bringing an undefended action for the larger sum.

The High Court, therefore, concluded that the implied agreement to pay the 8-fanam rate, though found as a fact, could not be enforced for want of consideration and accordingly if the contract to pay the 4-fanam rate still stood, it was enforceable. Some contention was raised that the ryots were estopped by their conduct in paying the garden rate, but this estoppel in pais, for what it might be worth, rested on an implied representation of some existing fact, on the faith of which the Zemindar had changed his position, and of this there was no evidence. The contention was really only the implied contract for the garden rate in another form. A further argument has been advanced, turning on the supposed true intent of the original contract for the 4-fanam rate, namely, either that it was a promise to pay the 4-fanam rate so long as the land should remain dry, and then, if garden cultivation should take place, to determine that contract, leaving the parties to make a new one, express or implied, and in default to resort to the "Warum" system, or else, in the alternative, that there never had been two implied contracts, but really from the beginning only one, to the effect that the ryot would pay at the 4-fanam rate for the land while dry, and at the 8-fanam rate or some appropriate garden rate for the land when under garden cultivation, no matter at whose expense the water-supply should be procured, and this, as the legal result of this tenure having originated historically, as it is said.

GANGA PRASAD v. FIDA ALI CHANDABHAI.

in a division of the produce of the holding such as it might be from time to time, between ryot and Zemindar in accustomed proportions. To both arguments there must be the same answer. The Zemindar throughout contended for a new contract, arising in each case when the 8-fanam rate first began to be paid, and this is what the District Judge found and the High Court accepted. No case was made below, when the facts were examined or admitted, that the question was merely one of applying a very ancient agreement to new circumstances in accordance with its terms; nor would it be easy, to say the least of it, to suppose that any ryot voluntarily agreed to have his rent enhanced, whenever his own outlay should have rendered an improved mode of cultivation possible. Furthermore, such a theory, if applicable at all, is of general application and is repugnant to the whole scheme of Act VIII of 1865, which is based on the idea of making contract paramount, even when it is only implied, and of recognising agreed rents in supersession of division of the produce, which is to be resorted to only if no contract for a rent can be proved and if the fixing of rent according to the local rate is objected to.

In the result the whole case now turns on the question whether there was any consideration for the new promise to pay at the rate of 8 fanams for land, which was already held on a binding contract of tenancy at the rate of 4 fanams per guli. Their Lordships agree with the High Court that the answer must be "none." If the cases had been examined separately, if distinctions had been drawn between cases where the higher rate was paid for forty years and cases where it was only paid once or twice, if the possibility of presuming a lost Pattah at 8 fanams or lost proof of consideration had been mooted, if the origin of these tenancies had been investigated and the terms of the original contracts fully discussed, other questions might possibly have arisen. As it is, their Lordships must deal with the case as they find it. They will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitor for the Appellant: Mr. Douglas Grant.

Solicitors for the Respondents: Messrs. Watson & Co.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 315 OF 1917.

April 24, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Findley, Offg. A. J. C.

GANGA PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

FIDA ALI CHANDABHAI—DEFENDANT,

—RESPONDENT.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 16 (2), 28—"Debt provable under this Act," meaning of—Obligation incurred after adjudication, suit in respect of, maintainability of.

An obligation incurred by an insolvent after the date of his adjudication is not a debt provable in the insolvency proceedings within the meaning of section 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, so that a suit in respect of such obligation is not governed by section 16 (2) of the Act.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 10th March 1917, in Appeal No. 35 of 1917.

Messrs. G. L. Subhedar and N. R. Aleker, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Atmaram Bhagwant and S. C. Dutt Chowdhury, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—There can, in my opinion, be no question but that the lower Appellate Court has erred in excluding Rs. 60 relief on account of rent given by the first Court. The learned District Judge failed to notice that this item of rent was not an item which fell under the category of debts provable under this Act alluded to in section 16 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. What are debts provable under the Act is laid down in section 28 idem. Now the order of the District Judge declaring the defendant an insolvent, was passed on the 27th September 1913, Exhibit A-1, while the rent note shows that the obligation of debt was incurred on the 18th November 1913. This obligation, therefore, was not an obligation incurred before the date of the adjudication, vide section 28 of the Act, and it follows, therefore, that the claim in question is not a debt provable under this Act. Section 16 (2), therefore, did not exclude the lower

JAI NARAIN v. RAJRANG BAHADUR SINGH.

Appellate Court from allowing the decree for rent to stand. The result is that the appeal succeeds and the lower Appellate Court's decree will be modified to the extent of restoring the decree of the original Court as regards the payment of Rs. 60 on account of rent. The respondent must bear the appellant's costs in this appeal as well as his own.

Appeal accepted.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 90 OF 1917.

September 13, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Stuart, A. J. C., and Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

JAI NARAIN—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

Raj BAJRANG BAHADUR SINGH—

AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—SURAJ DIN

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation—Antecedent debts—Burden of proof—Pious obligation of sons to pay father's debts, whether arises during father's lifetime.

Where a mortgagee sets up a charge in his own favour made by one whose title to alienate he necessarily knew to be limited and qualified, he may reasonably be expected to allege and prove facts presumably better known to him than to an infant member of the family, namely, those facts which embodied the representation made to him of the alleged needs of the estate and the motives influencing his immediate loan. [p. 915, col. 2.]

Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Musammal Babooee Munraj Koonweree, 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81 (note); Sevestre 253n; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. O. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147, followed.

Where an alienation of family property made by a Hindu father is questioned by his sons during his life, no question of the pious obligation of the sons to pay off their father's debts can arise. [p. 916, col. 1.]

Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 44 I. A. 126 at p. 131; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 39 A. 437 (P. C.) and Bharath Singh v. Prag Singh, 43 Ind. Cas. 291; 20 O. C. 311; 5 O. L. J. 9, followed.

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Rae Bareilly, dated the 27th April 1917.

Syed Ali Mohammad, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra and Pandit Harkaran Nath Misra, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

JUDGMENT.—The defendant appellant is the son of Suraj Din and seeks to impeach a mortgage of joint family property effected by the latter in favour of the plaintiffs on the 9th January 1913 and two deeds of further charge similarly executed by him in favour of the same persons. The defendant-appellant denied that there was any legal necessity to justify the above transactions, but the Court below found against him and decreed the claim.

It appears from the documentary evidence adduced that the dealings between the plaintiffs and Suraj Din, which have culminated in the deeds of mortgage and further charge above referred to, commenced on the 26th January 1904, when a deed of simple mortgage was executed by Suraj Din in lieu of Rs. 8,000 in favour of the plaintiffs and their deceased brother, Chanderpall Singh, the whole of the consideration having been paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar (Exhibit 10). No necessity was recited in it for the loan.

On the 27th February 1905 Suraj Din executed another deed of simple mortgage in favour of the same persons in lieu of Rs. 3,000, tacking the same to the amount previously borrowed. Out of the sum of Rs. 3,000, Rs. 2,860-2-0 were credited towards certain prior debts and liabilities, including a decree and some arrears of under-proprietary rent said to have been due in respect of Mauza Miran Bisaiya for 1310 to Kharif 1312 Fasli, and the balance was paid before the Sub Registrar (Exhibit 11).

On the 10th January 1908 Suraj Din discharged the two deeds above mentioned by executing a fresh deed of simple mortgage in favour of the same persons for Rs. 15,000, out of which Rs. 1,484-13-0 were paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar and the balance was credited towards the money due on the above deeds and a promissory note of the 1st January 1903 and some arrears of revenue or under-proprietary rent, said to have been due in respect of the village Miran Bisaiya for Kharif 1315 Fasli (Exhibit 4).

On the 16th March 1908 he borrowed Rs. 2,600 and executed a deed of further charge in favour of the said persons, receiving Rs. 96-2-0 before the execution of the document and Rs. 6,911 in cash before the Sub-Registrar and crediting the balance in satisfaction of a decree which was then under execution against him (Exhibit 5).

JAI NARAIN V. RAJKANG BAHADUR SINGH.

On the 19th June 1909 he again borrowed Rs. 4,000 from the same persons, receiving Rs. 86-13-9 before the execution of the deed and Rs. 1,938 3-6 in cash before the Sub-Registrar and crediting the balance towards the interest due on the mortgage-deed for Rs. 15,000, and the deed of further charge for Rs. 2,600 above mentioned and some arrears of rent said to have been due in respect of the village Miran Bisaiya for 1315 to the end of 1316 Fasli (Exhibit 6).

On the 29th March 1912 he took a further loan of Rs. 13,500; out of which Rs. 3,000 were received by him in cash before the Sub-Registrar and the balance was credited towards the money due on mortgages and some arrears of under-proprietary rent in respect of the village Miran Bisaiya for 1317 to 1319 Fasli (Exhibit 7).

On the 9th January 1913 he consolidated the above loans and executed a fresh deed of simple mortgage for Rs. 35,000 out of which Rs. 31,478-10 6 were credited by him towards the prior debts aforesaid and Rs. 200 were taken for the purchase of stamp and the balance was received in cash before the Sub-Registrar. In this deed it was stated that the mortgagor required Rs. 4,000 to meet the revenue demand and for domestic expenses (Exhibit 1). This is one of the documents now in suit. It was followed by a deed of further charge of the 11th December 1913 for Rs. 3,000 said to have been taken for domestic and private necessities (Exhibit 8), another of the 16th January 1914 for Rs. 1,000 stated to have been similarly taken for domestic and private needs, and a third of the 4th July 1914 for Rs. 2,000 said to have been taken for the payment of arrears of revenue and other necessary expenses (Exhibit 9).

The dealings did not end here. On the 4th December 1914 he executed a deed of further charge for Rs. 15,000, out of which Rs. 4,014 were received by him in cash before the Sub-Registrar and the balance was credited in satisfaction of the deeds of further charge of the 11th December 1913, 16th January 1914 and the 4th July 1914, two promissory notes of the 16th July 1914 and the 27th November 1914 and some interest due on the mortgage of the 9th January 1913. This is the second document now in suit.

On the 23rd April 1915 another deed of further charge was executed for Rs. 2,450, out of which Rs. 2,173 were paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar and the balance was credited towards a promissory note of the 28th January 1915 and some arrears of revenue, said to have been due in respect of the village Miran Bisaiya for 1322 Fasli. This is third document now in suit.

There is no evidence to show whether the antecedent debts, amounting to Rs. 42,914-3-3, credited in the deeds of mortgage and further charge now in suit, were taken for family purposes or for family necessity. The plaintiffs were themselves the creditors in the case of each of these antecedent debts, and as pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Musammat Babooee Munraj Koonweree (1), "where the mortgagee himself with whom the transaction took place, is setting up a charge in his favour made by one whose title to alienate he necessarily knew to be limited and qualified, he may be reasonably expected to allege and prove facts presumably better known to him than to an infant member of the family, namely, those facts which embodied the representation made to him of the alleged needs of the estate and the motives influencing his immediate loan."

The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs-respondents does not contest that in accordance with the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Sahu Ram Ohandra v. Bhup Singh (2) read with the decision of this Court in Bharath Singh v. Prag Singh (3), no question of pious obligation can arise because Suraj Din is still alive. He asks for an opportunity

(1) 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81 (note); Sevestre 253n; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147.

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 290; 44 I. A. 126 at p. 131; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 493; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 33 A. 437 (P. C.).

(3) 43 Ind. Cas. 291; 20 O. C. 311; 5 O. L. J. 9.

BUDHA v. MUL RAJ.

to prove that the antecedent debts in question were taken for family purposes or family necessity, contending that the issues as framed by the Court below did not require him to go behind the antecedent debts and establish the purpose for which they were taken. The decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (2) was in fact delivered after the issues were framed in this case and did not become known in this country till after the case, which is the subject of appeal, was decided by the Court below.

The question of the liability of the defendant-appellant for the sum of Rs. 10,335.12-9, said to have been taken in cash, cannot also be properly determined till the account books of Suraj Din, if any, showing his grain and cloth dealings and the expenses incurred in connection with the marriage of his daughters and the payment of arrears of revenue or underproprietary rent in connection with his estate, from the time when the dealings first commenced, are forthcoming. It was for the defendant appellant to have produced evidence to rebut that adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs. The representations made to the creditor may also be material under section 38 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The Court below is, therefore, directed to determine the following issues, after taking such relevant evidence as the parties may adduce:—

(1) Whether the antecedent debts credited in the deeds of mortgage and further charge now in suit were taken for family necessity or family purposes or for the discharge of a common obligation and if so, to what extent?

(2) Whether the money said to have been taken in cash was similarly taken for family purposes or family necessity or for the discharge of a common obligation or lent in good faith on the strength of the representations, if any, made as to the alleged needs of the estate and family; and if so, to what extent can the defendant-appellant be made liable for its payment?

Three months' time will be allowed for the return of the findings and ten days from the date of the findings will be allowed to the parties for filing objections.

Issues remitted.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2650 OF 1917.

November 25, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

BUDHA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

MUL RAJ—PLAINTIFF AND SAHIB DIAL

AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 135—Mortgage—Puisne mortgagee, suit by, for possession—Cause of action—Limitation—Failure of payment of part of consideration, effect of.

A puisne mortgagee is not bound to file a suit for possession of the mortgaged property within twelve years from the date of his mortgage where the property is not in the possession of the mortgagor but in that of the mortgagee. [p. 917, col. 1.]

Husaini v. Ram Charan, 32 Ind. Cas. 341; 2 O. L. J. 488; 18 O. C. 250, dissented from.

Limitation under Article 135 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act against a puisne mortgagee does not begin to run until the redemption of the first mortgage and he is entitled to bring his suit for possession within twelve years from the date of redemption. [p. 917, col. 2.]

Ghanaya v. Pandit Chhajju Ram, 38 P. R. 1894 and Narain Singh v. Shimbhoo Singh, 1 A. 325; 4 I. A. 15; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 357; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 673; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 223, followed.

Plaintiff, a puisne mortgagee, sued for possession of the property mortgaged after having effected the redemption of the previous mortgage. The mortgage in favour of the plaintiff was made on the 14th February 1895. Although it was nominally with possession, the first mortgagee was in possession through his tenant, the mortgagor. In 1907 the plaintiff brought a suit for redemption against the prior mortgagee and obtained a decree. It appeared that he paid off the previous mortgagee but could not recover possession because the mortgagor succeeded in obtaining possession of the land;

Held, (1) that plaintiff's cause of action arose when the first mortgagee was paid off and that the suit was, therefore, within time; [p. 917, col. 2.]

(2) that the fact that plaintiff had not succeeded in proving the payment of a part of the consideration for the mortgage did not debar him from recovering possession of the property. [p. 918, col. 1.]

Allah Ditta v. Nazar Din, 33 Ind. Cas. 474; 53 P. R. 1916; 51 P. W. R. 1916 (F. B.), followed.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 16th July 1917, reversing that of the Munsif, 2nd Class, Gujranwala, dated the 14th March 1917, dismissing the claim.

Dr. G. C. Narang, for the Appellant.

Lala Shamair Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal arises out of an action brought by one Mul Raj, the puisne mortgagee of the land in dispute, for possession thereof after having effected the redemption of the previous mortgage. The main question for consideration is whether the suit is barred by time under Article 135 of the Indian Limitation Act.

BUDHA C. MUL RAJ.

The mortgage in favour of the plaintiff was made on the 14th February 1895; and though it was nominally with possession, it is beyond dispute that the first mortgagee was in possession of the property through his tenant, the mortgagor. In 1907 the plaintiff brought a suit for redemption against the prior mortgagee and obtained a decree in his favour. The learned District Judge finds, and his finding cannot be assailed in second appeal, that the previous mortgagee has been paid off by the plaintiff, but it appears that the latter could not recover possession because the mortgagor succeeded somehow or other in obtaining possession of the land. There is documentary evidence to the effect that the mortgagor cultivated the land as the tenant of the first mortgagee up to 1902, and that the latter then let it to other persons. The application of the mortgagor dated the 8th of May 1914 makes it clear that he again obtained possession sometime in 1911, and there can be little doubt that his possession was then unlawful as against the plaintiff.

Mr. Gokal Chand Narang for the appellants contends that the plaintiff's right to sue for possession accrued in 1895, when the mortgagor's right to possession determined; and invites my attention in support of his argument to certain observations contained in a judgment of the Additional Judicial Commissioner of Oudh in Husaini v. Ram Charan (1). A perusal of that judgment shows that the observations with respect to limitation were purely obiter dicta. In any case I am not prepared to concur in the proposition that the puisne mortgagee is bound to file a suit for possession within twelve years from the date of his mortgage, even when the property is not in the possession of the mortgagor but is in the possession of the prior mortgagee. It seems to me that a suit of that kind, if filed before the redemption of the prior mortgage, is bound to be dismissed, as against the mortgagor on the ground that he is not in possession of the property, and as against the prior mortgagee on the simple plea that the mortgage in his favour has not yet been redeemed. Article 135 distinctly contemplates that the possession is with the mortgagor, and that the mortgagee is entitled to hold the property as against the latter. I do not think that the aforesaid Article has any application to a case of this kind.

In Narain Singh v. Shimbhoo Singh (2), a case which is on all fours with the present one, their Lordships of the Privy Council made the following pertinent observations:—

"It appears, however, to their Lordships that the plaintiff having a good title when the first mortgagees were paid off in 1870, their cause of action accrued when the defendants (i. e., the mortgagors) after that period entered into possession of the estate to which they had no title."

The learned Counsel for the appellants contends that this judgment was delivered with reference to the Limitation Act of 1871, which provided a period of twelve years from the date "when the mortgagee is first entitled to possession"; and that the Limitation Act of 1877 made the date of the determination of the mortgagor's right to possession as the terminus a quo for the period of limitation. Now, it is doubtful whether this change of phraseology has made any real difference in the law; and a Division Bench judgment of this Court reported as Ghanaya v. Pandit Ohhajju Ram (3), which was delivered after the enforcement of the Limitation Act of 1877, follows the aforesaid Privy Council ruling, and lays down that the limitation against a puisne mortgagee does not begin to run until the redemption of the first mortgage and that he is entitled to bring his suit for possession within twelve years from the date of redemption. This judgment is binding upon me, and I am not prepared to hold that the rule of law enunciated therein is erroneous. For these reasons I hold that the suit is within time.

(2) 1 A. 325; 4 I. A. 15; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 357; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 673; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 223.

(3) 38 P. R. 1894.

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 341; 2 Q. L. J. 488; 18 Q. C. 280.

PRAG DATT V. KANHAIYA LAL.

The fact that the plaintiff has not succeeded in proving the payment of a part of the consideration for the mortgage does not debar him from recovering possession of the property. As laid down by the Full Court in Allah Ditta v. Nazar Din (4), the transfer is perfectly valid, and the question whether the entire mortgage money has or has not been paid does not arise in this case. The observations per contra in Husaini v. Ram Charan (1) cannot be followed in the face of the judgment of the Full Court in Allah Ditta v. Nazar Din (4). As to the contention that the area decreed to the plaintiff is more than what is mentioned in the mortgage-deed in his favour, it is sufficient to say that the learned District Judge after giving his reasons to account for the excess, offered to remand the case, but the appellants declined the offer.

Accordingly I confirm the decree of the District Judge, and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) 33 Ind. Cas. 474; 53 P. R. 1916; 51 P. W. R. 16 (F. B.).

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S
COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 115 OF 1917.
July 8, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Stuart, A. J. C., and Pandit
Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

Pandit PRAG DATT—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

Pandit KANHAIYA LAL AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Procedure—Burden of proof, party failing to discharge, through bad advice of Counsel—Re-hearing, whether can be allowed.

The mere fact that a party to a case did not adduce evidence owing to the bad advice of his Pleader, which resulted in a decision against him, is no ground for allowing him a re-hearing of the case. [p. 919, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Bara Banki, dated the 19th July 1917.

Mr. A. P. Sen holding brief of Mr. St. George Jackson, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, Mr. Haider Husain and Pandit Sarju Prasad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Prag Datt mortgaged on the 2nd September 1913 certain shares in Bichlinga and Kamai to the mother of Kanhaiya Lal. On the 23rd November 1915 he sold the rights that he retained in the share in Bichlinga to Kanhaiya Lal and Rameshri Prasad. When the vendees applied for mutation in February 1916, Prag Datt opposed the entry of their names on the ground that the whole consideration of the sale had not passed. The vendees failed to obtain mutation. They sued for possession in the Civil Court on the 20th June 1916. On the 15th September 1916, Prag Datt was party to a compromise in Court by which he agreed to the vendees' obtaining possession over the share in question. Prag Datt subsequently filed a suit to have that compromise set aside on the following grounds. He said that he had executed the compromise because he was in abject terror of Kanhaiya Lal and incapable of protecting his own interests owing to the following facts:—

1. That Kanhaiya Lal who is a Pleader by profession had continually acted for him in legal proceedings.

2. That Prag Datt's brother had been prosecuted on the 13th of April 1916 and that he believed that Kanhaiya Lal had been responsible for the prosecution. It is to be noted that the brother was acquitted on that occasion.

3. Because Prag Datt's brother was being prosecuted in a criminal case at the time when the compromise was effected and Prag Datt believed that Kanhaiya Lal was at the bottom of the prosecution.

Issues were framed on these points. Kanhaiya Lal has admitted in the proceedings that he had acted as a Pleader for Prag Datt. But there was on the face of it no close connection between the two. Kanhaiya Lal was in no way Prag Datt's family lawyer, or regular lawyer, or confidential adviser. He had taken up certain cases on his behalf. That was all. It should have been clear to any Counsel, we consider, that in view of the nature of the plaintiff's case the burden of proof was on him and on him very strongly to prove, firstly, that Kanhaiya Lal had instigated the prosecution of his brother in April and was instigating the prosecution of his brother in September, and secondly, that he was really reduced to such hopeless and pitiable terror, by the fact that such prosecution had taken place and his impression that Kanhaiya Lal was responsible for it, as to be unable to defend himself in the previous civil proceedings, and to be ready to accede to whatever Kanhaiya Lal wished. How any Counsel could believe that if he produced no evidence on these points he would succeed in his case, we fail to understand. However, that was the attitude adopted by Prag Datt's Counsel. He refused to produce any evidence. He said that, as Kanhaiya Lal admitted having appeared for Prag Datt in certain legal proceedings, it would necessarily follow that unless Kanhaiya Lal could show that he had not been privy to the criminal prosecutions, Prag Datt's case was bound to succeed. He refused to produce any evidence and the suit was dismissed. The learned Counsel who has represented Prag Datt in this Court has very wisely thrown up practically every point taken in the grounds of appeal and has pleaded simply for compassion for his client. His case is that his client was badly advised, that his client's Counsel took an extraordinarily mistaken attitude, that his client should not be made to suffer because of the mistaken attitude adopted by his Counsel, and that he should be given a re-hearing and allowed to re-open his case from the very commencement. We do not think that if we acceded to this request we should be acting in fairness to the other side, and also we should be, we consider, embarking upon a very dangerous course, for in the period of nearly two years which has elapsed between the hearing of the case and the decision of this appeal, it has been possible to prepare evidence on behalf of the appellant which might not have been forthcoming at the time of the hearing of the suit.

KUNDAN LAL v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, DIAMOND JUBILEE FLOUR MILLS CO., LTD.

In these circumstances we consider the appeal must and should fail and dismiss it with costs,

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 1489 OF 1918.

July 31, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

KUNDAN LAL—APPELLANT

versus

THE OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR OF THE DIAMOND JUBILEE FLOUR MILLS COMPANY, LTD., DELHI—RESPONDENT.

Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 169—Appeal—Service of notice after expiry of 3 months—Delay beyond appellant's control—Extension of time—Reasonable cause—Sale by private contract of property belonging to company in liquidation—Interests of creditors and contributories prejudiced—Sale, whether liable to be set aside.

Where a notice of appeal in the matter of the liquidation of a company was served upon the respondents after the expiry of the period of 3 weeks prescribed by Statute and it appeared that the delay was due to a blunder on the part of the copying department and beyond the control of the appellant:

Held, that the time for the service of notice of appeal was rightly extended. [p. 920, col. 1.]

In an appeal against an order sanctioning the sale of the Diamond Jubilee Flour Mills, Delhi, it appeared that the Mills were leased to the vendees for a period of 3 years commencing from 1st January 1917, one of the conditions of the transaction being that the lease could be determined by either party after giving six months' notice to the other, provided that the Liquidator before resuming possession on the expiry of the period of notice should pay Rs. 5,000 to the lessees. In June 1917, the Liquidator served a notice upon the lessees requiring them to quit the premises on 31st December 1917. On the 8th October 1917 the Additional Judge, Delhi, asked the Liquidator to withdraw the notice and even granted the request of the lessees that in lieu of their agreeing to the withdrawal of the notice the Liquidator should be debarred from determining the lease in any case during its continuance for the remaining period. The District Judge rejected a higher offer than that of the vendees on the ground that they were already in possession and that possession could not be given to anybody else till the expiry of six months:

Held, (1) that the order allowing the lessees to remain in possession was wholly without justification, especially when there was no affidavit from the Liquidator that the alleged compromise was beneficial to the persons interested in the winding up; [p. 921, col. 1.]

(2) that the price being wholly inadequate, the sale by private contract to the vendees was detrimental to the interests of the creditors and contributories of the company and ought to be set aside. [p. 921, col. 2.]

Miscellaneous first appeal from the order of the Additional Judge, Delhi, dated the 15th March 1918, sanctioning the sale of the Diamond Jubilee Flour Mills in favour of Behari Lal-Bulaqi Das for a sum of Rs. 1,75,000,

KUNDAN LAL V. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, DIAMOND JUBILEE FLOUR MILLS CO. LTD.

Bhagat Govind Das and Lala Ganga Ram, for the Appellant.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., and Lala Jagan Nath, for the Lessees (Vendees).

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order of the Additional Judge, Delhi, sanctioning the sale of the Diamond Jubilee Flour Mills in favour of Behari Lal-Bulaqi Das for a sum of Rs. 1,75,000. Mr. Moti Sagar for the respondents raises a preliminary objection that the notice of appeal having been served upon his clients after the expiry of the period of three weeks prescribed by section 169 of the Indian Companies Act, VI of 1882, the appeal should be dismissed in limine. Now, an affidavit filed by Lala Dhanpat Rai, Pleader, on behalf of the appellant furnishes an adequate reply to this objection, and leaves no doubt that the delay in presenting the appeal was due to a blunder on the part of the Copying Department, Delhi, and was beyond the control of the appellant. It appears that the vendees were impleaded as respondents some days after the institution of the appeal, but this was obviously the result of inadvertence on the part of the lawyer engaged by the appellant. Taking all the circumstances into consideration I hold that the time for the service of notice of appeal has been rightly extended.

Upon the merits I have, upon a careful consideration of all the proceedings taken by the Official Liquidator and the Judge in relation to the sale of the property, reached the conclusion that the sale by private contract to the vendees is detrimental to the interests of the creditors and contributories of the Company, and that the price is wholly inadequate. It is not seriously contested by Mr. Moti Sagar that the property is worth much more than Rs. 1,75,000, indeed, one firm actually offered Rs. 2,20,000, but this offer and other offers were rejected on the ground that the vendees were already in possession of the Mills, and that "possession cannot under any circumstances be given till the expiry of six months and that it is possible that possession may be indefinitely postponed if the lessees insist on their rights under the amended terms of the lease."

In view of the above argument used by the learned Judge for rejecting the higher offers, I consider it necessary to set out briefly the relevant facts about the lease and the alleged amendment in the terms thereof. It appears that in September 1916 the Mills were leased to the vendees for a period of three years commencing from 1st January 1917, and one of the terms of the transaction was that the lease could be determined by either party after giving six months' notice to the other, subject to the proviso that the Liquidator before resuming possession on the expiry of the period of notice should pay Rs. 5,000 to the lessees. It is beyond dispute that the Liquidator served in the month of June 1917 a notice upon the lessees requiring them to quit the premises on 31st December 1917. Now, if this notice had remained in force, the lessees would have vacated the premises at the end of the year, and there could have been no conceivable reason for rejecting the offer of Rs. 2,20,000 made in March 1918. It, however, appears that the learned Judge intervened on the 8th October 1917 and asked the Liquidator to withdraw the notice on the ground that on account of stringency of the money market "it would be a foolish proceeding" to sell the Mills at that time.

I have no hesitation in holding that this was a most unfortunate order, and the reason given for making it appears to me to be wholly wrong. Indeed, the subsequent events shew that the order has actually been utilised by the lessees for obtaining a favourable bargain for themselves and causing loss to the persons interested in the liquidation. There cannot be the slightest doubt that the price of the machinery has gone up on account of the war, and it is common knowledge that there is a keen competition among business men for purchasing mills and that this competition has naturally led to a considerable rise in the prices.

The learned Judge did not, however, content himself with the cancellation of the notice, but even went so far as to accord his assent to a grasping request made by the lessees that in lieu of their agreeing to the withdrawal of the notice the Official Liquidator should be debarred from determining the lease in any case during the continuance of the lease for the remaining period, but that they should be allowed the option to put an end to the lease by giving six months' notice to the Official Liquidator. Now, it is perfectly clear that the lessees were anxious to remain in possession of the property, that the cancellation of the notice was beneficial to them, and that they would have agreed to the cancellation without any quid pro quo. There was, therefore, absolutely no justification for acceding to their demand, more especially when there was no affidavit from the Liquidator that the alleged compromise was beneficial to the persons interested in the winding up.

KUNDAN LAL v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, DIAMOND JUBILEE FLOUR MILLS CO. LTD.

No formal document has yet been drawn up containing the modified terms, and the question as to whether the alleged modification is binding upon the Liquidator and the parties concerned in the liquidation is not before me and need not be determined. It is, however, to be observed that the Additional Judge himself, in an order passed on the 28th February 1918, made the following observations:—"Circumstances have also arisen which call for a re consideration of the matter before ratifying by formal deed executed by the Official Liquidator the modified terms as to the continuance of the lease. The position in the absence of such a formal deed is governed by the terms of clause J of the lease and under it the Official Liquidator has, in my opinion, power to give the lessees six months' notice to quit subject to their being paid Rs. 5,000." In spite of this expression of opinion it is strange that when certain contributories represented to the learned Judge that the price offered by the lessees was inadequate and that the Mills be sold by public auction, he passed an order of the 12th March referring to the alleged right of the lessees to hold possession for the full period of three years, and called upon the contributories "to produce some person or persons who, fully knowing all the circumstances as I have explained them, is or are still prepared to make an offer of (as the applicants state) $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 lacs," and fixed three days for the purpose of their producing the would-be purchasers. I cannot help remarking that this order was unfair to the contributories, and was calculated to frighten persons who were likely to purchase the property. There cannot be the slightest doubt that it was the learned Judge's action in cancelling the notice of ejection and subsequently according his assent to the proposed modification in the terms of the lease which was availed of for the purpose of granting a concession to the lessees and rejecting an offer made by another firm, which offer would have given the Liquidator Rs. 45,200 in excess of the price for which the property has been sold to the lessees.

I cannot endorse a transaction of this nature and must set it aside. Accordingly I accept the appeal and quashing the order sanctioning the sale direct the parties to bear their own costs in both the Courts. It is open to the lower Court to take proceedings for the sale of the property by public auction after issuing the proper proclamation. It seems to me that in order to realise a proper price it is necessary to adjudicate upon the rights of the lessees and to determine their lease, which has all along operated as an obstacle in the way of the sale of the property for an adequate price.

Some doubt has been thrown upon the competency of an Additional Judge to exercise the special jurisdiction conferred by the Indian Companies Act, the reason of the doubt being that the Statute confers the jurisdiction upon the 'District Court' and does not contemplate an assignment of proceedings by the latter to the Court of an Additional Judge. It is unnecessary to make a pronouncement upon the subject, but it is desirable that the validity of the proceedings should no longer be open to doubt. Accordingly I order that the proceedings in the liquidation of the Diamond Jubilee Flour Mills Co. be hereafter conducted by the District Judge, Delhi.

Appeal accepted.

SHEORAJ BAHADUR SINGH v. GAJADHAR SINGH.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S
COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 23 OF 1917.

July 10, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C., and Pandit
Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

SHEORAJ BAHADUR SINGH—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

GAJADHAR SINGH—PLAINTIFF AND

RAMAN SINGH—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Redemption, decree for, obtained—Decree, defective—Suit, subsequent, for redemption, whether maintainable.

A decree for redemption once obtained bars a subsequent suit for redemption, although the decree be defective in so far as it neither fixes any definite time for payment of the mortgage money nor provides for the consequences of non-payment. [p. 923, col. 1.]

Bhola Singh v. Jai Gobind, 12 Ind. Cas. 993; 14 O. C. 257, Ram Dayal v. Raja Rampal Singh, 6 O. C. 367, followed.

Gur Pershad v. Rattan Singh, 6 O. C. 239; Raja Partab Bahadur Singh v. Raja Surat Singh, 8 O. C. 361, distinguished.

Appeal against the order of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 21st February 1917, reversing the order of the Probationary Munsif, Sultanpur, dated the 23rd October 1916.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Appellant.

Babus Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, Lachhman Prasad Varma and Daya Kishen Seth, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for redemption in respect of a mortgage executed by Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh in favour of Balwant Singh, the father of the defendant-appellant, on the 12th April 1882. In 1885, Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh filed a suit for the redemption of that mortgage and got a decree, allowing him to redeem the mortgage on paying Rs. 43 on or before a certain date. The mortgagee appealed and succeeded in getting the mortgage money payable to him raised to Rs. 100. Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh then appealed to this Court, with the result that on the 19th February 1886 a decree was passed by this Court in accordance with a compromise by which it was provided that "when after three years the mortgagor redeems the property in suit, he shall pay Rs. 100 and if Balwant Singh, the second mortgagee, may pay Rs. 43 to Panchoo Murari and Arjun Singh, the first mortgagees, then the mortgagor should pay Rs. 57, the remaining sum after deducting Rs. 43, to the mortgagee Balwant Singh, and if Balwant Singh may not pay Rs. 43 to the first mortgagees then Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh, mortgagor, should pay Rs. 43 to the first mortgagee and Rs. 57 to Balwant Singh."

Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh did not, however, pay the mortgage money, as directed by the decree. The decree contained no direction that in case of non-payment the mortgagee shall be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale. Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh died, and was, according to the plaintiff, succeeded by Ram Prasad Singh.

On the 28th March 1908 Bhagwant Singh and Raman Singh instituted a suit for redemption of the mortgage, alleging that they were the heirs of Ram Prasad Singh and further stating that Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh had made a Will in favour of Gajadhar Singh and that the latter had executed a deed of gift in favour of Bhagwant Singh, one of the then plaintiffs. Raman Singh subsequently withdrew from the claim and Bhagwant Singh gave up the right which he asserted under a deed of gift from Gajadhar Singh. The suit of Bhagwant Singh was eventually dismissed, on the ground that he was not proved to be an heir of Ram Prasad Singh.

The present suit was then filed by Gajadhar Singh for the redemption of the same mortgage. His allegation was that he was the heir of Ram Prasad Singh and was also in possession of certain property left by him under a Will, dated the 19th October 1899. In regard to the deed of gift executed by him in favour of Bhagwant Singh, his statement was that Bhagwant Singh had relinquished his rights under the gift in his favour.

The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, holding that the claim was barred by reason of the dismissal of the previous suits. The lower Appellate Court gave a decree and remanded the suit to the Court of first instance for disposal on the merits.

The decree passed in the suit filed by Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh was obviously not a decree passed in accordance with section 92 of the Transfer of Property Act then in force, for it did not fix any definite time for the payment of the mortgage money and contained no provision declaring that, if such payment was not made on or before the date fixed, the mortgaged property shall be sold in satisfaction of the mortgage money. But all the same it was an effective decree, giving the then plaintiff, Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh, a right to redeem the mortgage after three years on payment of a definite sum of money. It was capable of execution, and if Kanhaiya Bakhsh Singh failed to enforce it within the time allowed by law, his remedy became barred by time. The matter is concluded by the decision of this Court in Bhola Singh v. Jai Gobind (1), which followed a previous decision in Ram Dayal v. Raja Rampal Singh (2), and a second suit for redemption is not, therefore, maintainable.

KALICHARAN v. LAL INDAR SHAH.

The decree was not of a declaratory nature and the decisions in Gur Pershad v. Rattan Singh (3) and Raja Partab Bahadur Singh v. Raja Surat Singh (4) do not apply, because the terms of the settlement decrees passed in those cases were not similar. The decree also did not constitute a new mortgage. The effect of the compromise merely was to postpone redemption for three years and give the mortgagor a right to redeem after the expiry of that period. In Narayan Govind v. Anand Ram Kojiram (5) it was held that a decree for redemption, giving no fixed time for payment, could be executed at any time by paying the mortgage money within the time usually allowed for an application for execution.

The appeal is, therefore, allowed and the suit dismissed with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

- (1) 12 Ind. Cas. 993; 14 O. C. 257.
- (2) 6 O. C. 367.
- (3) 6 O. C. 239.
- (4) 8 O. C. 361.
- (5) 16 B. 480; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 798.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 116 OF 1916.

September 1, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

KALICHARAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

LAL INDAR SHAH—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Registration Act, (XVI of 1908), s. 49—Lease unregistered, admissibility of, to prove covenant to compensate for improvements—Collateral fact, what is.

An unregistered instrument is admissible in evidence to prove a collateral fact, but to be collateral, the fact must be independent of or separable from the purpose to effect which the law requires registration. [p. 924, col. 1.]

Plaintiff sued defendant for compensation for improvements effected by him while he was a lessee of a village under the defendant, and in support of his claim relied on an unregistered deed of lease which contained an implied condition to compensate him for improvements:

Held, that the deed of lease was inadmissible in evidence under section 49 of the Registration Act, inasmuch as the plaintiff was seeking to prove the terms of the lease for the purpose of enforcing those terms, and not merely for a collateral purpose. [p. 924, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the Divisional Judge, Chhattisgarh Division, dated the 22nd November 1915, in Appeal No. 45 of 1915.

Mr. M. B. Kinkhede, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. B. Tiwari, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff-appellant was a Thekadar of the village of Hathri Kanhar within the Zemindari of Ambagarh Chowki. On the expiry of a previous lease the plaintiff was given a lease for a term of three years commencing from the 6th May 1908. This instrument is unregistered. The defendant-respondent, who is the Zemindar, instituted Suit No. 214 for the ejectment of the plaintiff and he was duly ejected in pursuance of the decree. It was held in that suit that the plaintiff was a lessee from year to year and that his lease was determined by a notice to quit given on the 7th October 1913. The plaintiff now sues for compensation for improvements made by him. He built three houses, sunk a well and made an embankment. The claim for compensation is based upon the allegation that the plaintiff was encouraged by the Zemindar to make these improvements. In support of his claim he has no evidence to tender except the unregistered lease,

KALICHARAN V. LAL INDAR SHAH.

The lower Appellate Court has held the lease to be inadmissible in evidence for want of registration and has dismissed the plaintiff's claim for compensation.

In second appeal it is contended that the lease should have been admitted in evidence as the plaintiff is no longer making any claim to the village. He wants to establish that the Zemindar induced him to make these improvements. The lease contains a covenant not to eject the lessee in case he improved the village and there is also by implication an agreement to compensate for such improvements. The sole question is, therefore, whether in view of the provisions of section 49 of the Registration Act the lease should have been admitted in evidence. Section 49 provides that an instrument which is compulsorily registrable shall not affect any immoveable property comprised therein. So far as this part of the provision is concerned it does not stand in the way of the plaintiff, for the plaintiff does not seek to establish a charge or other interest in the village by reason of his improvements. He merely makes a claim for compensation. But there is another part of the section which lays down that such an instrument shall not be received in evidence of any transaction affecting such property. The expression "affecting such property" governs the word transaction and not "evidence". The contention of the appellant is that in all suits for money the instrument is receivable as evidence. This is a position which cannot be maintained. It is clear law that in a suit for rent the terms of the lease cannot be proved by putting in an unregistered deed of lease. The relationship of landlord and tenant can be proved but not the terms of the contract. As held in Narayan Bisnoi v. Jaswant Singh (1), such an instrument is admissible to prove a collateral fact, but to be collateral, the fact must be independent of or divisible from the purpose to effect which the law requires registration.

When the plaintiff says he seeks to give evidence of an encouragement on the part of the Zemindar, he really means to prove an implied agreement in the lease to compensate him for improvements. This is part and parcel of the lease and the plaintiff cannot prove the terms of the lease when the lease is unregistered. A recent case decided by the High Court of Bombay and cited on behalf of appellant emphasises the distinction between the parties to a contract and proof of the terms of a contract. [Ohhottalal Aditram Travadi v. Bai Mahakore (2).]

None of the cases cited before me seems to have much bearing on the point for decision. In Balaji Teli v. Musammam Bana Bai (3) an unregistered lease was held not admissible in evidence in a suit for damages for breach of contract to retain the defendant in possession of certain lands. In Parmanand v. Birkhu (4) there was not only a claim for damages but also for injunction and the unregistered document was held inadmissible in evidence. In Gangabisan v. Tukaram (5) an unregistered deed of sale was held admissible in support of a claim for specific performance of a contract. The Full Bench in Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Narayana Reddi (6) held that in an action for damages for breach of contract to execute the lease an unregistered kabuliyat was admissible in evidence to prove the contract. Upon a consideration of the cases cited before me I have come to the conclusion that the appellant is not entitled to prove the terms of the lease for the purpose of enforcing those terms. This is giving evidence of the transaction of lease, for which registration was essential.

It is argued that the village is one of the Scheduled Districts and hence the Registration Act does not apply to it, as no notification under the Scheduled Districts Act of 1874 has been issued, but the Registration Act of 1877 and the present Registration Act extend to the whole of British India "except such districts or tracts of country as the Local Government may from time to time with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council exclude from its operation". There is no such notification excluding Ambagarh Chowki from the operation of the Registration Act.

(2) 40 Ind. Cas. 83; 19 Bom. L. R. 322; 41 B. 463.

(3) 1 N. L. R. 47.

(4) 1 Ind. Cas. 903; 5 N. L. R. 21.

(5) 2 Ind. Cas. 244; 5 N. L. R. 70.

(6) 17 M. 456; 4 M. L. J. 198; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 316.

(1) 1 N. L. R. 147.

KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI v. MANNARGHAT RAMANUNNI.

It is contended that some of the covenants in the lease (i. e., those relating to improvements) should be regarded as mere license, and in support of this reliance is placed upon Narsingdas v. Ratanlal (7). I am unable to agree with this contention. The ruling cited does not apply to this case. The lease in this case was not merely a license but was meant to create an interest in immoveable property. The authority to build houses was not given independently of the lease but only as part of the lease. Moreover, it was merely an agreement not to eject the lessee if he makes certain classes of improvements. I cannot, therefore, regard part of the lease as merely creating a license and as such not requiring registration.

The appeal fails and is dismissed, but in the circumstances of the case I direct that each party will bear his own costs of the second appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

(7) 34 Ind. Cas. 471; 12 N. L. R. 75.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 1884 AND 1989 OF 1915.

April 28, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Bakewell.

KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI alias 4th NAIR AVERGAL AND ANOTHER

—DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 AND 3—APPELLANTS

IN S. A. No. 1884 OF 1915—RESPONDENTS

IN S. A. No. 1989 OF 1915

versus

MANNARGHAT RAMANUNNI alias MOOPPIL NAYAR AVERGAL—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT IN S. A. No. 1884 OF 1915—

APPELLANT IN S. A. No. 1989 OF 1915.

Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act (Mad. I of 1909), ss. 3 (3), 5, 6 (3), 7, 9 (1), 19—Claim for compensation—Burden of proof—Settlement as to compensation before date of contract—Commissioner, second, appointment of—Functions of Commissioner—Commissioner's report, value of—Second Commissioner, duties of—Admissions of parties, effect of.

Ordinarily a tenant who claims compensation for improvements under Madras Act I of 1900 is bound to prove that he has improved the property and that he has spent money in making the improvements. He must show that he has done work which has added to the value of the holding, that that work is suitable and that it is also consistent with the object with which he obtained the Kanom. [p. 926, col. 2.]

Under section 5 (1) of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act the tenant against whom a decree in ejectment is passed is only entitled to the value of the improvements made either by himself or by his predecessor-in-title. He is not entitled to the value of the improvements effected by every person other than the landlord. [p. 927, col. 1.]

Thupran v. Mamad Kasim, 17 Ind. Cas. 433, dissented from.

The Courts should not lightly ignore admissions made by parties to proceedings. [p. 927, col. 1.]

The decision in Thiruvattiyil Vattath v. Vishnu Barathikal, 28 Ind. Cas. 339, that if an increase in the income is proved, the presumption is that the tenant has improved the land, is too broadly stated. [p. 928, col. 1.]

The report of a Commissioner appointed by a Court is not equivalent to a judgment which is binding on the parties. Ordinarily, the Commissioner's report should be supplemented by the evidence which he gives in the case. The Commissioner should not only embody the statements of the parties but should give his own opinion on their contentions. [p. 928, col. 1.]

Section 7 of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act deals only with contracts which limit the right of the tenant to make improvements after the date of the contract. [p. 929, col. 1.]

Prima facie every person is entitled to enter into a contract settling the accounts between himself and another or settling the differences between them. If this right of the freedom of contract is to be taken away, it must be by express and clear words, and there is nothing in section 7 of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act which takes away the effect of a settlement as to compensation for improvements effected before the date of the contract. [p. 929, col. 2.]

An order appointing a second Commissioner to assess the compensation should not be regarded as a direction for re-valuation. Re-valuation is a technical term and should be confined to cases mentioned in clause (3) of section 6. [p. 929, col. 2.]

Where a Commissioner has ignored the evidence and sent in a report based on guess work, the direction to a new Commissioner to do that work properly is not a direction to re-value. Consequently the second Commissioner can only take into account the value prevalent when the first Commissioner made his report. [p. 929 col. 2; p. 930, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court, South Malabar, in Appeal Suits Nos. 500 and 501 of 1910, preferred against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Calicut, in Original Suit No. 35 of 1908 (Original Suit No. 8 of 1905, on the file of the Subordinate Judge Palghat).

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Aiyangar (Advocate-General), Messrs. C. Madhavan Nair and P. Appu Nair, for the Appellant in Second Appeal No. 1989 of 1915 and for the Respondent in Second Appeal 1884 of 1915.

KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI v. MANNARGHAT RAMANUNNI.

Messrs. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar and A. Sivarama Menon, for the Respondents in Second Appeal No. 1989 of 1915 and the Appellants in Second Appeal No. 1884 of 1915.

JUDGMENT.

S. A. No. 1989 of 1915.

The plaintiff, a Sthanee, granted a Kanom of the properties in dispute for Rs. 71-6-11 to the 1st defendant in the year 1873—Exhibit D. In 1892 that Kanom was renewed, the amount being fixed at Rs. 3,363-0-9. Exhibit A is the counterpart executed by the 1st defendant in that year. He assigned Exhibit A to the defendants Nos. 2 and 3. The present suit was brought for redemption. The main question related to the value of improvements. The Subordinate Judge awarded the 2nd and 3rd defendants Rs. 19,009-3-7 which was increased by the District Judge in appeal to Rs. 43,552 5-10. Both parties have preferred second appeals. We shall first deal with the plaintiff's appeal. In considering the questions argued before us the contention of Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, who appeared for the tenant, that whatever may be the value of the second appeal, our powers are governed by section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, has to be borne in mind.

Before dealing with the question of improvements, we may at once dispose of that portion of the appeal which complains against the finding that a portion of item No. 5 does not belong to the plaintiff. The learned Advocate-General, while drawing our attention to certain flaws in the reasoning of the Courts below, rightly conceded that there is legal evidence to support the finding. We must, therefore, dismiss the second appeal with costs so far as this item is concerned.

The main contest centred upon the question, whether the defendants are entitled to any compensation for improvements in respect of items Nos. 1 and 2. The Subordinate Judge very summarily disposed of this question on the ground that, as items Nos. 1 and 2 were nilams and as there was no agreement in Exhibits A and B to pay compensation for them, the defendants were not entitled to any. In appeal, the District Judge, although he dealt with the question more fully, has, in our opinion, wrongly thrown the onus of proof upon the plaintiff. Ordinarily, a tenant who claims compensation for improvements is bound to prove that he has improved the property and that he has spent money in making the improvements. Admittedly no account showing the amounts spent on the improvements has been produced. Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar contended that if the tenant can show that the income derivable from the demised property has increased since the date of the Kanom, that would be enough to entitle the tenant to claim compensation for the improvements. It may be conceded that under the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act the Jenmi and the tenant are regarded as co-partners in respect of the additional value imparted to the land by the labour of or by the expenditure of money by the tenant. In this respect the Malabar tenant is placed in a more advantageous position than tenants elsewhere. Nevertheless, prima facie, the tenant must prove certain things. Under section 3, clause 3 of Act I of 1900, improvement has been defined to be "any work or product of a work which adds to the value of the holding, is suitable to it, and consistent with the purpose for which the holding was let, mortgaged, or occupied." Consequently the tenant must show that he has done work which has added to the value of the holding, that the said work is suitable and that it is also consistent with the object with which he obtained the Kanom. As regards the 1st of these requirements there can be no doubt in this case. It is not suggested that the improvements made were not consistent with the Kanom granted by the Jenmi. The tenant has still to prove that an additional value has been imparted to the holding by his work and that the work which he executed was suitable to the holding. If we turn to section 5, it is clear that the burden is upon the tenant to prove, before he claims compensation, that he has made the improvements or that his predecessor-in-interest has made them. The learned Vakil for the tenant contended with reference to section 5 that if there were improvements on the land the tenant in possession is entitled to their value at the time of ejection, if any person other than the landlord had made the improvements.

KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI v. MANNARGHAT RAMANUNNI.

We are unable to agree with this contention. Clause (1) of section 5 makes it clear that the tenant against whom the decree in ejectment is passed is only entitled to the improvements made either by himself or by his predecessor-in-interest. The definition of the word tenant in the Act is not against this view. If Thupran v. Mamad Kasim (1) holds otherwise, we are unable to agree with it. In the present case there are very strong circumstances why the tenant should be called upon to establish his case. In Exhibit A, the counterpart of the lease executed by the 1st defendant, he stated that "excepting items Nos. 1 and 2 which have been entered as nilams in the prior Kanom deeds, as the value of the reclamations of the properties which I have reclaimed at my expense in respect of the other schedule properties by converting them into double crop lands has not been now examined and estimated and settled, you have agreed to give me, etc." This clause in the agreement suggests on the facts of it that the 1st defendant agreed in 1892 that he had made no improvements in respect of items Nos. 1 and 2. It may be that this presumption against him may be rebutted, and that he may be able to show that since that time improvements have been made by him. In that view, the evidence given by him will have to be examined to find out to what extent he has improved the properties and to what compensation he is entitled in consequence of those improvements. The District Judge has not addressed himself to this question. He has not realised the importance of admissions contained in Exhibit A; the decision of the Judicial Committee in Ohandra Kunwar v. Ohaudhri Narpal Singh (2) shows that the admissions of the parties should not be lightly ignored. It is true as pointed out by Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar that the word nilam in Exhibit A does not necessarily show that it was a double crop land. It certainly means arable land. As to whether the 1st defendant has expended money and labour in converting it into double crop land, that is a matter which must depend upon the evidence given in the case. As we said before, Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar's suggestion that whoever might have improved the land, although he be a person between whom and the 1st defendant there is absolutely no connection, still he is entitled before ejectment to claim the value of the improvements, is one which we are unable to accept. Therefore, it was the duty of the 1st defendant to have adduced evidence to prove his case.

There is another circumstance which also throws the burden upon the 1st defendant. In the written statement filed by him, he stated that, though in the demise of 1872 items Nos. 1 and 2 were entered as nilams, all such lands were left uncultivated, that some of the plaint lands were forest lands and were not frequented by people generally. Here again he seems to admit that a great portion of items Nos. 1 and 2 were cultivable lands. Before the first Commissioner, the statements made by him show that he did not lay claim to having made considerable improvements upon these items. In Exhibit 3B he stated, as regards the major portion of item No. 1, that they were originally single crop lands and that they were dug and their level lowered and converted into double crop lands. As regards the other portions he contended that some of them were reclaimed from item No. 5 and others from item No. 6. On the other hand, the plaintiff's Kariasthan contended that all of them were nilams. There seems to have been no suggestion before the Commissioner that the lands were waste and that they were converted into single or double crop lands by the exertion of the 1st defendant. As regards item No. 2, the contention before the 1st Commissioner tended to negative any suggestion that a major portion of that item was reclaimed by the defendant and converted into double crop lands. Under these circumstances, it was the duty of the 1st defendant to have adduced sufficient and clear evidence to establish his right to compensation. The District Judge lays much stress upon the fact that the income at the time of the demise was only 212½ paras of paddy, whereas in a suit brought by the plaintiff for use and occupation he estimated the income at almost 10 times that quantity.

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 433.

(2) 21 A. 184; 4 Bom. L. R. 237; 2 M. L. T. 109; 17 M. L. J. 103; 5 C. L. J. 115; 11 C. W. N. 321; 4 A. L. J. 102 (P. C.).

KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI v. MANNARGHAT RAMANUNNI.

We do not think that the increase in the income is any criterion of increased value having been imparted to the lands by the tenant. It has to be remembered in the first place that Komu Menon, the 1st defendant, was a confidential agent of the Sthanee, and in all likelihood a favourable rent was fixed as against him by his master.

The increase in the net income might be due to a number of other circumstances. The decision in Thiruvattiyil Vattath v. Vishnu Barathikal (3) was quoted as showing that if an increase in the income is proved, the presumption is that the tenant has improved the land. In our opinion the proposition has been too broadly stated. The District Judge has drawn attention to Exhibits Nos. 293 and 296 as showing that some improvements were made in a portion of item No. 1. In the first place, we are not satisfied that A is really a portion of item No. 1. Even granting for argument's sake that it is so, it does not follow that because on a portion of item No. 1 some improvements were made, that is any indication that the whole of that property has similarly been improved. A is less than 2 acres in extent. One other circumstance we must mention before passing away from items Nos. 1 and 2 and it is this: the Commissioners who inspected the place and submitted their report have not given any relevant evidence in the case. There seems to be an impression in Malabar that a report of the Commissioner is equivalent to a judgment which is binding upon the parties. Ordinarily the Commissioner's report should be supplemented by the evidence which he gives in the case. In the present instance, the Commissioner only embodies the statements made by the parties and does not give his own opinion on their contentions. Consequently it is practically of no use. On the whole, we have come to the conclusion that the procedure adopted by the District Judge in throwing the onus upon the plaintiff, in not taking into account the admissions contained in Exhibit A, in attaching artificial importance to the increase in the net income and in not considering the statements made before the first Commissioner vitiate the judgment altogether. We have, therefore, resolved to set aside his judgment in so far as it awards compensation for items Nos. 1 and 2 and to remand the appeal to him for fresh disposal. He will be at liberty to examine the Commissioners who have sent in their reports, with a view to ascertain whether any improvements were made by the 1st defendant; he can also consider any other evidence on the record to which his attention may be drawn by the parties on this question.

As regards item No. 3 we must dismiss the appeal with costs. There is no evidence connecting this item with the decree, Exhibit 252, nor is there any evidence that compensation was estimated by the decree or concluded by a contract between the parties.

As regards items Nos. 4, 5 and 6, the Subordinate Judge fixed a particular sum as the amount of compensation payable to the tenant. The District Judge in appeal relied upon a notification published by the Government in February 1910 regarding valuation. It is true that the decree in ejectment was passed in December 1909. Strictly speaking, the notification of the Government is not evidence of the value of paddy in December 1909. But there can be no question that before the notification was issued inquiries must have been instituted, and having regard to the nearness of time, we see no reason to differ from the conclusion of the District Judge that the value of paddy in December 1909 was the same as that contained in the notification of the Government in February 1910. We must dismiss the appeal so far as these items are concerned with costs.

As regards items Nos. 7 and 8, the position is this: prior to 1872, one Muneappa was the tenant of the Jenmi in respect of these items. After the first defendant obtained the decree, he and the Jenmi sued Muneappa for redemption in 1882. A decree was passed directing the plaintiffs to pay Muneappa Rs. 3,000 and odd. At the time of the renewal in 1892, the 1st defendant was asked to pay this sum to Muneappa and to tack on that amount to his mortgage. The learned Advocate-General contended that this contract comes within the proviso to section 19 of Act I of 1900, as the amount due was settled by a contract in writing and registered. Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, on the other hand, argued that it is section 7 of the Act of 1887 that applies to the contract. It is not necessary to decide whether section 19 of the Act I of 1900 is not really retrospective and consequently as the improvements were claimed under the new Act, whether the question should not be decided with reference to that section. Even granting that section 7 of the Act of 1887 applies, we are unable to hold that the settlement as to compensation come to in 1892 is not binding on the parties. That contract does not take away or limit the right of a tenant. It only settles the amount due under the mortgage at the time of the renewal. We, therefore, fail to see how this provision is obnoxious to section 7. Further we are clear that that section deals only with contracts which limit the right of the tenant to make improvements after the date of the contract. Of course, we are bound by the decision of the Full Bench in Kunhalloor Puthia Veetil Rayarappa Atioli v. Vathukoilath Parkum Punnisseri Kelappa Kurup (4), to read the word 'and' as meaning 'or'. Even in that view what the Legislature prohibits the tenant from binding himself by are (a) contracts not to make any improvements, and (b) contracts settling the amount of the possible improvements in advance. The intention was not to prejudice the rights of the tenants by an a priori agreement without reference to the rights that may come into existence by the tenants working the property in a husbandlike manner. To this exception was added by the Act of 1900 by section 19, which enabled the parties to settle the amount of compensation by a document in writing and registered.

(3) 28 Ind. Cas. 389.

KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI V. MANNARGHAT RAMANUNNI.

The learned Vakil for the respondent drew our attention to Uthungnakath Avuthala v. Thazhathorayil (5). The two learned Judges who composed that Bench took two different views of section 7. Mr. Justice Subramania Aiyar held that all contracts, whether it related to improvements effected before the date of the contract or after, were within the mischief of the section. Mr. Justice (4) 39 Ind. Cas. 741; 32 M. L. J. 110 at p. 117; (1917) M. W. N. 195; 21 M. L. T. 245; 5 L. W. 617; 40 M. 594.

(5) 22 M. 435; 7 M. L. J. 293; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 308.

Davies held that all improvements which were effected after January 1886 were within the section whether they were before or after the contract. With all deference we are unable to agree with either view. We are not at liberty, as Mr. Justice Subramania Aiyar did, to embark upon a conjecture as to the policy of the Legislature where the language of the section is plain and unambiguous. Prima facie, every person is entitled to enter into a contract settling the accounts between him and another, or for settling the differences between them. If this right of the freedom of contract is to be taken away, it must be by express and clear words; and we find nothing in section 7, which takes away the effect of a settlement as to compensation for improvements effected before the date of the contract. As regards the view taken by Mr. Justice Davies, we do not find any words in the section to justify the interpretation placed by the learned Judge.

We must, therefore, reverse the decree of the District Judge as regards the compensation payable for these items. If any new improvements were made since 1892 or if the tenant has done anything to guard, maintain or improve the improvements existing on that date, he will be entitled to compensation in respect of them. Otherwise the tenant is only entitled to the amount mentioned in Exhibit A. The District Judge must now assess any fresh compensation that may be claimed in the light of the above observations. This must be done by the evidence on the record. Costs to be provided for in the revised decree.

IN S. A. No. 1884 of 1915.

In this second appeal Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar argued that the valuation given by the Appellate Court should be re-considered on three grounds:—

(a) In the first place, he argued that the valuation of the paddy at the time when the second Commissioner sent in his report should be taken into account. We do not think the order appointing the second Commissioner to assess the compensation should be regarded as a direction for re-valuation. That is a technical term and should be confined to cases mentioned in clause (3) of section 6. Where a Commissioner has ignored the evidence and sent in a report based on guess work, the direction to a new Commissioner to do that work properly is not a direction to re-value. Consequently the second Commissioner could only take into account the value prevalent when the first Commissioner made his report. The language of section 6 renders this clear. The decision in Veluthemana v. Pathuma (6) also supports this view. See also Kunhammad Kutti v. Panchara Alleema (7). The District Judge is, therefore, right on this question.

JANKI KUER v. KUKUR DUSADH.

(b) The second complaint is that the District Judge is wrong in regarding the supplemental report of the Commissioner as unauthorised. It is clear from the orders to which our attention was drawn that a fresh report was called for. The District Judge is bound to apply his mind to that report.

(c) The third contention is also well founded. At the time of the renewed demise, the Jenmi was under a contract to supply water to the tenant at a fixed rate. On the faith of the contract, the defendant reclaimed the land in such a way as to make it capable of receiving the water. If the contract had not existed, he might have improved the land in some other manner. Consequently we think that under section 9 (1) the tenant's improvement has "caused an increase in the value of the net produce of the holding." The contention of the learned Advocate-General that, as no second crop could have been cultivated in most of the lands if the Jenmi's water was not utilised and—that, therefore, the tenant must be deemed not to have contributed to the increase in the income, does not do justice to the language of the section. In estimating the net produce, the explanation to section 9 shows that the tax payable for the water may be deducted as a cost of the cultivation. The method by which the income was estimated on the basis that no water was supplied is wrong.

We must set aside the decree of the District Judge and remand the appeal for disposal to him in the light of the above observations. No fresh evidence. Costs to abide.

Appeals allowed; Case remanded.

M. C. P.

(6) 17 Ind. Cas. 131.

(7) 33 Ind. Cas. 746; 30 M. L. J. 203.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NOS. 202, 219 TO 222
OF 1917.

January 11, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and Mr. Justice
Jwala Prasad.

Maharani JANKI KUER—APPLICANT

versus

KUKUR DUSADH AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Revision—Jurisdiction—Erroneous decision upon point of law, whether ground for interference.

Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply to cases where the law enunciated by the lower Court is wrong with regard to the discretion vested in it or where the evidence adduced was inadmissible or was misunderstood, inasmuch as all those are errors affecting merely the result of the cogitation of the Court upon the facts submitted to it: they are not errors involving any question of jurisdiction. [p. 931, col. 1.]

Revision from a decision of the Special Judge, Champaran.

Messrs. P. Kennedy and Baikuntha Nath Mittra, for the Applicant.

Mr. Hari Bhushan Mukerji, for Mr. Ambica Prasad Upadhyaya, Messrs. Rajender Prasad, Tribhuan Nath Sahai and Krishna Sahay, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These five cases arise from a decision of the Special Judge of Champaran upon appeals from the Assistant Settlement Officer decreeing in a modified form suits for enhancement of rent upon holdings held under the Bettia Raj. The applicant before us is the Court of Wards acting for the Bettia Raj. The grounds taken in revision are that the limitations put by the Special Judge upon the enhancement applied for were based upon an unlawful exercise of the discretion vested in him by section 35 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The learned Judge in dealing with these cases considered, firstly, the disparity between the prices of staple food crops for the ten years immediately prior to the application for settlement of rent and the prices of those crops during the ten years immediately prior to that period. He ascertained that if the disparity alone be considered, the Raj was entitled to an enhancement of $4\frac{1}{2}$ annas in the rupee, but in view of the fact that the disparity was an abnormal disparity, considered that it would be unfair to give an enhancement of $4\frac{1}{2}$ annas, and, therefore, gave an enhancement of three annas only. Objection is taken to this line of reasoning on two grounds, firstly, that under section 32 it must be taken that the Legislature had considered, before settling periods of ten years as the periods to be compared, all possibility of abnormal rises and falls in specific years. It is argued that the ten years' rule was inserted after full consideration by the Legislative Council and that the discretion vested in the Judge under section 35 was not meant to extend to a modification of the provisions of section 32. It is pointed out in this connection that section 32 itself makes provision for any abnormal rise or fall by giving the Court power to select any period of ten years it chooses as the period to be compared with the period immediately prior to the suit. The second ground taken upon which the proceedings of the Judge should be set aside is, that the whole basis of the argument that the latter years were abnormal years is based, firstly, upon evidence not legally admissible, and secondly, upon a complete misunderstanding of that evidence. With regard to both these points we are of opinion that section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply. It may be that the law enunciated by the learned Judge was wrong with regard to the discretion vested in him. It may be that the evidence adduced was inadmissible. It may be that it was misunderstood. But these are all errors affecting merely the result of the cogitation of the learned Judge upon the facts submitted to him. They are not errors involving any question of jurisdiction. This seems to us to have been the view taken in Madhavray Ganeshpant Ore v. Gulabhai Lallubhai (1) and the date of that decision indicates that the interferences with the decisions of the Courts below quoted in I. L. R. XVIII Bombay had not the approval of the Divisional Bench responsible for the latter decision. The latest case upon the point is Balakrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar (2), in which at page 58* their Lordships of the Judicial

JANKI KUER v. KUKUR DUSADH.

(1) 23 B. 177; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 116.

(2) 40 Ind. Cas. 650; 22 C. W. N. 50; 15 A. L. J. 645; 2 P. L. W. 101; 33 M. L. J. 69; 26 C. L. J. 143; 19 Bom. L. R. 715; (1917) M. W. N. 628; 40 M. 793; 6 L. W. 501; 11 Bur. L. T. 48 (P. C.).

*Page of 22 C. W. N.—Ed.

Committee held that the section is not directed against conclusions of law or fact in which a question of jurisdiction is not involved. It is to be noted further that in Sajivan Mahto v. Gulab Chand Lal (3) the Hon'ble the Chief Justice was of opinion that the decision of the District Court upon a point of law was manifestly erroneous. He declined to interfere on the ground that no appeal lay, and contented himself with pointing out the error of the District Court in order that a similar error might not be committed in future. In the case before us we are not prepared to discuss the question whether there was any error of law in the decision of the Special Judge, but must draw attention to the danger of an implied promise to the tenants of the estate contained in the judgment before us. The learned Judge says: "I may state here that I propose to follow this decision in all future appeals from the Bettiah Sub-Division, whether or not the Assistant Settlement Officer may have stated the case as he has done in the present judgment, unless special reasons for departing from it are made out. The reasons given for the present decision are of general application, and it would not be fair that decisions should vary because one Assistant Settlement Officer states the same case differently from another. If Second Appeal No. 13 of 1916 were now before me I should decide it differently on this point." The Court of Wards naturally anticipates that the special reasons referred to in this passage must be reasons not hitherto advanced. We have no doubt that this is not the true meaning of the passage. Inasmuch as no appeal lies from the judgment of the Special Judge, we are confident that all further appeals will be heard upon their merits, and the arguments on the points urged again considered. The learned Judge has been moved to change his opinion already in one direction. It may be that on further consideration he may be moved to change it in another. We may note for instance that there is said to be authority for the proposition that Government publications are not admissible in evidence. This is a point which should be considered before quotations are allowed from Administration reports. Farther it is said that the Court of Wards will be able to put before the Court at the next hearing figures which will show that it is possible to divide the thirty years for which price lists have been kept in this province, into not less than twenty successive decennial periods. If it is shown as the result of the comparison of twenty successive decennial periods that the tendency in any given direction has been steady, it can no longer be said that there is in the conditions of any one period anything abnormal. These points no doubt will be regarded as special reasons for reconsideration of the judgment now before us. For the reasons stated the applications fail and are rejected with costs, two gold mohurs in each case.

(3) 35 Ind. Cas. 678; 1 P. L. J. 409

HAZARILAL MOTILAL v. SHYANIBABU.

Applications rejected.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 508 OF 1917.

April 6, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C.

HAZARILAL MOTILAL—APPELLANT
versus

SHYANIBABU AND ANOTHER—

RESPONDENTS.

C. P. Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881), s. 69, applicability of—Settlement record, entry in, suit for correction of—Limitation applicable.

Section 69 of the C. P. Land Revenue Act relates to disputes as to whether or not land admittedly belonging to one particular proprietor is sir land or not. It has no application whatever to disputes as to whether A or B is the proprietor of a plot of land.

The special rule of limitation laid down in section 69 (4) of the C. P. Land Revenue Act has, therefore, no application whatever to a suit brought for the correction of a settlement entry in which the defendant has been recorded as a proprietor instead of as an occupancy tenant of sir land.

Appeal from the decree of the Additional District Judge, Saugor, in Civil Appeal No. 45 of 1917, decided on the 24th August 1917.

Mr. G. L. Subhedar, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—The lower Courts in this case have dismissed the suit solely on the ground of limitation, holding that the special period of one year laid down in sub section (4) of section 69 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act is applicable to the case.

Section 69 relates to disputes as to whether or not land admittedly belonging to one particular proprietor is sir land or not sir land. Section 69 has no application whatever to disputes as to whether A or B is the proprietor of land. In this case the plaintiffs' claim is that they are the proprietors of the land and that the defendant is only their occupancy tenant. They complain that at the settlement the defendant No. 1 was recorded as proprietor instead of as occupancy tenant. The mistake alleged to have occurred is that whereas defendant No. 1 was formerly the proprietor of the land as his sir and he has now ceased to be proprietor and has now become occupancy tenant; he is still wrongly recorded as proprietor of sir land instead of as occupancy tenant of the land which was formerly sir. If the plaintiffs fail in their case, they can have no possible objection to the defendant No. 1 being recorded as sir proprietor instead of ordinary proprietor. The question whether the land should be recorded as sir or not, does not arise in this case. The sole question is whether or not plaintiff is the proprietor and defendant No. 1 the tenant. The special rule of limitation laid down in section 69 (4) of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act has, therefore, no application whatever to the case. The case has been decided on wrong grounds and is remanded to the lower Appellate Court for further trial with reference to the above remarks. It is to be observed that the plaintiffs complain that the settlement entry is incorrect but they have filed no copy of the settlement entry to which they object. Before the suit can be properly decided, the plaintiffs must be called upon to file a copy of the entry to which they object and which they say is wrong. A refund certificate will issue. Other costs will be costs in the suit.

Case remanded.

AZIZ KHAN V. DUNI CHAND.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

April 16, 1918.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Lord Dunedin,
Lord Sumner, Sir John Edge and Mr.
Ameer Ali.

AZIZ KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

DUNI CHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Mortgage—Interest, high rate of—Transaction improvident—Hardship—Relief, whether can be given.

Even where a transaction appears to be undoubtedly improvident, in the absence of any evidence to show that the mortgagee has taken undue advantage of his position, a Court of Justice cannot give relief to the mortgagor on grounds of simple hardship. [p. 934, col. 1.]

Appeal from a judgment and decree of the Chief Court of the Punjab (Mr. Justice Agnew and Mr. Justice Shadi Lal) in Appeal No. 928 of 1912, dated the 15th July 1913, reported as 20 Ind. Cas. 812, reversing a decree of the Divisional Judge, Attock.

Mr. Erfan Ali, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.

MR. AMEER ALI.—This is an appeal from a judgment and decree of the Chief Court of the Punjab, dated the 15th July 1913, and arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff in the Court of the District Judge of Attock for the redemption of two mortgages in respect of a large tract of land in that district of which he has acquired by purchase a one-third share.

It appears that the lands in suit belonged originally to one Bahadoor Khan, who on the 23rd May 1878 gave it in usufructuary mortgage to the defendant-respondent for a term of fifteen years. The amount borrowed on that mortgage was Rs. 400 and it was stipulated that the mortgagee should receive the rents and profits in lieu of interest, and that at the end of the fifteen years the mortgagor should be entitled to take back the property on payment of the principal amount borrowed. In 1881, Bahadoor borrowed from the defendant another sum of Rs. 550 on mortgage of the same property. The document in respect of this loan is dated the 17th January 1881. It recites the first mortgage and states the money now borrowed is Rs. 550, the total debt being Rs. 950; it then provides that for four years the money borrowed should carry no interest; that after four years if the debt is unpaid it should bear interest at 25 per cent. per annum, and in case of default in the annual payment of interest it should be calculated at compound rate.

In the suit the plaintiff claimed to redeem on the basis of the first mortgage, his contention being that the second mortgage, owing to ambiguity, was void under the provisions of section 29 of the Indian Contract Act. The defendant, on the other hand, contended that the plaintiff could only redeem on payment of the whole mortgage debt with compound interest at the contractual rate, amounting in the aggregate to over a lakh of rupees. The District Judge held, in substance, that, although the second mortgage was somewhat ambiguous, the meaning of the parties was sufficiently clear, viz., that interest should be chargeable only on Rs. 550. He held further that the contract as to compound interest was unconscionable entered into by the mortgagor when he "was under pressure amounting to undue influence." He accordingly decreed redemption upon payment by the plaintiff of the sum of Rs. 950 with simple interest on Rs. 550 at the rate of 25 per cent. from the date of the second mortgage to date of suit, which amounted to something like Rs. 3,351. With the principal the total amount decreed came to Rs. 4,301.

From this decree the defendant appealed to the Divisional Judge, who was of opinion that the plaintiff was bound by the mortgagor's contract to pay compound interest. But as the defendant had claimed in appeal only Rs. 10,000 in addition to the amount decreed by the first Court, and as this amount, in his opinion, was considerably below what was actually due, he varied the District Judge's decree by increasing the amount to be paid by the plaintiff in order to enforce redemption to Rs. 14,301, but restricted the redemption to one-third of the property mortgaged.

The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the Chief Court on the same ground he had urged in the Courts below. The learned Judges have held that although the language of the second mortgage is by no means free from ambiguity, the interpretation offered by the Counsel for the respondents appeared to them clear and consistent, viz., that the first mortgage was subject to its own conditions; that the loan under the second mortgage was to carry no interest for four years; that after four years interest was payable on it annually at the rate of 25 per cent. and in default of such annual payment of interest, compound interest was chargeable; and that the amount borrowed plus such interest was repayable at any time after four years from the date of the mortgage. They also held that there was no evidence that the contract as to compound interest was entered into under pressure or undue influence. They accordingly dismissed the plaintiff's appeal as regards the amount, but varied the Divisional Judge's decree by declaring that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the entire property on payment of the Rs. 14,301-7-9.

VINAYAKRAO KRISHNARAO v. BAIJNATH SALIGRAM.

Their Lordships see no reason to interfere with the judgment and decree of the Chief Court. The interpretation of the second document on which the learned Judges have proceeded appears to their Lordships reasonable and consistent. The transaction was undoubtedly improvident, but in the absence of any evidence to show that the money-lender had unduly taken advantage of his position, it is difficult for a Court of Justice to give relief on grounds of simple hardship.

Their Lordships will accordingly advise His Majesty that the appeal should be dismissed but without costs, as the respondents do not appear.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 51 OF 1918.

December 5, 1918.

[Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman, J. C.]

VINAYAKRAO KRISHNARAO

—DEFENDANT—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—

APPELLANT

versus

BAIJANATH SALIGRAM—

PLAINTIFF—DECREE-HOLDER—

RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 6, Sch. I, Art. 151, applicability of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 5 (2)—Mortgage suit—Final decree, application for—Limitation—Minority of applicant, effect of.

Section 6 of the Limitation Act applies solely to the time for the institution of a suit or the time for an application for an execution of a decree. It does not apply to an application to make a decree absolute. [p. 935, col. 1.]

Nizam-ud-din Shah v. Bohra Bhim Sen, 43 Ind. Cas. 870; 40 A. 203; 16 A. L. J. 85, followed.

A mortgage suit remains pending until a final decree is passed. An application for a final decree in a mortgage suit being governed by the Code of Civil Procedure is subject to the limitation prescribed by Article 181 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act. [p. 935, col. 2; p. 836, col. 1.]

Digamber v. Ganpat, 33 Ind. Cas. 496; 12 N. L. R. 50 and Lakshmi Achi v. Subbarama Aiyar, 29 Ind. Cas. 142; 39 M. 488 at p. 492; 2 L. W. 403; 28 M. L. J. 490; (1915) M. W. N. 327; 17 M. L. T. 385, followed.

Appeal from a final decree passed on 2nd March 1918, in the Mortgage Suit No. 19 of 1910, passed by the Additional District Judge, Saugor.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmoorty, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. L. Subhedar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of the case out of which this appeal arises may be briefly stated.

The plaintiff, who was then a minor, obtained on the 19th October 1910 a preliminary decree for sale of immoveable property on foot of a mortgage. On the 1st October 1917 he applied under rule 5 (2), Order XXXIV, 1st Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code, for a final decree for sale alleging that he had reached the age of 18 on the 30th September 1917. The 30th September 1917 was a Sunday. The mortgagor did not oppose the application but the present appellant, who purchased the mortgaged property pendente lite, contended that the plaintiff attained majority in June 1914 and that in any case the application was time-barred, section 6 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, having no application. The lower Court found on the evidence adduced by the plaintiff that he was born on the 1st October 1896, and this conclusion is now accepted by the appellant though impeached in one of the grounds of appeal. The learned Additional District Judge held also that section 6 of the Limitation Act, which he wrongly cited as section 7, applies to applications generally and is not confined to applications for execution of decrees. From the fact that Maharaj Kumar Guneswar Singh v. Jagadhatri Pershad Narain Singh (1), a case decided in 1898, was cited in support of this conclusion as well as from the citation of section 7 it appears that the Judge had not before him a copy of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) now in force.

VINAYAKRAO KRISHNARAO v. BAIJNATH SALIGRAM.

The plaintiff having obtained a final decree for sale, the purchaser of the mortgaged property has preferred this appeal. That section 6 of the Limitation Act will not help the plaintiff-respondent is conceded on his behalf by his learned Advocate and there is clear authority against the view taken by the lower Court, in Nizam-ud-din Shah v. Bohra Bhim Sen (2), where it was pointed out that the section applies solely to the time for the institution of a suit or the time for an application for the execution of a decree.

The appellant contends on the authority of Digamber v. Ganpat (3), Nizam-ud-din Shah v. Bohra Bhim Sen (2), above cited, and Lakshmi Achi v. Subbarama Aiyar (4) that a mortgage suit remains pending until a final decree is passed and that the application for a final decree, being governed by the Code of Civil Procedure, is subject to the limitation prescribed by Article 181 of the Limitation Schedule now in force.

For the respondent reliance is placed upon Madhab Moni Dasi v. Pamela Lambert (5), where it was held that Article 181 does not govern an application for an order absolute under rule 3, Order XXXIV. The case, however, must be distinguished on the ground that the preliminary decree for foreclosure was obtained before the present Code of Civil Procedure came into operation. As pointed out by Jenkins, C.J., in Amolak Chand v. Sharat Chandra (6), the Judges expressly refrained from deciding that the present Code applied and in fact treated the case as not falling under that Code by directing that an order absolute should be made.

Before the Code of 1908 came into force, the Calcutta High Court had long held that there was no period of limitation within which a mortgagee was bound to apply for an order absolute for sale in a suit brought for sale of the mortgaged property. The ratio decidendi was that the application was one to obtain a supplementary decree, that the general Article (178 now 181) was the only Article that could possibly be applied and that the said Article applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure. A similar view prevailed in this Court [see Tallappa v. Dattu (7) and Jaka v. Jamna (8)]. This view, however, is no longer tenable after the decisions of the Privy Council in Batuk Nath v. Munni Dei (9), Abdul Majid v. Jawahir Lal (10), and Munna Lal Parruck v. Surat Ohunder Mukerji (11). Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee have plainly approved of the position taken by the Allahabad High Court that an application for an order absolute for foreclosure or sale under the Transfer of Property Act was an application to execute or enforce the conditional decree and that the period of limitation was, therefore, three years from the date of the decree. The conflict of decisions above mentioned has now been removed by transferring to the Civil Procedure Code the provisions relating to mortgage decrees and by laying down that what follows the first decree is not an order for sale or foreclosure but a decree for sale or foreclosure. Such an application as that in the present case is, therefore, not one for execution of the first decree and consequently neither Article 182 of the Limitation Schedule nor section 6 of the Limitation Act applies. That Article 181 is

(7) 5 C. P. L. R. 61.

(8) 16 C. P. L. R. 114.

(9) 23 Ind. Cas. 644; 36 A. 284; 18 C. W. N. 740; 12 A. L. J. 596; 19 C. L. J. 574; 16 Bom. L. R. 360; 27 M. L. J. 1; 16 M. L. T. 1; 1 L. W. 729; (1914) M. W. N. 437; 41 I. A. 104 (P. C.).

(10) 23 Ind. Cas. 649; 36 A. 350; (1914) M. W. N. 485; 27 M. L. J. 17; 12 A. L. J. 624; 16 Bom. L. R. 395; 18 C. W. N. 963; 19 C. L. J. 626; 16 M. L. T. 44; 1 L. W. 483 (P. C.).

(11) 27 Ind. Cas. 683; 42 C. 776; 2 L. W. 282; 17 M. L. T. 120; 21 C. L. J. 118; 19 C. W. N. 561; 17 Bom. L. R. 408; 25 M. L. J. 470; 42 I. A. 88 (P. C.).

(1) 3 C. W. N. 24.

(2) 43 Ind. Cas. 870; 40 A. 203; 16 A. L. J. 85.

(3) 33 Ind. Cas. 496; 12 N. L. R. 50.

(4) 29 Ind. Cas. 142; 39 M. 488 at p. 492; 2 L. W. 403; 28 M. L. J. 490; (1915) M. W. N. 327; 17 M. L. T. 385.

(5) 6 Ind. Cas. 537; 37 C. 796; 15 C. W. N. 337; 12 C. L. J. 328.

(6) 11 Ind. Cas. 943; 38 C. 913 at p. 922; 16 C. W. N. 49.

RAM SUNDER SAHU v. RAM NARAIN SAHU.

applicable was held in Madho Ram v. Nihal Singh (12) and Ramji Lal v. Karan Singh (13).

The view I have taken is in accord with that of a Bench of this Court in Chunnilal v. Tikamdas (14), where it is held that the limitation for an application under rule 6, Order XXXIV, is that prescribed by Article 181. The appeal succeeds, the final decree for sale passed by the lower Court is set aside and the application for such a decree is dismissed.

The appellant will pay the costs incurred by the respondent for translating documents, as the translations were required in connection with the ground of appeal, which contests the finding that the respondent did not attain majority till the 1st October 1914. The other costs in this Court will be borne by the respondent. The appellant will pay the costs incurred by the respondent for witnesses in the lower Court, but all the other costs in that Court will be paid by the respondent.

Appeal accepted.

(12) 30 Ind. Cas. 494; 38 A. 21; 13 A. L. J. 935.

(13) 40 Ind. Cas. 424; 39 A. 532; 15 A. L. J. 448.

(14) 39 Ind. Cas. 854; 13 N. L. R. 76.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 129 OF 1917.

December 10, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and Mr. Justice Coutts.

RAM SUNDER SAHU—APPELLANT

versus

RAM NARAIN SAHU AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42, scope of—Declaration of past right, suit for, maintainability of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 41—Transfer by ostensible owner—Transferee, position of—Enquiry, reasonable, effect of.

Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act provides for the declaration of a present legal character or a present legal right. It has no application to a case where the plaintiff seeks a declaration as to a right which has ceased to exist. [p. 938, col. 1.]

Defendant purchased a mahal from the farzidar of the plaintiff after making reasonable enquiries which satisfied him that the farzidar was the real owner of the mahal;

Held, that the defendant being a bona fide purchaser for value from the ostensible owner, the plaintiff was debarred by section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act from setting up his title to the mahal. [p. 939, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Mozafferpore.

Messrs. Sayed Hasan Imam, M. Yunus, Lakshmi Narain Sinha and Shiveshwar Dayal, for the Appellant.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, Fakhruddin, Rai Gurnu Saran Prasad and Nirsu Narain Sinha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

COURTS, J.—This was a suit in respect of a certain temporarily settled estate called Chak Jalal Charidar Diari, bearing No. 11918 on the revenue roll of the District of Muzaffarpur. We do not know much about the history of this estate, but it appears to have been settled by Government for short terms of years from about the year 1842. In the year 1896 default was made in payment of revenue by the proprietors and according to the case of Ram Narain Sahu, the plaintiff, who was one of the defaulting proprietors, he purchased at the sale in the name of a servant of his, named Kuldip Narain. What was purchased at the sale was the right, title and interest of the settlement holders who were holding for a term of years. After the expiry of this term there were further settlements by Government with Kuldip Narain, the last settlement being for 3 years from 1st April 1913 to the 1st of March 1916, and the plaintiff's case is that all these settlements were really made with him in the name of Kuldip Narain. In December 1913 Kuldip was very ill and as he appeared to be dying the plaintiff alleges that in order to protect the property from the heirs of Kuldip, he got the latter to execute a Kobala in the names of his brothers. There was delay in registration of the Kobala and Kuldip died before it was registered. After his death registration was applied for but execution was denied by Kuldip's heirs and registration was refused. Subsequently in February 1914, Kuldip's minor son Harender Prosad, defendant No. 6, through his mother executed a Kobala in favor of Ram Sunder Sahu, defendant No. 5. Ram Sunder got his name registered and appeals to the Collector and Commissioner by Ram Narain were in-fructuous. Ram Sunder did not at once get possession, but in April 1916 he got settlement from Government for 3 years and in a case under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, he got possession. This case was after the institution of the present suit. In his plaint Ram Narain asked that it might be declared that Chak Jalal was held in Milkia by him; that Kuldip Narain was his Farzidar, and that the defendants had got no right in the Mahal. Further having been dispossessed in the case under section 144 the plaintiff asked that he might be put back into possession. The defendants raised various pleas which appear sufficiently from the issues framed in the case, which were as follows:—

RAM SUNDER SAHU v. RAM NARAIN SAHU.

1. Whether the Secretary of State for India in Council is a necessary party to the suit?

2. Whether section 36 of Act XI of 1859 bars this suit? Is the plaintiff otherwise estopped from prosecuting the suit?

3. Whether the defendant 2nd party Ram Sunder Sahu is a bona fide purchaser for value and is the plaintiff estopped from disputing his title?

4. Whether Kuldip Narain was a Farzidar of the plaintiff and whether the plaintiff has got any title to the Mouza in suit?

5. Whether the defendant 1st party has been improperly made defendant in the suit?

6. Whether the defendants are entitled to confirmation of possession?

7. To what relief, if any, the plaintiff is entitled?

The learned Subordinate Judge found the first four issues in favour of the plaintiff. But in view of the fact that it was outside the jurisdiction of the Court to decide whether Government was justified in giving settlement to the defendant, he declined to give a decree for possession. He has, however, passed a decree declaring that the plaintiff was the real auction-purchaser of the temporarily settled Mahal, Chak Jalal Charidar Diara; that he was a settlement holder up to March 1916, and that Kuldip Narain was his Farzidar. He, however, held that the defendants Nos. 1 to 4 were not necessary parties. Against this decree the defendant Ram Sunder has appealed and there is a cross-appeal against the decision of issue No. 5 declaring that defendants Nos. 1 to 4 had no interest in the property. The plaintiff's cross-appeal has not been pressed and I would dismiss it without costs.

Two points have been argued in the appeal by Ram Sunder Sahu: (1) that section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act is a bar to the suit, and (2) that the decree is bad in view of the provisions of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. I will deal with the latter point first. The first clause of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act runs as follows:—"Any person entitled to any legal character, or to any right as to any property, may institute a suit against any person denying, or interested to deny, his title to such character or right, and the Court may in its discretion make therein a declaration that he is so entitled and the plaintiff need not in such suit ask for any further relief." The question, in the present case, is whether the plaintiff is entitled to any legal character or to any right as to any property which would entitle him to a declaration such as has been given. With regard to this point the portion of the decree with which we are concerned, runs as follows:—"It may be declared that the plaintiff is the real auction-purchaser of the temporarily settled Mahal, Chak Jalal Charidar Diara, and that he is the settlement holder up to March 1916, and Kuldip Narain Singh was his Farzidar." On the face of it this is not a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to any present legal character or that he has any present right to the property in dispute. The learned Subordinate Judge realised this, for he says in his judgment: "It may at first appear that it (the declaration) can be of no practical use to the plaintiff", but he continues as follows:—"as Chak Jalal is a temporarily settled estate, the property of a private individual, and as some right is reserved to the last settlement holder as is indicated by Kuldip Narain's Patta, Exhibit 16, clause 4, namely, the right to receive some Malikana in case of refusal to take fresh settlement, and as it further indicates that settlement would be offered in the first instance to the last settlement holders, I think the declaration will be of great use to the plaintiff in approaching the Government and asking for a temporary settlement with him after the expiry of the term of the present settlement, even if it is conceded that he cannot do so now." Now it is not and it cannot be contended that Government would either with or without this declaration be bound to give the plaintiff a settlement and it is in fact almost certain that Government, when they knew the facts, would not give a settlement. They would certainly not give a settlement if Kuldip Narain is not his Farzidar and even assuming, as the learned Subordinate Judge has found, that Kuldip Narain was his Farzidar, he is a co-proprietor who has gone behind the backs of his co-sharers and has got a settlement by means of a Farzi transaction. This would certainly not find favour with Government and in fact it would appear that it has not done so, for settlement has, as I have already said, been made with the defendant Ram Sunder in 1916, who has also got his name registered in the Collectorate. The decree, therefore, in so far as any settlement is concerned, could be nothing more than a recommendation to Government. It was no declaration of a present legal character or a legal right, and it is not within the scope of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act.

RAM SUNDER SAHU v. RAM NARAIN SAHU.

The learned Subordinate Judge, however, seems to think that by reason of a certain clause in Kuldip Narain's Patta of 1910 the declaration which he has given will assist the plaintiff in getting Malikana. The clause runs as follows:—"That at the end of the aforesaid period of settlement you shall have the right to a renewal of the settlement on the revenue that may be fixed. If you do not take the settlement on the revenue that be then fixed, you shall be entitled to receive Malikana at the usual rates." The plaintiff, however, never asked for a declaration that he was entitled to receive Malikana nor has any such declaration been made. All that the Subordinate Judge intends by the declaration is that it shall help the plaintiff in the event of his making a claim for Malikana and apparently conveying a pious hope that he may get it. The declaration then in regard to this also is nothing more than a recommendation to Government from the Subordinate Judge and is not within the scope of section 42. Apart from this there is, in my opinion, no ground for the finding of the Subordinate Judge that the plaintiff can have any right to re-settlement Malikana. He relies on the Patta of 1910, but the Patta under which Kuldip was holding when he died was a Patta of 1913, which has not been produced. Ram Sunder's Patta of 1916, Exhibit T, however, has been produced and it contains no provisions for either re-settlement or payment of Malikana and there is nothing to show whether the Patta of 1913 was similar to the Patta of 1910 or to that of 1916. In fact as the onus was on the plaintiff and as he has not produced the Patta of 1913, there is a suspicion that if he did produce it, it would be against him. In any case in the absence of the Patta, I am not prepared to accept the view of the learned Subordinate Judge that there is any provision in it for either Malikana or for settlement.

I now come to the question whether section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act is a bar to the suit. This section runs as follows:—"Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the person interested in immoveable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it, provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith." So far as the first part of the section is concerned, it is not even suggested that the plaintiff has any case. The question is whether, as required by the proviso, Ram Sunder took reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer and acted in good faith. On this point, it seems to me, there can be no doubt. Ram Sunder says that at the time he made the purchase he made inquiries about the title of Kuldip Narain and what he did was to consult Register D, to make inquiries from the raiyats of Chak Jalal and to consult his Mukhtear named Badri Narain. The register showed the name of Kuldip and Badri Narain got for him copies of documents relating to

RAM SUNDER SAHU v. RAM NARAIN SAHU.

Chak Jalal. These copies, he says, related to a suit between Kuldip Narain and Ramdhari, to a dakhil kharij case between Ram Charitar and Ram Narain and to a Kat-band case between Kuldip and the tenants of Chak Jalal. There was also a copy of a deposition and a copy of judgment in a Balabandi case between Kuldip Narain and Lalji Babu. Now we have on the record most of these documents. The first of them to which I shall refer is the deposition of Ram Narain in the dakhil kharij case with Ram Charitar and related to a village called Dandpur, which the applicant said was owned by him and was in his possession. In the course of that deposition, which was made before the Sub-Deputy Collector on 1st October 1910, Ram Narain stated:—"Village Chak Adam is in the name of Gobind Shah. No other milkiat excepting the village in dispute stands in others' name as benami." This clearly indicates that the plaintiff had no Malikana right in the lands in the present suit Chak Jalal. Again on 16th March 1911 deposing to another suit the plaintiff stated:—"Mouza Chak Jalal Diara formerly belonged to me. It was sold for arrears of Government revenue. Kuldip Narain is in possession of the Mouza as auction-purchaser since it was sold for arrears of Government revenue. I can swear I have no concern with the present settlement of the Mouza."

The next document is Exhibit N, a plaint in a suit between Kuldip Narain and Ramdhari. The suit was in respect of a piece of land in Chak Jalal. The suit was compromised and nowhere was there any suggestion made that Kuldip Narain was a Farzidar of Ram Narain or that Ram Narain had anything to do with the Mouza.

The next document to which I will refer is a judgment in a suit brought by Kuldip against one Bindeswari Prosad, who was the proprietor of a neighbouring Mouza, for a certain piece of land which Kuldip Narain claimed as a part of Chak Jalal. In that suit one of the issues was whether the plaintiff was a benamidar of Ram Narain Sahu and after going into the evidence very fully the Subordinate Judge, who heard the suit, found that Kuldip Narain was not the benamidar of Ram Narain.

This then was the evidence on which Ram Sunder relied, and on these documents it is difficult to understand what other conclusion he could have arrived at than that Kuldip Narain was the real settlement holder. I fail also to understand what more he could have done to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer. The learned Subordinate Judge has said that as Badri Narain has not been examined, he has no materials to decide whether the papers which were read over to Ram Sunder were sufficient to lead a reasonable man to be satisfied with what they embodied. But, as I have already pointed out, these documents are on the record and they are, in my opinion, more than sufficient to satisfy any reasonable man that Ram Narain had nothing to do with the Chak Jalal estate. The learned Subordinate Judge seems to think that Ram Sunder Sahu should have insisted on the production of the original sale-certificate by which Kuldip Narain purchased. But there was very little object in this, because this was a temporarily settled estate. The sale-certificate merely transferred the right, title and interest of the remainder of the temporary settlement and Ram Sunder was perfectly justified in relying on the terms of the settlement which was running at the time when he made the purchase, and this he knew was in the name of Kuldip Narain. It appears then that up till the time when Ram Sunder applied for registration of his name, Ram Narain had never suggested that he was the real owner and in fact had on oath specifically denied his connection with the Mouza. Under these circumstances, I am satisfied that whether Kuldip Narain was the Farzidar of Ram Narain or not, Ram Sunder made all reasonable inquiries and acted in good faith. For the above reasons, therefore, I would set aside the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge and would decree this appeal with costs.

In conclusion I would note that Ram Narain has committed gross perjury. In his examination on oath before the Sub-Deputy Collector Babu Suresh Chander Deb on 1st October 1910 he stated that "Village Chak Adam is in the name of Gobind Shah. No other milkiat excepting the village in dispute stands in other's name as benami." Again in his statement before the Munsif of Hajipur on 16th March 1911 he stated: "Mouza Chak Jalal Diara formerly belonged to me. It was sold for arrears of Government revenue. Kuldip Karain is in possession of the Mouza as auction-purchaser, since it was sold for arrears of Government revenue. I can swear that I have no concern with the present settlement of the Mouza." In the present suit Ram Narain has stated on oath before the Subordinate Judge on 22nd January 1917: "Chak Jalal was sold for arrears of revenue in 1896. It was I who purchased it. It was in the name of my servant Kuldip Narain that I purchased." It is impossible to reconcile these statements and I would direct that he be called on to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for perjury.

SUBBARAYA PILLAI v. SATHANATHA PANDARAM.

ROE, J.—I entirely agree that the plaintiff has no present title in this estate and that, therefore, he is not entitled to a decree under the Specific Relief Act.

I also agree that the plaintiff should be prosecuted for perjury. Let notice be issued to him to show cause why a direction for his prosecution should not be made under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. The 6th of January next may be fixed for hearing.

Appeal decreed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER NO. 126 OF 1917.

April 23, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and Mr. Justice Napier.

SUBBARAYA PILLAI—RESPONDENT—

APPELLANT

versus

SATHANATHA PANDARAM—PETITIONER—
—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 145, applicability of, to surety bonds executed outside Court.

Section 145, Civil Procedure Code, is confined to cases where the liability of the surety has been entered into in the face of the Court or has been recorded by Court in accordance with the provisions of the Code. It does not extend to surety bonds taken by a judgment-creditor outside the Court. [p. 943, col. 1.]

Lakshmi Narain Khanna v. Guru Datta Mehra, 18 Ind. Cas. 859, dissented from.

Appeal against the order of the District Court, Tanjore, dated 30th July 1917, in Appeal Suit No. 754 of 1916, preferred against the order of the Court of the District Munsif, Tiruvalur, in Execution Petition No. 355 of 1916, in Original Suit No. 110 of 1913, on the file of the Court of the District Munsif, Tiruturaiundi, under execution in the Court of the District Munsif, Tiruvalur.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. N. S. Rangaswami Ayyangar for Mr. T. Narasimha Aiyangar, for the Appellant.—The wording of section 145 clearly shows that that section is co-related to several provisions in the Code itself which provide for the taking of security bonds, such security bonds being of course given to Court or filed in Court. Compare section 145 with Order XLI, rules 1, 5, 6; Order XXXVIII, rule 2, section 55, Civil Procedure Code. In all such cases there can at no time be any question as to the liability of the surety and so summary realisation by execution of the decrees or order against the surety is reasonable. On the other hand in cases where a person is alleged to have become surety by an agreement outside the Court, there will be the necessity to inquire into the factum or validity of such agreement itself; and to such cases summary process is unsuitable. Baboo Ram Kishen Doss v. Hurkhoo Sing (1), Gujendro Narain Roy v. Hemanginee Dossee (2) and Abdool Kureem v. Abdool Huq Kazei (3). Cases decided under the Code of 1859, which so far as this portion of the section is concerned was not materially different from the present section, all show that the section was understood to apply to bonds given to or filed in Court and taken under the provisions of the Code in that behalf. Mr. S. Muthiah Mudaliar, for the Respondent, relied on Lakshmi Narain Khanna v. Guru Datta Mehra (4) and the unqualified language of the section itself.

JUDGMENT.

NAPIER, J.—The sole question raised in this second appeal is whether section 145 of the Code of Civil Procedure applies to surety bonds taken by the judgment-creditors

(1) 7 W. R. 329.

(2) 13 W. R. 35; 4 B. L. R. App. 27.

(3) 15 W. R. 21; 8 B. L. R. 205.

(4) 16 Ind. Cas. 859.

SUBBARAYA PILLAI v. SATHANATHA PANDARAM.

outside Court. The counter-petitioner in the case executed a surety bond in favour of the plaintiff in Original Suit No. 110 of 1913 in the Court of the District Munsif of Tiruturaipundi, in consideration for which the plaintiff-petitioner stayed execution of his decree against the defendant. He now seeks execution of the decree against the surety and objection is raised that section 145 does not apply. The District Munsif held that section 145 applies to cases in which the surety bond was put into Court before final orders were passed on the prior execution petition. The District Judge, on appeal, held that the section is of general application and allowed execution to proceed. It is somewhat remarkable that the exact point has not been decided before now and it seems to be generally admitted that the proceedings under this section have not generally been taken in respect of surety bonds not given before the Court. My learned brother, who has an unrivalled experience in these matters, tells me that he has never known of such an application. It cannot be denied, however, that the language of the section is wide enough to include such surety bonds. But it is argued that the sub-sections (a), (b) and (c), which describe the classes of surety bonds affected by the section, all in terms refer to bonds taken before the Court under the provisions of the Code and that, therefore, the application of the section must be so limited. Sub-section (a) "for the performance of any decree or part thereof" would certainly apply to a provision for staying execution under Order XLI, rule 5, clause 3 (c), on the appellant giving security for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding on him. Sub-section (b) "for the restitution of any property taken in execution of a decree" undoubtedly applies to Order XLI, rule 6, which requires the Court which passed the decree, on sufficient cause being shown by the appellant, to take security from the respondent for the restitution of any property which he seeks to take in execution of the decree. Sub-section (c) "for the payment of any money, under an order of the Court in any suit or in any proceedings consequent thereon" in terms applies to Order XXVIII, rule 2, clause (2), namely: "Every surety for the appearance of a defendant shall bind himself, in default of such appearance, to pay any sum of money which the defendant may be ordered to pay in the suit." In the same sub-section (c) the words "for the fulfilment of any condition imposed on any person under an order of the Court, etc.," would in terms apply to any condition for the stay of execution imposed under Order XXI, rule 26, clause (3), and also to a realisation of security in default of a judgment-debtor applying to be made insolvent under section 55, sub-section (4). In all these cases the security might contain a surety bond and the bond would, of course, be given before the Court. Sub-sections (b) and (c) in the section 145 are new. The corresponding section of the old Code, section 253, ran as follows:—

"Whenever a person has, before the passing of a decree in an original suit, become liable as surety for the performance of the same or of any part thereof, the decree may be executed against him to the extent to which he has rendered himself liable, in the same manner as a decree may be executed against a defendant." The same question would, therefore, arise on the construction of this section, but the only cases dealing with this section are those that raised the question whether the words "before the passing of a decree in an original suit" apply to suretyships for the due performance of appellate decrees, on which there was a difference of opinion in the different High Courts of this country. There is a decision of the High Court of Calcutta reported as Lakshmi Narain Khanna v. Guru Datta Mehra (4), which is against the appellant. In that case a warrant was issued for the arrest of a judgment debtor which directed it to be stayed if the judgment debtor furnished security. The judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court. Then the following entry was made in the order-sheet: "The judgment-debtor has been brought after being arrested. The decree holder's Pleader states that the judgment-debtor's father-in-law...has deposited with him Government promissory notes of the value of Rs. 2,000 as stated in his petition as security for the decretal amount; so he asks the Court to release the judgment-debtor from custody. The judgment-debtor is released." The decree-holder applied for execution against the surety and prayed that he promissory notes in his custody might be sold. Objection was taken that section 145 was not applicable, because the appellant did not become surety by an application to the Court or by a bond filed in the proceedings. The Bench held that the section does not provide that this liability must have accrued upon an application presented to the Court or a surety bond filed in the proceedings, and proceeds as follows: "We cannot limit the application of the section to cases where the liability of the surety is undisputed or is a matter of record." The facts of this case, however, show that execution was stayed under an order of the Court and the debtor released on the surety being given, although the security was certainly taken outside Court. In the present case no order has been passed by the Court at all, so that although the language of the Judges seems wide enough to cover the present case and though they specifically decide that the security need not be taken before the Court, there is still the difference that it was the Court that stayed its hand and not the decree-holder. In Thirumalai v. Ramayyar (5) the main question was whether section 253 of the old Code could be availed of where security had been given on behalf of the respondent to an appeal under section 54 of the Code for the due performance of the decree, that is under Order XLI, rule 6, of the present Code. The Court held that execution could be had against the sureties and used the following language: "The obligation which the surety undertakes is an obligation to fulfil the decree which may be passed against the defendant or appellant in the original suit or in appeal, and the obligation is contracted before the Court and is as much a matter of record as the decree undertaken to be fulfilled. There is no apparent reason for directing the successful party to obtain a fresh decree against the surety, whilst the very obligation is to fulfil the decree against the defendant or the appellant." The reasoning of the Court here is inconsistent with the contention of the respondent and with the wide language in Lakshmi Narain Khanna v. Guru Datta Mehra (4), but is not inconsistent with the actual decision in 16 Ind. Cas. 859. Then there were some decisions under section 204 of Act VIII of 1859, which were as follows:—"Whenever a person has become liable as surety for the performance of a decree, etc.," which section it is to be noted has not got the words in section 253 of the Code of 1882, "before the passing of the decree in an original suit." In a case reported as Baboo Ram Kishen Doss v. Hurkhoo Singh (1) it seems to have been assumed that section 204 applies to cases such as that of parties who become sureties under section 76 or 83 of the Code. In Gujendro Narain Roy v. Hemanginee Dossee (2) it is held that a security bond entered into subsequent to a judgment cannot be enforced under section 204. These two cases were considered by the High Court of Calcutta in a later decision reported as Abdool Kureem v. Abdool Huq Kazeem (3). There the judgment debtor had been arrested upon a warrant in execution of a decree and applied for his discharge on the ground that he had no means of paying the debt. He was released on a bond given to the Munsif by two sureties under a provision corresponding to section 55, sub-section 4 of the present Code. The Munsif held that as the bond was given subsequent to the judgment it could not be enforced under section 204. The Court distinguished the two prior cases in Baboo Ram Kishen Doss v. Hurkhoo Singh (1) and Gujendro Narain Roy v. Hemanginee Dossee (2), on the ground that the liability of the surety in those two cases did not arise in the course of or out of proceedings in the suit but upon distinct and independent contracts made between the sureties and the creditor, and seemed to be of opinion that in such circumstances the section would not have been applicable. It is to be noted, however, that the decision of the two earlier cases did not go on this question at all. But this is an indication of the view of the Court that bonds taken outside the Court are not within the section. The position then is that there are contradictory rulings under the old Code in the Calcutta High Court and language in a modern decision by the High Court of Calcutta which is against the appellant, while the language in Thirumalai v. Ramayyar (5) seems to be in his favour. I find it impossible to express a confident opinion on the point. But as at present advised I think that considering that the language of the various sub-sections can be referred to specific provisions of the Code, and considering that the object of the section is to allow execution against a person who is not a party to the suit or legal representative, it is more proper to confine it to cases where the liability has been entered into in the face of the Court or has been recorded by the Court in accordance with the provisions of the Code.

SUBBARAYA PILLAI v. SATEANATHA PANDARAM.

(5) 13 M. 1; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 711.

BANK OF BENGAL v. SARAT CHANDRA MITRA.

The result will be that the civil miscellaneous second appeal succeeds and the judgment of the District Munsif must be restored with costs here and in the lower Appellate Court.

SADASIYA AIYAR, J.—I agree and only wish to add with the greatest respect to the learned Judges who decided the case in Lakshmi Narain Khanna v. Guru Datta Mehra (4) that I agree neither with the reasons for the decision nor with the actual decision, even having regard to the particular facts of that case. I do not think that the fact that the Court itself stayed the execution on the report made to it of security having been given outside the Court, would enable the Court to allow the security to be realised in execution. The only security which could be so realised is one to be furnished to the Court or at least filed in Court.

M.C.P.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 187 OF 1918.

December 5, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Atkinson and Mr. Justice Manuk.

THE BANK OF BENGAL—PETITIONER
versus

SARAT CHANDRA MITRA—RESPONDENT.

Execution of decree—Jurisdiction, territorial, limits of—Attachment—Corporation having different branches, property in possession of, whether can be attached—Property outside jurisdiction of Court.

The jurisdiction of a Court is circumscribed by and co-extensive with its territorial limits. [p. 945, col. 1.]

Where property sought to be attached is bona fide without the jurisdiction of the original Court whose decree is sought to be enforced and is in the hands of a third party who is not amenable to or permanently residing within the jurisdiction of the executing Court, the decree of the executing Court must be transferred to the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property sought to be attached is for the time being. [p. 945, col. 1.]

A corporation may be said to reside wherever it carries on its business, irrespective of the location of its head office, and if a corporation such as a Bank has branch offices in fifty separate and distinct jurisdictions, it can and may be sued in any one of such jurisdictions for the enforcement of a right in respect of which a cause of action exists within the limits of each independent jurisdiction [p. 945, col. 2.]

The jurisdiction of an executing Court to attach moveable property belonging to a judgment-debtor in the hands of another or under his control or a debt due by him is correlative and co-extensive with the right which the judgment-debtor himself would have had to sue for the recovery of his property or his debt as against his debtor or trustee. [p. 946, cols 1 & 2.]

One R entered into the service of the Patna Branch of the Bank of Bengal, and as security for his fidelity to the Bank deposited with the Bank Government promissory notes of the value of Rs. 20,000. The promissory notes were sent from Patna to Calcutta and were kept in the custody of the Head Office of the Bank. A creditor of R attached the Government promissory notes and the interest accruing due under them in execution of a decree passed by the Subordinate Judge at Patna:

Held, that inasmuch as the Bank had a residence within the jurisdiction of the Patna Court and carried on business therein, that Court had jurisdiction to attach both the Government promissory notes and the interest accruing under them, notwithstanding the fact that the notes were in the physical custody of the Head Office of the Bank at Calcutta. [p. 946, col. 2.]

Civil revision from an order made by the First Subordinate Judge, Patna, dated the 1st June 1918.

Messrs. Syed Hasan Imam, Sultan Ahmad and Siva Narain Bose, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. Khurshaid Hasnain, Susil Madhab Mullick, Bankim Chandra De and Narendra Nath Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

ATKINSON, J.—This application comes before us in revision from an order made by the learned First Subordinate Judge of Patna, dated the 1st of June 1918.

It is necessary to shortly set out the facts of the case before we consider the legal questions arising for our determination.

One Sarat Chandra Mitra obtained a decree for Rs. 2,000 against Raghunath Prasad; and the decree-holder, Sarat Chandra Mitra, seeks now to attach certain property alleged to be the property of Raghu; nath Prasad in the hands of the Bank of Bengal.

BANK OF BENGAL v. SARAT CHANDRA MITRA.

In the year 1910 Raghunath Prasad was taken into the service of the Bank of Bengal as a Treasurer; his duties were restricted to acting as Treasurer in the Patna Branch of the Bank of Bengal.

Prior to Raghunath Prasad's entry into the service of the Bank, the Bank required that he should enter into a fidelity bond for the due and faithful performance of his duties; and required security in cash for the sum of Rs. 20,000 and a mortgage on immovable property to the extent of Rs. 30,000. In pursuance of this arrangement Raghunath Prasad deposited with the Bank of Bengal Government promissory notes for the sum of Rs. 20,000 and a mortgage-deed on property situate at Arrah for Rs. 30,000. The terms of the contract made between the parties, that is to say, Raghunath Prasad on the one hand and the Bank of Bengal on the other, are embodied in the security bond, dated the 23rd of May 1910.

The Bank of Bengal contend that Raghunath Prasad has not faithfully discharged his duties within the terms of the bond, and that he has been guilty of default and breach of duty; and that he has involved the Bank in substantial loss and damage, and that they are, therefore, in the events that have happened, entitled under the provisions of clauses 2 and 9 of the bond itself to realise the security deposited with them to cover their loss; and that they are also entitled to retain so much of the interest as has accrued thereon since suspension by way of collateral security, in the event of Government securities deposited with the Bank proving insufficient, to cover the Bank's total loss.

The judgment-creditor, Sarat Chandra Mitra, in the suit in which he obtained his decree before the First Subordinate Judge of Patna, instituted an application seeking to attach in execution of his decree the Rs. 20,000 Government promissory notes deposited as security with the Bank; and also to attach so much of the interest as may have accrued on the Rs. 20,000 and now admittedly in the Bank's hands. The learned Subordinate Judge decided that the Government promissory notes lodged by Raghunath Prasad with the Bank were attachable subject to the Bank's lien. He also held that the accrued interest in the hands of the Bank was attachable; and that such interest did not form part of the Bank's security to cover any loss or damage that the Bank might have sustained owing to any default or breach of duty committed by Raghunath Prasad acting in his office as Treasurer of the Patna Branch of the Bank of Bengal.

On the hearing of the aforesaid application for attachment the Bank of Bengal intervened, and they claimed before the learned Subordinate Judge that he had no jurisdiction whatsoever to attach the Government paper money in the custody of the Bank and deposited with them by way of security, nor was the learned Judge entitled to attach the interest in their hands which formed collateral security against any loss they might incur by reason of any defalcations on the part of Raghunath Prasad. The learned Judge decided against the contention of the Bank and held that the main security and the interest were liable to attachment; and on the 8th June the learned Judge issued a precept against the Bank which expressly prohibited the Bank from disposing of the interest accrued and in their hands, and from realizing the Government promissory notes deposited with the Bank by Raghunath Prasad. The Bank of Bengal was prohibited and restrained by a further order, dated the 15th July 1917 from parting with, or disposing of, the said property in their possession to any other person.

The contention of the Bank, as argued before us, is that the property sought to be attached is outside the jurisdiction of the Patna Subordinate Court; and, therefore, not subject to attachment; and further that it was an excess of jurisdiction on the part of the Patna Subordinate Court to seek to attach property in the hands of a party residing permanently beyond and without the jurisdiction of such Court; and that thus the First Subordinate Judge of Patna had no jurisdiction to attach either of the denominations of property in question.

BANK OF BENGAL V. SARAT CHANDRA MITRA.

Speaking generally, it is an accepted principle of international jurisprudence that the jurisdiction of a Court in enforcing execution of its decrees is restricted by its territorial limitations. That is to say the jurisdiction of a Court is circumscribed by and co-extensive with its territorial limits. Thus a Court desiring to seize or attach the property of a judgment-debtor outside its jurisdiction, and where such property is in the hands of, or custody of another, also outside the jurisdiction such property sought to be attached in aid of the executing Court can only be reached by a regular method of procedure which has been prescribed by the rules of the Civil Procedure Code, and similar codes which prevail in all countries, viz., the decree of the executing Court must be transferred to the local limits of the jurisdiction of the external Court within which the property sought to be attached is for the time being.

This rule of law only applies when the two following facts concur: (1) when the property sought to be attached is bona fide without the jurisdiction of the original Court whose decree is sought to be enforced, and (2) when the property sought to be attached is in the hands of a third party not amenable to or permanently residing within the jurisdiction of the executing Court.

I say property bona fide without the jurisdiction of the original Court, because I conceive that the above rule of law would not apply if property was fraudulently or surreptitiously removed from one jurisdiction to another for the purpose of defeating the right, authority and power of the executing Court in the execution of its decrees. In such a case a proceeding could be brought against persons within the jurisdiction from which the property was removed, which would in its operation and effect secure the recovery of the property attempted to be made away with and placed outside the jurisdiction of the original Court merely to defeat its jurisdiction and the execution of its decrees. An exception to the general principle may exist with reference to the jurisdiction of a Court to sell land outside the territorial limits of its jurisdiction in pursuance of a mortgage decree, provided some portion of the mortgaged property is within the jurisdiction of the original Court which grants the decree.

The law thus stated is in harmony and accord with the same principles laid down in the learned judgment of the Judges of the Calcutta High Court in the case reported as Begg, Dunlop & Co. v. Jagannath (1) and in which case all the authorities are reviewed with the greatest care, and with the principles of law as authoritatively laid down by that decision we respectfully concur.

The fundamental distinction between the case reported as Begg, Dunlop & Co. v. Jagannath (1) and the present case is that in the former the garnishee or debtor of the judgment-debtor, whose debt was sought to be attached, was a firm carrying on business in Calcutta, and only in Calcutta, and that the debt that was due to the judgment-debtor was payable in Calcutta, and nowhere else; and thus it was held that the Court had no jurisdiction to attach a debt payable to the judgment-debtor outside its jurisdiction by a person not amenable to its jurisdiction.

In this case we have a great banking corporation, having its head office at Calcutta with subordinate branches throughout the rest of India, where it carries on its Banking business. In Patna itself, within the jurisdiction of the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Patna, the Bank of Bengal have a local branch where they carry on their trade or business of banking and with reference to which the contract that was made between the Bank and Raghunath Prasad was solely conversant.

A corporation may be said to reside wherever it carries on its business, irrespective of the location of its head office, and if a corporation such as a Bank has branch offices in fifty separate and distinct jurisdictions, it can and may be sued in any one of such jurisdictions for the enforcement of a right in respect of which a cause of action exists within the limits of each independent jurisdiction.

The test to be applied in such cases is to be found accurately stated at page 116, I. L. R. 33 Calcutta [Begg, Dunlop & Co. v. Jagannath (1)] already referred to above. The learned Judges there say:— the test to be applied is whether the judgment-debtor, as creditor, could have sued the garnishee as his debtor in the Court in which the execution proceedings were commenced.

(1) 11 Ind. Cas. 417; 39 C. 104; 16 C. W. N. 402; 14 C. L. J. 228.

BANK OF BENGAL v. SARAT CHANDRA MITRA.

In this case I put the specific question to learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the appellants and the respondent. Could Raghunath Prasad have sued the Bank in Patna for default in paying to him the interest due on the Government securities lodged with the Bank had there been no default to justify its suspension? and the answer was in the affirmative. I apprehend no other answer could in law or fact have been given; because it is clear to demonstration that in the contingency put, the right to sue the Bank in Patna would have undoubtedly existed at the suit of Raghunath Prasad.

Take another illustration to test the question of jurisdiction. Assuming the contract of service to have come to an end without any default on the part of Raghunath Prasad; and the Bank refused for no good and sufficient cause to return to Raghunath Prasad the Government securities held by them, could Raghunath Prasad have sued the Bank at Patna for the return and recovery of the securities retained by them? Of course he could.

Mr. Hasan Imam in the earlier portion of his argument contended that Raghunath Prasad would have been forced to go to Calcutta to demand payment of each instalment of the interest as it fell due on the securities held by the Bank, in pursuance of clause 9 of the security bond. This argument is, in our opinion, untenable; and I think it may fairly be said that Mr. Hasan Imam abandoned this contention in the latter portion of his argument addressed to us.

Applying these recognised tests, it may be generally stated, as a broad and general proposition, that the jurisdiction of an executing Court to attach moveable property belonging to a judgment-debtor in the hands of another or under his control, or a debt due by him is correlative and co-extensive with the right which the judgment-debtor himself would have had to sue for the recovery of his property or his debt as against his debtor or trustee.

In the present case the mere removal of the securities by the Bank to the Head Office at Calcutta and their retention there by the Treasurer or Secretary of the Bank for the time being by consent of the parties, would not defeat the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Court at Patna to attach such securities at the suit of a judgment-creditor of Raghunath Prasad, subject to the lien of the Bank. The removal of the securities to Calcutta was merely a precautionary act for the better custody of the Government securities committed to the Bank's charge; and upon which they undoubtedly had and claimed to exercise a lien.

Though the security notes deposited with the Bank were physically at the Head Office of the Bank in Calcutta, in the eye of the law they were constructively within the jurisdiction of the Patna Courts for the purpose of attachment, inasmuch as the Bank had a residence within the jurisdiction of the Patna Subordinate Court and carried on their business therein.

Thus it appears to us that the securities held by the Bank under clause 8 of the security bond, dated the 23rd May 1910, are attachable at the instance of Sarat Chandra Mitra by the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Patna; but subject to the lien of the Bank thereon. No order, however, is capable of being maintained which would limit, restrict or prohibit the due and reasonable exercise by the Bank of its right to enforce its lien upon the securities deposited with it as and when occasion might arise. The learned Judge by his precept of the 8th June and his order of the 16th July 1917 has gone too far. I would refer to the precept of the 8th June, which prohibits and restricts the Bank from disposing of the security deposited with them. The order of the 8th of June was followed by an order of the 16th July, which was still more prohibitive and mandatory in its terms. Neither of these orders can stand.

The learned Judge in the judgment which he delivered on the 1st June made a very proper declaration in the view we take of the law applicable to the facts of this case. He merely stated in the course of his judgment that so far as the security itself was concerned, that is the Government paper security, it was attachable subject to the lien of the Bank. In other words all that in effect is attachable at the suit of the judgment-creditor of Raghunath Prasad, Sarat C. Mitra, is whatever residue of the capital moneys representing the security deposited with the Bank may be available, after the Bank's claim in respect of the loss or damage that they have sustained by reason of the default and infidelity of Raghunath Prasad has been completely satisfied. But in the exercise of the Bank's right of lien it is not competent for the Subordinate Court at Patna to restrict the Bank in the due exercise of their rights with regard to the enforcement of their lien and the realization of the securities upon which that lien is based. Therefore, the order of the learned Judge, dated the 16th July 1917, is wrong in form. It goes too far; and he cannot, in our opinion, enjoin or prohibit the Bank by his order from realizing their security; if the securities are in fact capable of being realized by the Bank. This disposes of the first contention addressed to us.

BANK OF BENGAL v. SARAT CHANDRA MITRA.

Mr. Hasan Imam's main argument was based upon the fact that the security-deed contemplated that the Government promissory notes tendered as security were to be handed over to the Secretary or Treasurer of the Bank at Calcutta and retained by him there, and that thus it was property outside the jurisdiction not liable to attachment. With that view we cannot agree, and for the reasons I have already stated, inasmuch as the Bank carries on its trade or business at Patna, and has a residence or place of business in Patna; and, therefore, even though the physical possession of the securities may be with the Bank at Calcutta, constructively in the eye of the law the Bank is within the jurisdiction of the Patna Court and the property which they hold is liable to attachment subject to their lien.

The other question that arises for determination is whether the interest payable on the securities deposited and now accumulated in the hands of the Bank, since suspension of its payment, is attachable. Clause 9 of the security deed has created for us some difficulty as to its true interpretation and construction. The clause is by no means clear or free from doubt. The drafting of this clause leaves much to be desired in the art of proper conveyancing. The difficulty created by clause 9 is the omission to state precisely and expressly what the parties to the security bond obviously intended that the deed should express. By clause 9, Raghunath Prasad, so long as he observed good faith and acted with fidelity towards his employers, would have been entitled to receive the accruing interest upon the securities deposited with the Bank when it fell due. Clause 9 gives the Bank a power of suspending the payment of the interest to Raghunath Prasad in the event of loss or damage accruing to the Bank by reason of the want of fidelity on the part of Raghunath Prasad in the due discharge of his duties. The interest payable to Raghunath Prasad was to be paid or credited to him so long as good faith was observed. When the Bank sustained damage then the right of suspension accrued. What was the object of giving the Bank the power to suspend payment of interest? We think, considering the scope and tenor of the deed, and bearing in mind its object and design, that it must have been the intention of the parties to the deed to provide that the Bank's right to suspend payment of the interest, when default occurred, coupled with it the right to retain the accumulated interest and such as might accrue after suspension; and that thus it was clearly intended and the true meaning of the fidelity bond is that the interest so accumulated and accruing should form a fund, as collateral security, in the event of the main security proving insufficient to discharge the total loss or damage sustained by the Bank; otherwise clause 9 would be meaningless.

Why should the Bank have the power to suspend payment and yet retain the accumulated and accruing interest in their hands, but in respect of which they were to have no claim?

We have carefully considered the argument addressed to us contra on behalf of the respondent; but with that argument we cannot agree. Thus we think that in this case having regard to the form, scope and phraseology of the security bond itself, the Bank is entitled to retain the interest accumulating and accruing after suspension as collateral security for the main debt. The interest in the Bank's hands is, in our opinion, liable to attachment; but attachable subject to the lien of the Bank. The judgment-creditor will, therefore, only be able to attach, to satisfy his decree, whatever residue may remain over either of the principal security or of the interest that has accrued or may accrue thereon after the Bank's total loss has been satisfied.

GOVINDA V. CHINDHOO.

The difficulty in this case has been created by the action of the Bank itself. Mr. Hasan Imam contends that it would have been open to the Bank to say that they themselves were satisfied that a loss had been sustained and to have realised forthwith out of the securities at their disposal a sufficient sum to cover their loss; leaving it to Raghunath Prasad to sue them for an account or to challenge the validity of their claim to realize the security deposited with the Bank. However, the Bank did not adopt the course suggested; and up to the present time owing to the action of the Bank the amount of the loss or damage sustained by them at the hands of Raghunath Prasad has not been ascertained. The Bank could have elected to have acted in the manner indicated; but they preferred to assert their right to sue Raghunath Prasad and claim a declaration of their right to realize and dispose of the securities and the interest accumulated thereon in satisfaction of their loss.

For these reasons, we think, the order of the learned Judge in substance was right; but in form it was wrong. The order of the learned Judge must, therefore, be modified to this extent, that the respective properties comprised in and appropriated by clauses 8 and 9 of the security bond of the 23rd May 1910 will be attached subject to the Bank's general right of lien in respect of both such properties; and the order of the 16th July 1917 and the precept of the 8th June 1917 prohibiting or injunctioning the Bank in the exercise of the enforcement of their right of lien as against such properties are hereby set aside and are declared to be inoperative and illegal.

Therefore, this application made in civil revision to us by the Bank has failed. The entire difficulty that has arisen in this case has been occasioned by the Bank's own mistake and in disregard of their apparent and legal rights, therefore, we direct that the Bank of Bengal do pay the sum of five gold mokurs to the respondent as and for the costs of the hearing of this application.

The application of the Bank of Bengal is dismissed; and we order that the respective denominations of property specified in clauses 8 and 9 of the fidelity bond, dated the 23rd May 1910, are liable to attachment without restriction or prohibition upon the Bank's general right of, lien in respect thereof; and that in so far as the precept of the 8th June 1917 and the order of the 16th July 1917 purport to limit and fetter the Bank in the assertion and exercise of their general right of lien upon the aforesaid securities, the same are illegal, void and without force and effect; and that the only property available for attachment at the instances of Sarat C Mitra is the residue, if any available, of the respective properties mentioned and set forth in clauses 8 and 9 of the security bond after the claim of the Bank has been fully satisfied and discharged.

MANUK, J.—I entirely agree with the judgment of my learned brother and have nothing to add.

Application dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 201 OF 1917.

June 21, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C.

GOVINDA, MINOR, GUARDIAN Musammam
PURI, AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—

APPELLANTS

versus

CHINDHOO—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 60—Occupancy tenancy—Sub-lease—Ejectment of sub-lessee—Notice to eject—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

KAMLESHRI PRASAD SINGH v. RAGHUBANS PRASAD SINGH.

Under section 60 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act a sub-lease of occupancy land cannot be made from year to year, it can only be made for a term of one year. If before the end of the year no notice is given, there may be a presumption that the parties intend to make a fresh lease for the ensuing year, but where a notice is given by the occupancy tenant to his sub-tenant that he does not intend to renew the sub-lease, the sub-lease comes to an end with the end of the agricultural year, and the sub-tenant is thereafter in the position of a trespasser and can be ejected through a Civil Court.

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the District Judge, Bhandara, dated the 6th January 1917 in Appeal No. 118 of 1916.

Messrs. S. C. Dutta Chowdhury and K. K. Gandhi, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. L. Subhedar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by an occupancy tenant to eject a sub-tenant who refused to vacate the field after the end of the agricultural year, although a notice was given to him before the end of the agricultural year that the sub lease would not be renewed. In appeal it is urged for the defendants that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to try this suit because the suit was one between landlord and tenant, and that the notice of ejection was not valid because it was not given sufficiently early. Under section 60 of the Tenancy Act a sub-lease of occupancy land cannot be made from year to year, it could be only made for a term of one year. No doubt if before the end of the year no notice is given, there may be a presumption that the parties intend to make a fresh lease for the ensuing year, but in this case notice was given by the occupancy tenant to his sub-tenant that he did not intend to renew the lease. The lease, therefore, came to an end under section 60 with the end of the agricultural year and after that date the defendants in the circumstances were trespassers. The Munsif had jurisdiction to try this suit and the notice was given in sufficient time. I may add that it would have been a sufficient notice even if the land had been an absolute occupancy tenancy, since it was given over 5 months before the end of the agricultural year. For these reasons the appeal is dismissed.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 146 OF 1916.

December 10, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and Mr. Justice Coutts.

KAMLESHRI PRASAD SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAGHUBANS PRASAD SINGH—PLAINTIFF AND SIRJUG PRASAD SINGH
AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Karta, purchase in name of—Debts collected and loans made by karta—Presumption—Burden of proof.

Where a purchase of property is made in his own name by the karta of a joint Hindu family, the presumption is that the property is acquired out of the family funds, unless it can be shown by definite evidence that the karta acquired the property from private funds and not from funds which were in his hands as the head of the family. [p. 950, col. 2; p. 951, col. 1.]

Where the head of a joint Hindu family collects money due upon family bonds, the presumption is that he makes the collections on behalf of the joint family, and if he re-issues the money collected on fresh loans, the presumption again is that he issues it for the benefit of the family and not for his own private benefit. [p. 951, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Monghyr.

Messrs. P. R. Das, Naresh Chandra Sinha and Sivanandan Rai, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Ganesh Dutt Singh, Jal Gobind Singh and Purnendu Narain Sinha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

ROE, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for partition. The pedigree of the family is given in the plaint. It is descended from Brij Lal Singh and the property to be divided is the ancestral property of Brij Lal Singh together with four villages subsequently acquired, namely, Pandarak, Surajpore, Rasulpore and Bhagwanpore Bansi or Barauni. In the course of the trial the plaintiff sought for and obtained leave to add to the properties to be partitioned a number of debts which were alleged to be due to the joint family.

The parties are the descendants of the four sons of Brij Lal Singh, the plaintiff and the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 being descended from the third son Parsban Singh, the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 from the eldest son Rang Lal Singh, the defendants Nos. 5 and 6 from the second son, and the defendants Nos. 8 to 13 from the youngest son,

KAMLESHRI PRASAD SINGH V. RAGUBANS PRASAD SINGH.]

In the Court of first instance it was alleged that there had already been a partition of the whole estate and that, therefore, the suit should be dismissed. This issue was found against the defendants. The defendants Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6 and 7 do not appeal, the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 appeal and the defendants Nos. 8 to 13 have filed a cross-appeal. In the argument before us no attempt was made to contest the learned Subordinate Judge's finding that no valid partition of the family property had taken place.

The points for consideration are only (1) whether the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 being the elder branch are entitled to Jethansi or an eldest son's share; (2) whether the four villages I have named were a part of the joint family estate or the self-acquired property of Rang Lal Singh, the grandfather of defendants Nos. 3 and 4; and thirdly, whether a number of bonds standing in the name of Gita Prasad Singh and his sons represent loans made from the private purse of Gita Prasad, or from the joint family estate. The learned Subordinate Judge decided all these issues against the appellants.

Upon the question of the eldest son's share the learned Subordinate Judge has dealt only with the oral evidence, and that evidence he has dealt with in a somewhat summary fashion. The documentary evidence shows that upon a reference to arbitration of a dispute with regard to the whole family property made in the year 1905 one of the arbitrators, Deekinandan Singh, drew up a statement of the rights of the parties and in it distinctly recorded a finding that the elder branch was entitled to 5/21sts of the family property, the remaining branches being entitled only to 4/21sts. Reading the evidence of Jhumak Singh, the plaintiff's witness No. 5, it is clear that he himself and another of the arbitrators acquiesced in the finding recorded by Deekinandan Singh. Deekinandan Singh himself gave evidence on behalf of the plaintiff and says that his decision regarding Jethansi was most probably based on the oral evidence on behalf of the parties. In 1908 a petition was filed by Sarjug Prasad Singh representing as the genealogical table shows, the branch to which the plaintiff himself belongs, in proceedings regarding the registration of the four villages under dispute upon the second point raised in this Court. In this petition it is distinctly admitted that the eldest branch is entitled to a Jethansi share. The second witness for Gita Prasad Singh's branch, Bajrang Prasad, states that up to 60 years ago Jethansi custom was recognised in the family. Seeing that there has admittedly been no partition since the separation from his brothers of Brij Lal Singh who is the great-grandfather of the majority of the parties, we may assume that there has been no partition for sixty years, and that, therefore, it is impossible for the custom of Jethansi, if it existed 60 years ago, to have now died out. The evidence, which I have quoted, coupled with the oral evidence of the witnesses called by the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 seems to me conclusive proof of the custom alleged by the defendants Nos. 3 and 4, and I would order that a partition of the immoveable property be made on the basis of a division of the property into 21 parts, of which the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 will receive five parts, the remaining branches four parts each; the plaintiff's branch being again sub-divided into two equal shares of two annas each to the plaintiff of the one part and the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 of the second part.

I can see no reason to disturb the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge that the villages in dispute were acquired from joint funds. Mr. P. R. Das admits that if the burden of proof is on him to show from what means the acquisition was made, his evidence does not support the burden of proof upon him. He suggests, however, that on the basis of the decision in the case of Bodh Singh Doodhocrria v. Guneshchunder Sen (1) there is no burden of proof on him at all, since it is shown by the arbitrators' award and by the evidence on both sides that the family has for a very long time had separate accounts and have issued loans from their separate private funds. The ruling in question is based, I take it, upon the principle that where all the family has been dealing in immoveable property as self-acquired property, the presumption that all immoveable property acquired in the name of any member of the family is joint property at once disappears. There is nothing upon the record to show that any other branch of the family has been making private acquisitions of immoveable property. The evidence with regard to separate transactions is limited to the issue of loans upon simple bonds. No case has been cited of separate acquisitions of immoveable property by any of the junior branches. It is admitted that Rang Lal Singh, in whose name these properties were bought, was at the time of the purchase the Karta of the family. I am of opinion that his descendants were required to show by definite evidence that he acquired these properties from private funds and not from funds which were in his hands as the head of the family. It being admitted that they have failed to show this, the learned Subordinate Judge's decision upon this point must be upheld.

(1) 19 W. R. 356; 12 B. L. R. 317; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 253.

KAMLESHEI PRASAD v. RAGHUBANS PRASAD SINGH.

The learned Subordinate Judge has dealt with the question of the ownership of the bonds standing in the name of Gita Prasad in even more summary fashion than that in which he disposed of the other points in dispute. It is quite clear from the evidence of the plaintiff's witness at page 19 and from the award of Daokinandan Singh at page 29 that from 1314 onwards Gita Prasad was the manager of such business as remained joint after the reference of the family disputes to arbitration in 1905. Deokinandan Singh himself admits in his evidence at page 17 that when he went into the accounts with the intention of settling the disputes, he found that there were 142 debtors of the joint family on bonds and bahi khatas. His award shows that with regard to one of these bonds at least the consideration had not been advanced by Gita Prasad alone. It also appears from that award that there was considerable confusion regarding the realisation of the various debts, each member of the family playing for his own hand. The presumption is that the head of the family in collecting the moneys, due upon these bonds was collecting on behalf of the joint family; and if he re-issued the moneys collected on fresh loans, the presumption would again be that he issued them the benefit of the joint family and not for his private benefit. It is impossible for us upon the materials before us to come to a definite finding with regard to each of the loans shown in the schedule. We must, therefore, direct that further proceedings be taken in the lower Court with regard to the loans standing in the names of Gita Prasad and the members of his branch and claimed by him as his exclusive property. This enquiry will take the form of a taking of an account. A Commissioner will be appointed to examine the accounts of Gita Prasad and to ascertain what has been the subsequent history of the bonds outstanding in 1905, and, having ascertained, firstly, what sums have been realised and not re-issued, and secondly, what sums have been realised and re-issued, he will apportion the bonds, which have been the fruit of previous realisations or renewals of loans previously issued when the family was joint, among the four branches in equal shares. It is clear upon the evidence that there is no Jethansi custom with regard to moveable property. He will also apportion Gita Prasad's liability upon the sums realised from previous loans and not re-issued.

The appeal should be decreed in part. The immoveable property, including the four villages regarding which there is a dispute, will be divided as indicated in the body of the judgment and an account will be taken of the money-lending business of Gita Prasad's branch and an adjudication made thereon on the terms above recorded. I would note that the cross-appeal of Gita Prasad is not pressed. We are asked only to say that the Commissioner in making the partition of the immoveable property will have regard to the general rule of partition, that all specific plots or villages held in severalty by any member of the family will, as far as possible, be allotted to his share on partition. Having regard to the result of this appeal we make no order as to costs either in this Court or in the Court below.

COURTS, J.—I agree.

Appeal decreed in part.

CHAVADI RAMASAMI PILLAI v. VENKATESWARA AIYAR.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEALS NOS. 197, ETC.,
OF 1917.

July 23, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

CHAVADI RAMASAMIA PILLAI—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

E. VENKATESWARA AIYAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 22, 26 (2), 46 (4)—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), ss. 9, 10, applicability of—Appeal to High Court—Limitation—Computation of time, method of—Exclusion of date of order and of last day if dies non—S. 21 of Provincial Insolvency Act, applicability of, to applications under s. 22(2)

In computing the period limited for appeals under the Provincial Insolvency Act, the principles of sections 9 and 10 of the General Clauses Act should be applied, i. e., the date on which the act appealed against is done and the last day, if dies non, should be excluded. [p. 952, col. 2.]

Applications under section 26 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act are not governed by the rule of limitation contained in section 22 of the Act. [p. 952, col. 2.]

Appeals under section 46, clause (2) of Act III of 1907, against the orders of the District Court, Tinnevely, dated the 22nd January 1917, in Original Petitions Nos. 628, 626, 630 and 633 of 1916 respectively.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar (with him Messrs. K. E. Gurusami Aiyar, A. Subbarama Aiyar and K. S. Sankara Aiyar), for the Respondents, took the objection that the appeals to the High Court as well as to the District Court under section 26 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act were both barred. The latter was out of time, having been made beyond the twenty-one days' time prescribed by section 22.

Section 46 (4) of the Provincial Insolvency Act does not lay down the method of computing time for appeals under the Act. The provisions of the Limitation Act do not apply to appeals under section 46 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. The date of the order appealed against and the last day of the ninety days, which was a Sunday, should not be excluded. If these days are to be included in the ninety days' period, the appeal is clearly barred.

Mr. T. M. Ramaswami Aiyar, for the Appellant.—Though section 46 of the Provincial Insolvency Act is silent as to the method of computing time, the principles of sections 9 and 10 of the General Clauses Act should be applied. The day on which the Act appealed against was done and the last day, which was dies non, should be excluded. Section 9 applies to Acts of the Governor-General in Council passed after 3rd January 1868 and section 10 to Acts passed after the General Clauses Act. If it was intended that the ninety days' period should be strictly computed, the Act would have expressly said so.

The application to the District Court under section 26 (2) is not to be viewed as an appeal against any order of the Official Receiver to attract the provisions of section 22 of Act III of 1907. It is only an application for action being taken by the Court.

JUDGMENT.—It is argued that these appeals are barred by limitation on the ground that, as the general provisions of the Limitation Act have been held not to apply to appeals under section 46 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the date upon which the order appealed against was made and the Sunday upon which the ninety days allowed by section 46 expired, cannot be excluded. Section 46, clause (4), merely declares that ninety days shall be the period of limitation for appeals to the High Court without specifying the method of computing that period.

Section 9 of the General Clauses Act does not directly apply to this section, in which the words "from" and "to" do not occur. Nevertheless we think it was intended that the computation should be done as it is usually done in appeals under other Acts, seeing that no other method is prescribed, that is, that ninety days should be reckoned from the date of the order appealed against. We must, therefore, apply the general principle contained in section 9 under which the day on which the act appealed against is done is to be excluded.

Further under section 10 of the General Clauses Act, the 22nd April, which was a dies non, must be excluded, and it is unnecessary to resort to section 4 of the Limitation Act for this purpose.

It was also argued that the application to the District Court itself was barred by limitation under the twenty-one days' rule in section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. But we observe that the application to the District Court was not an appeal against any order passed by the Official Receiver but was one to the Court to take action under section 26, clause (2).

CHOTTEY LAL v. MADHO BIBI.

On the merits we are of opinion that there was sufficient cause for the petitioner's Vakil failing to attend on the date of hearing, if the facts stated in his affidavit which have not been controverted are true. The petitioner could not be expected to proceed with his application, which involved certain complicated matters of law and fact, unaided, and he might have been reasonably given some time to engage a fresh Vakil. We think that when the facts became known on the petitioner's application to the District Court to restore his petition to file, the District Judge should have allowed his application on such terms as to costs, etc., as he thought proper.

We set aside the Judge's order of January 22nd dismissing the appellant's petition and direct the Judge to take it again on his file and dispose of it according to law.

The appellant will bear his own costs and the respondents' costs in the District Court up to date. Costs in this Court will abide and follow the result.

M. C. P.

Appeal allowed; Case remitted.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM ORIGINAL ORDERS NOS. 57, 58
AND 59 OF 1918.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 82 OF 1918.

December 10, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and Mr. Justice
Coutts.

IN A. O. O. NO. 57 OF 1918

Babu CHOTTEY LAL—APPELLANT

IN A. O. O. NO. 58 OF 1918

Babu BRIJ NARAIN—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat MADHO BIBI—PLAINTIFF AND LALDHARI PRASAD AND OTHERS—DEFEND-ANTS—RESPONDENTS IN BOTH.

IN A. O. O. NO. 59 OF 1918

LALDHARI PRASAD AND ANOTHER—
APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat MADHO BIBI—PLAINTIFF AND CHOTTEY LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

IN C. R. NO. 82 OF 1918

KESHWAR NARAYAN—PETITIONER
versus

Musammat MADHO BIBI AND OTHERS—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 9,

Sch. II, para. 21—Arbitration—Reference to arbitration by some members of joint family for partition—Award, validity of.

Where the question of the partition of the family properties of a joint Hindu family is referred to arbitration and some of the members of the joint family are not party to the reference, the award given in pursuance of such reference partitioning the family property is invalid and cannot be filed under paragraph 21 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code [p. 955, col. 2.]

Appeals from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Monghyr.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, S. P. Sen and M. Haque, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Hassan Imam, Asar Narayan Prasad and Rajendra Prasad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

ROE, J.—The defendant Laldhari Prasad was the first cousin of the deceased husband of the plaintiff; the second, third, fourth and fifth defendants were the sons of Laldhari Prasad and the sixth defendant was the adopted son of the plaintiff's husband Hit Prasad.

The property in dispute was that of Sakhi Chand, the father of Hit Prasad and uncle of Laldhari Prasad. The plaintiff's case was that the partition of this property had been referred to arbitration by all the parties to the dispute and that an award had been made in terms of the reference. She, therefore, asked that under section 21 of the Second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code the award should be filed and a decree made thereon.

Some ten objections were made by the various parties and these the learned Subordinate Judge discarded as without foundation. He ordered the award to be filed and a decree was thereon made in accordance with the award.

The three appeals before me are by Laldhari Prasad and his major son Rajballabh Narain No. 59, by Brij Narain No. 58, and by Chottey Lal No. 57. The application in revision is made by Keshwar Narayan on the allegation that he, being the son of the defendant Brij Narain, was entitled to a share in the property and was, therefore, a proper party to the suit. He had applied during the course of the trial to be joined as a party. His application had been rejected by the learned Subordinate Judge.

In the appeal as argued before this Court, the first objection taken is that of CHOTTEY LAL v. MADHO BIBI.

Chottey Lal the second defendant, on the ground that he was a major at the time of the reference to arbitration and was no party to it. By Brij Narain it is argued that the arbitrators made their award carelessly in that three debts Nos. 21, 22, and 23 of the schedule attached to the award were debts barred by limitation and in that a debt worth only Rs. 412 was valued at Rs. 510 in the award. It is further urged that he was not served with notice and that the arbitrator acted improperly in pressing for the payment of a debt due to a servant of his while the consideration of the award was actually in progress. By Laldhari Prasad it is urged that the arbitrators were guilty of carelessness, in that item No. 17 of the debts allotted to his share have been grossly overvalued. It is also urged that though the property was worth two lakhs of rupees the arbitrator managed to finish the work in one month's time; that he did not write the award himself and that he did not certify at the end of it that it was written at his dictation.

The learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the objections now urged by Brij Narain and Laldhari Prasad summarily, and indeed it is apparent on the face of it that there is no substance in them at all. With regard to the unfairness of the allotment, it is to be noted that though the property is worth two lakhs of rupees, the only unfairness alleged is with regard to sums of money amounting in all to less than Rs. 1,000. On this point the plaintiff's first witness has given evidence that the debts were divided into three classes, (1) those which were easily realisable, (2) those which could be realised with difficulty, and (3) those which were barred or not realisable at all. There is no real evidence on the defendants' side to rebut this assertion, and I have no doubt that, in making the award, the arbitrator acted fairly enough. There is no real evidence that Brij Narain received no notice. It is indeed certain that he was present during the proceedings and was aware of them, otherwise there could be no sense in his suggestion that pressure was brought to bear upon him during the proceedings to pay a debt due to the arbitrator's servant. The evidence with regard to the latter suggestion of misconduct is of the flimsiest character. The learned Subordinate Judge had no hesitation in rejecting it and I can see no reason for differing from him. The suggestion that the arbitrator was unduly hasty is not substantiated by evidence, nor is there any substance in the contention that the arbitrator was required to write the whole award with his own hand. It is not contended that the award that was made by the arbitrator was in any respect different from that filed in Court. The award filed in Court was signed by the arbitrator and that signature was a sufficient indication that he was responsible for it.

The real difficulty in the case is that the one vital point, namely, the age of Chottey Lal at the time of the reference to arbitration seems to have received no attention at all from the plaintiff. The defendant Chottey Lal gave evidence that he was a major at the time of the reference to arbitration. He produced an entry made at the time of his first admission into the Monghyr Training Academy, and in that entry it is mentioned that the date of his birth is 3rd Baisakh 1306 Fs., which, on a reference to the Chronological Tables, will be found to correspond to the 28th April 1899. The Ekrarnama upon which the reference to arbitration was made was dated the 31st August 1917 and the award was filed on 27th September 1917. Prima facie, therefore, this boy was 18 years and 4 months at the time of the reference to arbitration. His father Laldhari did not pretend to be acting as Karta of the family. He signed the reference to arbitration as guardian of Chottey Lal. The major son Raj Ballabh signed in his own capacity. It is clear, therefore, (and Mr. Hasan Imam admits this) that if Chottey Lal was of age on the 31st August 1917 he was no party to the Ekrarnama. The learned Subordinate Judge gives the following reasons for not accepting this certificate.

His father stated in the Ekrarnama that he was a minor. His elder brother Raj Ballabh deposed in the suit, but did not mention the fact that Chottey Lal was a major and Chottey Lal himself did not know before the date of hearing that he had attained majority:—

"Chottey Lal swears that when he took admission in the school he took his horoscope with him and the date of his birth was entered in the school register from that horoscope. No horoscope has been filed in this suit. The school register shows that there was no horoscope brought by Chottey Lal and the date of birth was entered according to the statement of some person. It is significant that the father Laldhari Prasad, who is the Karta of the family, has not deposed in the case. From the deposition of Chottey Lal it appears that his father and others consulted in the morning of the 17th January 1918 and then he was approached, and then Chottey Lal came with his objection. I do not believe that Chottey Lal has attained majority; his appearance too does not support his statement."

CHOTTEY LAL v. MADHO BIBI.

The learned Subordinate Judge then goes on to make a misstatement of the law with regard to the binding nature of the reference even though Chottey Lal had attained majority. In the reasons given by the learned Subordinate Judge, he seems to me to have entirely lost sight of the fact that if Chottey Lal was indeed a minor on the 3rd August 1917, he must have been within a very short time of his majority. Certainly age can be more nearly told by appearance in a child of 8 years of age than in a boy nearly 18 years of age. In Indian families no festivities are held to celebrate birthdays and it is extremely rare for members of a family to know with any certainty the month in which even their adult sons or brothers were born. Oral evidence given upon the point would have been absolutely valueless and might by cross-examination at once have been shown to be so. We have before us the only documentary evidence extant of the date of this boy's birth. In spite of the fact that Chottey Lal himself has been foolish enough to say that his horoscope was shown to the head master, there is no real evidence on the record that he ever had a horoscope at all. He was under 8 years of age when he first attended the Monghyr Academy. He cannot possibly remember now whether a horoscope was sent with him or not. The school register shows that no horoscope was in fact sent with him. The evidence of the correctness of the entry in the register that he was born on the 3rd Baisakh 1306 stands entirely unbuttressed on the plaintiff's side and no question was asked in cross-examination of the defendants' witnesses to suggest that this date was inaccurate. Mr. Hasan Imam suggests in his argument that the entry was falsely made in order to qualify the boy for the Entrance Examination eight years later. There seems to be no point in this suggestion, for if his birthday had in fact been the 1st September 1899, he would have been, I understand, equally eligible for an Entrance Examination in 1917. It was never suggested in the Court below that the 3rd Baisakh was a date which would create an ability or remove a disability in respect of an examination. A statement of this description, made at a time when there was no apparent reason for a misstatement, is to my mind of far greater value than any statement that might be made when the question had become one of controversy. In the absence of any rebutting evidence, I feel that it is impossible to hold that this entry was not correct. It follows, therefore, that I must with great regret come to the conclusion that Chottey Lal was a major at the time of the reference to arbitration and that, therefore, he was no party to it and that, therefore, the suit as against him should have been dismissed.

Similarly Keshwar Narain is stated in an affidavit, dated the 16th April 1918, to be one and-a-half years old, implying that he was born in October 1916. He too should have been represented in the reference to arbitration as one having a share in the joint family properties. The learned Subordinate Judge holds upon this point that it is unnecessary that he should be a party to the suit, for the reason that when he comes of age he may, if he wishes, contest the arbitrator's award. It would seem to me that an award purporting to partition the property of a joint family but liable to be set aside at once by Chottey Lal and in sixteen years' time by Keshwar Narain is not a valid award. In my opinion the first proviso to section 21 of the Second Schedule has not been fulfilled. I am not satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration by all the parties necessary to a suit for partition. Notwithstanding the provisions of Order I, rule 9, I hold that the partition of the family property cannot be regarded as having been validly referred to arbitration. In this view the learned Subordinate Judge's order directing that the award be filed should be set aside. I would, therefore, set it aside and direct that the appeal be decreed and the suit of the plaintiff dismissed.

TORTAN BAI v. BALLABHJI OJHA.

With regard to costs I am satisfied that Chottey Lal has been put forward solely for the purpose of defeating an equitable claim on a technical objection. I would, therefore, order that all the parties bear their own costs throughout the litigation.

Courts, J.—I agree.

Appeal decreed; Revision accepted.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 81 of 1917.

April 23, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Batten, Offg. J. C., and Mr. Findley, Offg. A. J. C.

TORTAN BAI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

BALLABHJI OJHA—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Mithila and Benares Schools, difference between—Succession—Female succeeding to estate of son, death of—Estate, whether goes to husband's heirs or son's heirs—Property purchased out of income of estate, devolution of.

Under the Mitakshara Law as interpreted by the Benares School, when a female succeeds to the estate of her son, the heirs of the son, the last male holder, would succeed to the estate after the death of the female. [p. 956, col. 2.]

The Mithila School is a branch of the Mitakshara School, the Mitakshara being the basis of the works which set out the law of the Mithila country. Therefore, it lies on those who allege to the contrary to prove that there is something in the Hindu Law as interpreted by the Mithila School to justify their contention that when a woman succeeds to her son the immoveable property goes on her death to the heirs of her husband, and not to the heirs of her son. [p. 956, col. 2; p. 957, col. 1.]

There is no difference in this respect between the Benares and the Mithila Schools of Hindu Law. [p. 958, col. 1.]

Musammatt Thakoor Deyhee v. Rai Baluk Ram, 11 M. I. A. 139 at p. 174; 10 W. R. (P. O.) 3; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 2 Suth. P. C. J. 49; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 231; 20 E. R. 54, distinguished.

Thakoorain Sahiba v. Mohun Lall, 11 M. I. A. 386; 7 W. R. 25; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 631; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 239; 20

E. R. 146 and Punchanund Ojhab v. Lalshan Misser, 3 W. R. 140, followed.

Where the circumstances are such as to show that a Hindu female purchased moveable property from the income of the estate inherited from her son, with a view of its becoming part of the main estate, it passes with the estate at her death, if previously undisposed of, to her son's heirs and not as her stridhan to her heirs. [p. 958, col. 2.]

Subramanian Chetti v. Arunachalam Chetti, 28 M. 1 Sridhar v. Kali Pada, 11 Ind. Cas. 971; 16 O. W. N. 106; 15 C. L. J. 12 and Wahid Ali Khan v. Tori Ram, 21 Ind. Cas. 91; 11 A. L. J. 856 at p. 860; 35 A. 551, followed.

Appeal from the decree of the Additional District Judge, Jabulpur, in Civil Suit No. 11 of 1917, dated the 10th September 1917.

Messrs. J. O. Ghosh, Damodar Das and Braj Mohan, for the Appellants.

Sir B. K. Bose, Dr. H. S. Gour, Mr. M. Gupta and Mr. K. B. Gupta, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The questions that arise in this appeal are purely questions of law. The parties are admittedly governed by the Mithila School of Hindu Law, their ancestors having come into these provinces as priests of the Rajah of Mandla. The first six grounds of appeal, which are to be read together, refer to the ancestral immoveable property in suit. Girdhari the head of the family died on the 5th February 1894, and after his death the property was held by his son Jeonath, who died soon after in 1895. Jeonath was thus the last male holder and was succeeded by his mother, Girdhari's widow Musammatt Kusumabai, who died on the 31st January 1917. The plaintiff-respondent is a cousin of Girdhari through the male line, and the defendants are Jeonath's three sisters, daughters of Girdhari and Kusumabai. The sole question is whether on the death of Kusumabai who succeeded to the property as heir of her son, the property goes to the heirs of her husband or to the heirs of her son. Admittedly if it goes to the heirs of her husband, the defendants-appellants are the heirs and if it goes to the heirs of her son the plaintiff respondent is the heir. Under the Mitakshara Law as interpreted by the Benares School the heirs of the son, the last male holder, would undoubtedly succeed to the property. The Mithila School is a branch of the Mitakshara School, the Mitakshara being the basis of the works which set out the law of the Mithila country. It, therefore, lies on the defendants to show that there is something in the Hindu Law, as interpreted by the Mithila School, to justify their contention that when a woman succeeds to her son the immoveable property goes on her death to the heirs of her husband, and not to the heirs of her son.

TORTAN BAI v. BALLABEJI OJHA.

The question depends on the interpretation to be placed on certain passages in the Vivada Chintamani. The original text of Katyayana and the commentary by the author of the Vivada Chintamani are translated at pages 40 and 41 of the introduction to the translation of the Vivada Ratnakara by Golap Chandra Sarkar Sastri and Digamvar Chattopadhyaya. This translation is as follows:—

"The husband's daya (heritage or gift) the wife may use according to her pleasure when the husband is dead; but when he is living, she shall preserve it. Otherwise shall pass her time in his family. A sonless (wife) preserving unsullied the bed of her lord, and abiding by her venerable protector, shall enjoy (the husband's property) until her death, being moderate: afterwards the heirs shall take."

The husband's daya is the husband's property: that again is (two-fold) either subject of the wife's proprietary right, by reason of the default of any other taker, on his death; or subject of the wife's proprietary right, by his permission, during his life.

As regards the first, it is said (by Katyayana):—

"The husband's daya, the wife may use according to her pleasure when the husband is dead."

This, however, refers to property other than immoveable.

But as regards immoveable property it is said (by Katyayana):—

"Shall enjoy until her death, being moderate: afterwards the heirs shall take." "Being moderate" means not expending too much: the word "sonless" is an adjective indicative of the circumstances under which her right (of inheritance to her husband's estate) accrues. As regards the second, however, it is said (by Katyayana):—

"But when he is living, she shall preserve it" the meaning of which is, when the husband is alive she shall preserve his property.

The meaning of "otherwise, etc.," is, that in case there be no property left by the husband the widow shall pass her time in her husband's family only.

Thus even when the deceased husband's property devolves on the wife, she has no independence in making gifts and like alienations by reason of the similarity of expectancy (to know the nature of the wife's right in property inherited by her from her husband): otherwise the expectancy (to know) what kind of interest she has therein would but remain unsatisfied. Hence also the inconsistency of the recital of this text in the Chapter on Sandayaka Stridhana, with its application (to property inherited from the husband) is removed. Because the force of expectancy is stronger than that of the context. Just as in immoveable property given by the husband, a woman has no right to make gift and the like, by reason of this text, so also in husband's immoveable property inherited by the wife. The same is the opinion of the Prakasa and the Ratnakara. So also in (husband's) immoveable property, inherited by the wife through the son, for herein also there is expectancy and there is no direct text (to the contrary).

(The words within parenthesis are not in the original.)

The above translation as regards the last sentence differs from the translation of P. C. Tagore, which is as follows:—

"If the mother, on the death of her son, gets his immoveable property, she cannot make a gift of it, or dispose of it at her pleasure."

The learned Advocate for the respondent is quite willing to adopt the translation by G. C. Sastri. It is to be noted that the word (husband) in Sastri's translation of this sentence occurs in some texts and not in others.

The argument of the learned Counsel for the appellants is as follows: The original Slokas of Katyayana restrict the wife's right of disposing of property gifted to her by her husband, but the Vivada Chintamani by analogy (or expectancy) extends the restriction to property inherited from her husband and to property inherited from the husband through the son; a correct reading of the Vivada Chintamani leads to the further conclusion that as regards property inherited from the husband through the son the husband's heirs inherit the property after her death. The learned Counsel is unable to cite any ruling in support of his interpretation and candidly admits that he has adopted it from G. C. Sastri's treatise on Hindu Law, 4th Edition, page 411. It appears to us, however, that G. C. Sastri's reasoning is fallacious. All that appears to us to be said by the Vivada Chintamani is that just as in respect of property inherited from the husband the widow has no power of alienation, so also in respect of property which she has inherited from the son, the son having inherited it from the father, she has no power of alienation. In our opinion the Vivada Chintamani was not referring to the devolution of the property after the woman's death, but to the restriction of the woman's power of alienation, and the learned author appears to us to read more into the Vivada Chintamani than is to be found there. He is himself adopting the principle of "expectancy" so learnedly expounded by him. The learned Counsel for the appellants refers us to Musammatt Thakoor Deyhee v. Rai Baluk Ram (1), but this does not really help him since the widow had succeeded her husband and not her son. On the other hand the learned Advocate for the respondent cites Thakoorain Sohiba v. Mohun Lall (2). A died leaving his son B and a daughter C. The son succeeded his father and left a widow D, who succeeded him. She made an adoption. O's son alleged he was the next reversioner and claimed that the adoption was invalid. It was held that as sister's son he had no locus standi to sue and (the important point here) that the son B was the propositus. We have no doubt, though this is disputed, that the case was decided on the assumption that the parties were governed by the Mithila School. In Punchanund Ojha v. Lalshan Misser (3) it was taken for granted that the property went to the heirs of the son from whom the mother inherited it. The learned Advocate contends that in the passage of the Vivada Chintamani relied on for the appellants the husband is mentioned of necessity in order to arrive at the analogy for the restriction on alienating the son's estate. We consider this reasoning to be sound.

TORTAN BAI V. BALLABHJI OJHA.

(1) 11 M. I. A. 139 at p. 174; 10 W. R. (P. C.) 3; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 106; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 49; 2 Sar. P. O. J. 231; 20 E. R. 54.
 (2) 11 M. I. A. 386; 7 W. R. 25; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 681; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 289; 20 E. R. 146.
 (3) 3 W. R. 140.

For these reasons we are of opinion that the learned Additional District Judge, who has read the Sanskrit text in the original, has taken a correct view of the law.

The remaining ground of appeal relates to 14 bullocks purchased by Musammatt Kusumabai out of the income of the estate. The learned Additional District Judge has held, no doubt correctly, that the bullocks were purchased to carry on agricultural operations, and has held that they must have been, therefore, intended to be part of the estate, and as an accretion to the estate. For the appellants it is argued that the bullocks, being moveable property, formed part of their mother's stridhan. Reliance is placed on Birajun Koer v. Luchmi Narain Mahata (4), but that was a case of alienation, not of succession. It is argued that the special rules of the Mithila relied on as regards immoveable property leave it to be inferred that moveable property goes as stridhan to the widow's heirs. Reliance is also placed on Subramanian Chetti v. Arunachelum Chetti (5). The learned Advocate for the respondent cites Sridhar v. Kalipada (6) and Wahid Ali Khan v. Tori Ram (7). The correct view appears to us to be that where the circumstances are such as to show that a Hindu female purchases property from the income with a view of its becoming part of the main estate, it passes with the estate at her death, if it is previously undisposed of. We consider that the Additional District Judge has decided this question correctly.

The result is that the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) 10 C. 392; 8 Ind. Jur. 503; 5 Shome L. R. 160; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 262.

(5) 28 M. 1.

(6) 11 Ind. Cas. 971; 16 C. W. N. 106; 15 C. L. J. 12.

(7) 21 Ind. Cas. 91; 11 A. L. J. 856 at p. 560; 35 A. 551.

CHANDRA KUMAR BISWAS v. NABI BUX.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULES NOS. 164 TO 166 OF 1918.

July 26, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and

Mr. Justice Cuming.

CHANDRA KUMAR BISWAS—

PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER IN RULE No. 164

OF 1918

CHANDRA SEKHAR BISWAS—

PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER IN RULE No. 165

OF 1918

*versus*Shaikh NABI BUX—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY IN BOTH.

IN RULE No. 166 OF 1918

CHANDRA SEKHAR BISWAS—

PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

*versus*Shaikh PAHARU—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, rr. 25, 27—Appeal—Appellate Court, whether can order retrial of issues tried by trial Court.

Order XLI, rule 25, of the Civil Procedure Code does not contemplate an order by the Appellate Court directing a retrial by the primary Court of the issues tried and determined by that Court.

If an Appellate Court considers that any question of fact essential to the right decision of the suit has not been tried and determined by the trial Court, it may frame issues and direct the trial of such issues in the manner provided by Order XLI, rule 25, or it may proceed in the manner provided in Order XLI, rule 27.

Rules against the order of the Additional District Judge, 1st Court, 24-Perganas, in Title Appeals Nos. 72, 73 and 74 of 1917.

Babus Dwarka Nath Mitter and Narayan Chandra Kar, for the Petitioner.

Babus Mahendra Nath Roy and Manmohan Bose, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—These Rules are directed against orders made by the learned Additional District Judge of the 24-Perganas, by which in three analogous suits acting or purporting to act under Order XLI, rule 25, Civil Procedure Code, he directs the Court of first instance to retry two of the issues framed in that Court. We find that the issues of which the District Judge has directed a trial or retrial were in fact heard and determined by the Court of first instance. Order XLI, rule 25, does not contemplate an order directing a retrial by the Court of first instance of issues already tried and determined by that Court. If in the opinion of the Appellate Court questions of fact considered by that Court essential to the right decision of the suit upon the merits had not been tried and determined, it was open to the Appellate Court to frame issues setting out those questions of fact and direct the trial of such issues in the manner provided in the Order and rule we have cited. We must, therefore, make these Rules absolute, set aside the orders made by the learned Additional District Judge and send the appeals back to him, so that he may hear and dispose of them in accordance with law. At the re-hearing before him if he finds that essential questions of fact have not been determined, it will be open to him to set out those questions and direct their trial, or it will be open to him, if he thinks fit, to proceed in the manner provided in Order XLI, rule 27 and the following rules, or if the evidence and the findings arrived at are in his opinion sufficient, to dispose of the appeals on the record as it stands. Under the circumstances we do not think it necessary to make any order for costs.

NARAYAN DAS v. CHANDRABHAN.

*Rules made absolute.*NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 15-B OF 1917.

August 20, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Mitra, A. J. C.

NARAYAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

*versus*CHANDRABHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFEND-ANTS—RESPONDENTS.Power-of-attorney, construction of—Act done under power-of-attorney, challenged as being in excess of authority—Authority, proof of—Power to borrow, whether implies power to mortgage—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 197—Ratification, proof of.

Where an act purporting to be done under a power-of-attorney is challenged as being in excess of the authority conferred by the power, it is necessary to show that on a fair construction of the whole instrument, the authority in question is to be found within the four corners of the instrument either in express terms or by necessary implication. [p. 960, col. 2.]

A power to borrow money does not necessarily imply a power to mortgage property. [p. 960, col. 2.]

NARAYAN DAS V. CHANDRABHAN.

Where a power-of-attorney authorised the agent to borrow money, to execute a bond, sign the name and present the same for registration on behalf of his principal and also added a general clause that the donor of the power will be bound by any acts done by the donee, and the agent in pursuance of that power mortgaged his principal's property:

Held, that the mortgage, though binding upon the principal as a loan, was not binding as a mortgage. [p. 960, col. 2.]

Section 197 of the Contract Act lays down that a ratification may be express or implied from the conduct of the person on whose behalf the act is done. The acts relied upon as proving ratification, however, must be clearly inconsistent with a denial of liability. [p. 960, col. 2.]

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the District Judge, West Berar, Akola, dated the 12th October 1916, in Appeal No. 124 of 1916.

Messrs. P. S. Kotwal and M. V. Joshi, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. V. Kulkade and Sir B. K. Bose, for Respondent No. 1.

Mr. Bhawani Shankar, for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—The main point for decision is whether the mortgage-deeds are binding upon the respondent-defendant Chandrabhan. They were executed at a time when Chandrabhan was in jail, who had appointed one Khushal as his agent under a power-of-attorney dated July 1911 (Exhibit D-2). This authorises Khushal to borrow money to execute a bond, sign the name and present the same for registration on behalf of Chandrabhan. In addition to this there is the usual general clause that the donor of the power will be bound by any acts done by the donee. The Courts below have held that this power-of-attorney did not authorise Khushal to mortgage his principal's property. On behalf of the appellant reliance is placed upon the case of Bank of Bengal v. Ramanathan Chetty (1).

The facts of this case and the terms of the instrument there are clearly distinguishable from those of the case before me. Their Lordships, however, cited with approval a previous judgment of the Privy Council in a colourable case as applicable to powers-of-attorney executed in India. I quote, therefore, the following passage from Bryant v. La Banque du Peuple (2) from the judgment in the case of Bank of Bengal v. Ramanathan Chetty (1):

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 419; 30 M. L. J. 232; 20 C. W. N. 329; 3 L. W. 210; 19 M. L. T. 176; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 150; 14 A. L. J. 217; 23 C. L. J. 348; 18 Bom. L. R. 387; 9 Bur. L. T. 1; 43 C. 527; 8 L. B. R. 533 (P. C.).
(2) (1893) A. C. 170 at p. 177; 62 L. J. P. C. 63; 1 R. 336; 68 L. T. 546; 41 W. R. 600.

"Where an act purporting to be done under a power-of-attorney is challenged as being in excess of the authority conferred by the power, it is necessary to show that on a fair construction of the whole instrument the authority in question is to be found within the four corners of the instrument, either in express terms or by necessary implication." The power to hypothecate property is clearly not given in express terms. Is it given by necessary implication? In support of this the learned Advocate for the appellant wanted to rely upon oral testimony to the effect that Chandrabhan was willing that his property should be sold in order to enable him to defend himself from the criminal charge then pending against him. But such oral evidence is, in my opinion, excluded by section 91 of the Evidence Act. It is argued that the power to borrow necessarily implies power to mortgage property. I am clearly of opinion that there is no authority for any such contention. I hold, therefore, that the mortgages, though binding as loans, were not binding upon Chandrabhan as mortgages.

The next question is whether there has been a ratification of the mortgage by Chandrabhan. The Courts below have held that no such ratification has been proved. This is a mixed question of law and fact, but taking the principal facts, as found by the lower Appellate Court, I am unable to hold that ratification has been clearly proved. Section 197 of the Contract Act lays down that a ratification may be express or implied from the conduct of the person on whose behalf the acts are done. The acts relied upon as proving ratification must be clearly inconsistent with a denial of liability. Now in the present case as the money was borrowed and property mortgaged by the agent, an offer to pay money to the mortgagee does not necessarily prove a ratification of the mortgage as such. It is consistent with the admission of a liability for the loan, but not inconsistent with a denial of liability of the property pledged. Chandrabhan's statement in the lower Court (Exhibit P-7) is merely a statement of fact that a mortgage has been executed.

NALLADAROO v. HARI KISSEN RATHI.

The further statement recorded in the same deposition, that Chandrabhan did not take back the mortgage-deed because he had paid Rs. 1,700 only to Khushal, is still not an admission of liability under the mortgage-deed as such. Reliance is placed upon a notice dated 16th January 1914 by Chandrabhan to the plaintiff, in which it is stated, by selling one field to Ganpat Mohanaji he had already paid Rs. 1,700 to the plaintiff and offered Rs. 800 for redemption. The original is not before the Court. This is the description of the notice given in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court. I do not think importance should be attached to the word redemption used in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court. I think it does not amount to anything more than an offer to compromise, for the principal amount secured by the mortgage was Rs. 2,500, the offer made more than two years after the mortgage was of the principal sum only without interest. This does not unequivocally point to a ratification. It would appear from Exhibit D.1, which is a sale-deed in favour of Ganpat Mohanaji, that the original agreement was to pay Rs. 1,700, the consideration for the sale-deed to the plaintiff's guardian, and who thereupon attested the sale-deed. These lines have been scored through, and the document as finally registered mentions nothing about any agreement to pay the money to the plaintiff. Even if there had been any agreement to pay Rs. 1,700 to the plaintiff, that would still be not inconsistent with Chandrabhan's denial of liability under the mortgages as such.

The lower Court has passed a decree for Rs. 5,000, that is, for the whole principal and its damdupat. This involves a finding that no payment was made to the defendant of the amount of Rs. 1,700 and even if the payment had been made, it would not have conclusively shown that Chandrabhan ratified the mortgage. I hold, therefore, the finding that the ratification has not been proved, is a correct finding. In this view it is unnecessary to discuss the question whether the plaintiff is estopped against the defendants with regard to the release of his No. 191 included in the mortgage-deed. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

RULE Nisi No. 379 of 1918.

July 24, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Newbould and Mr. Justice Panton.

MESSRS. F. P. NALLADAROO & Co.—
DEFENDANTS No. 1.—PETITIONERS

versus

HARI KISSEN RATHI AND ANOTHER

—PLAINTIFFS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. IX, r. 9—Restoration of suit dismissed for default—Sufficient cause, absence of—Order restoring suit, whether without jurisdiction—Revision.

On an appeal against an order of the primary Court refusing to restore a suit dismissed for default the Appellate Court restored the suit, although it found that the plaintiff could not show sufficient cause for his non-appearance within the meaning of Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code:

Held, that the order of the Appellate Court was not without jurisdiction. [p. 963, col. 1.]

Rule against the order of the Munsif, 3rd Court, Bankura.

Mr. Zorab (with him Babu Satindra Nath Mukherjee), for the Petitioner.—This is a Rule to show cause why the order of the District Judge passed in appeal restoring a suit which was dismissed for default should not be set aside. The facts shortly stated are these: The plaintiff, opposite party, brought a suit at Bankura for setting aside a decree passed by the Court of Small Causes at Calcutta on the ground of fraud. When the case came up for hearing, the plaintiff was found absent so the suit was dismissed for default. The plaintiff then made an application under Order IX, rule 9, of the Civil Procedure Code for getting the order of dismissal set aside. The Court of first instance dismissed the application for restoration on the ground that the plaintiff failed to show any sufficient cause which had prevented him from appearing in Court when the case had been called on for hearing. It further found that as the plaintiff intentionally and deliberately kept away when the case was called on for hearing, the application for restoration should not be allowed. Against that order of the Court of first instance there was an appeal by the plaintiff, and the Appellate Court held that although the plaintiff did not show any sufficient cause for non-appearance, yet in the exercise of its discretion the suit should be restored for the ends of justice.

NALLADARCO v. HARI KISSEN RATHI.

My submission is that in the absence of any sufficient cause which would bring the case within the purview of Order IX, rule 9, of the Civil Procedure Code, the Appellate Court acted without jurisdiction in ordering the restoration of the suit by setting aside the order of the primary Court. If for the sake of mere ends of justice a suit is to be restored to file, then the object of Order IX, rule 9, would be frustrated and there would be no end of litigation and harassment of litigant parties.

Babu Dwarka Nath Ohakrabarty (with him Babu Bankim Chandra Mukherjee), for the Opposite Party.—The Appellate Court was quite right in restoring the suit to file in the exercise of its judicial discretion, and it has got jurisdiction to do so for the ends of justice in cases which do not strictly fall within the purview of Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code. In deciding the case the learned Judge appears to have distinguished two classes of cases, viz., (1) where the plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default has got a strict right to get his case restored, i. e., where he had sufficient cause for non-appearance as contemplated by Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, and (2) where the Court has got an inherent power to restore a suit for the ends of justice, even though the provisions of Order IX, rule 9, do not strictly apply to the case. In ordering the restoration of the suit if the learned Judge has exercised a judicial discretion, the petitioner has got nothing to complain of. Refers to Lalta Prasad v. Ram Karan (1). Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, makes it incumbent upon the Court to set aside the order of dismissal for default under certain circumstances, but nothing in the Code takes away the inherent powers of the Court to restore a suit to file for any other valid reason. Debi Bakhsh Singh v. Habib Shah (2). In that case Order IX, rule 9, was not strictly applicable, yet their Lordships thought that Order IX, rule 9, is controlled by section 151, and the Court could order restoration for the ends of justice. If the Judge believes my story but considers that the reason given by me cannot be said to be a sufficient cause within the meaning of Order IX, rule 9, he can, in the exercise of his discretion, restore the suit.

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 187; 34 A. 426 at 428; 9 A. L. J. 66.

My next point is that this is an application under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, and your Lordships cannot interfere unless there is a question of jurisdiction. Here no question of jurisdiction is involved. The order passed by the learned Judge cannot be said to be without jurisdiction. He is perfectly right in the law on which he has decided the appeals and there is nothing wrong in the judgment of the Appellate Court. Even mere error of law is not sufficient for your Lordships' interference in revision, unless there is some erroneous exercise of jurisdiction by the Appellate Court. The laches, if any, may be sufficiently punished by making an order for costs, because the Courts do not exist for the enforcement of discipline but for the decision of the rights of the parties. Refers to Cropper v. Smith (3).

Mr. Zorab, in reply.—The finding of the Court of first instance is that the absence of the plaintiff is deliberate and intentional, and this finding has not been reversed by the Appellate Court. Having found that there was no sufficient cause within the meaning of Order IX, rule 9, for restoring the suit, the Appellate Court should have dismissed the appeal. Without doing so it proceeded to decree the appeal on the ground that in its discretion the suit should be restored. The case of Lalta Prasad v. Ram Karan (1) shows that the Court may for any valid reason restore the suit for the ends of justice. But the learned Judge in this case has not assigned any reason whatsoever for restoring the suit except this, that in his discretion the application for restoration should be allowed. Discretion means judicial discretion and not mere caprice or humour. If the judgment of the Appellate Court is allowed to stand, then in no case is a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default to make out a sufficient cause as required by Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code. He may get the order of dismissal set aside by showing some cause not coming within the purview of Order IX, rule 9, but which would satisfy the humour or caprice of the Court. The learned Judge has acted without jurisdiction in ordering the restoration of the suit. The Court of first instance in the exercise of its discretion dismissed the application for restoration. In reversing its order of dismissal the learned Judge has substituted his own discretion for that of the first Court, and he was not justified in doing so unless there is some special reason. Refers to Rehmat-un-nissa Begum v. Price (4). If the decision of the Appellate Court be taken to be correct, then it would free the plaintiff in each and every case from the burden of proving sufficient cause as required by Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, and the question of restoring or not restoring a case is to be left to the mere caprice or humour of the Court.

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 526; 40 I. A. 150 at p. 154; 35 A. 331; 17 C. W. N. 829; 11 A. L. J. 625; 18 C. L. J. 9; 15 Bom. L. R. 640; 25 M. L. J. 149; 14 M. L. T. 33; (1913) M. W. N. 566; 16 O. C. 194 (P. C.).

(3) (1884) 26 Ch. D. 700 at p. 710; 53 L. J. Ch. 891; 51 L. T. 733; 33 W. R. 60.

SECRETARY OF STATE v. CHATURBHUI NANDA.

JUDGMENT.—Our attention has been drawn to a decision of the Allahabad Court in the case of Lalta Prasad v. Ram Karan (1) and also to the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Debi Bakhsh Singh v. Habib Shah (2) and, on a consideration of these rulings, we are of opinion that the order of the District Judge is not without jurisdiction. We accordingly discharge this Rule with costs, hearing fee two gold mohurs.

Let the record be sent down at once.

Rule discharged.

(4) 45 Ind. Cas. 568; 27 O. L. J. 623; 22 C. W. N. 601; 16 A. L. J. 513; 5 P. L. W. 25; 23 M. L. T. 400; 8 L. W. 53; 20 Bom. L. R. 714; 35 M. L. J. 262; 42 B. 380.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2390
OF 1916.

August 7, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and
Mr. Justice Walmsley.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA
IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

CHATURBHUI NANDA—PLAINTIFF

AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 10—Appeal—Misjoinder of parties—Procedure, proper.

The appellant was the first defendant in a suit brought by the plaintiff. The primary Court decreed the suit with costs against the appellant. On appeal the lower Appellate Court, finding that the appellant was not a necessary party to the suit and was wrongly joined as a defendant, struck off the appellant's name from the record as a defendant and dismissed his appeal, making no order as to costs:

Held, that the proper order which should have been made by the lower Appellate Court was to set aside the order of the primary Court and to dismiss the suit against the appellant with costs. [p. 964, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Midnapur, dated the 23rd May 1916, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court of that District, dated the 30th January 1914.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Ram Charan Mitter (with him Babu Prish Chander Choudhry) for the Appellant.—The plaintiff brought a suit under section 104H of the Bengal Tenancy Act making the Secretary of State for India in Council a party defendant. The primary Court passed a decree against the defendant-appellant. On appeal, the lower Appellate Court, finding that the Secretary of State for India was not a necessary party and was wrongly joined as defendant to the suit, struck off the name of the Secretary of State as defendant without making any order as to costs. When in substance the lower Appellate Court allowed the appeal and set aside the decree of the Court of first instance, although it did not say so in so many words, it should have awarded costs to the Secretary of State.

Babu Saroda Charan Maity, for the Respondents.—The Secretary of State contested the suit, not only on the ground that he was not a necessary party, but also on other grounds. The Court of first instance found on all the issues raised against the Secretary of State and decreed the suit with costs. The lower Appellate Court found in his favour only on the point that he was not a necessary party. So the order of the Court of Appeal below dismissing the appeal without costs is correct. The question as to costs is discretionary with the Court, and the learned Judge in the exercise of his discretion has disallowed costs. The order of the Court as to costs should not be interfered with in appeal.

SITABAI V. BAPU ANNA

Babu Ram Charan Mitter, in reply :—When the lower Appellate Court allowed the contention of the appellant that he was not a necessary party to the suit, his order dismissing the appeal in toto without costs is bad.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal preferred by the defendant, the Secretary of State for India in Council, against the decision of the learned District Judge of Midnapur, dated the 23rd May 1916. In form, the decision of the learned District Judge affirms the decision of the Subordinate Judge; but, in substance, it does not. The suit was brought by the plaintiff under the provisions of section 104H of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The first defendant was the Secretary of State for India in Council. Before the Subordinate Judge, the plaintiff was successful and, in that Court, the learned Judge directed the Secretary of State to pay the costs of the plaintiff. The Secretary of State then preferred an appeal to the Court of the District Judge and the learned District Judge, having properly directed himself to the law, as is admitted on both sides, held that the Secretary of State for India in Council was not a necessary party to the suit and ought not to have been joined as a defendant. Thereupon, the learned District Judge said that he would strike off from the record the name of the Secretary of State for India in Council as a defendant to the suit and, as a necessary consequence of that, he dismissed the appeal of the Secretary of State making no order as to costs. That obviously is wrong. The proper order the learned Judge ought to have made is this. The learned District Judge should have set aside the order of the primary Court in so far as it decreed the plaintiff's suit against the first defendant and, in lieu thereof, he ought to have directed that the suit as against the first defendant should stand dismissed with costs both in the primary Court and before himself. That is the order which we must make, with this addition that the appellant must have his costs in this Court also. The decree as against the other defendants will stand.

Appeal decreed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 104 OF 1917.

October 5, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

SITABAI—APPLICANT

versus

BAPU ANNA AND OTHERS—NON-APPLICANTS.

Will—Executor becoming incapable of acting—Administrator, appointment of—Public officer, whether can be appointed.

In the absence of a Statute authorising such an appointment, a public officer and his successors-in-office should not be asked to undertake duties, e.g., the duties of an Administrator, which are outside their official duties. [p. 964, col. 2]

Where one of the executors appointed under a Will retired with the permission of the Court and the other became an insolvent and the Court thereupon appointed the Deputy Commissioner of the District to act as Administrator of the estate:

Held, that the order appointing the Deputy Commissioner to act as Administrator was ultra vires and must be set aside. [p. 965, col. 1.]

Revision of the order passed by the District Judge, East Berar, Amraoti, in Miscellaneous Probate Case No. 1 of 1901, on the 9th May 1917.

Mr. G. V. Deshmukh, for the Applicant.

Messrs. M. V. Joshi and V. D. Sathey, for the Non-Applicants.

ORDER.—Of the surviving executors appointed under the Will of Mr. Jog one has become insolvent and the other retired with the permission of the Court. The District Judge has now appointed the Deputy Commissioner, Amraoti, to act as Administrator. This order is ultra vires. In the absence of a Statute authorising such an appointment, a public officer and his successors-in-office cannot be asked to undertake duties outside their official duties. Before inviting the Deputy Commissioner to become Administrator, the District Judge should have fully realised the situation in which he was placing him. The Administrator has to collect debts, pay legacies and carry out the terms of the Will, and these duties may be prolonged indefinitely during the lifetime of the legatees and the testator's widow Sitabai. Suits will have to be filed by the Administrator and it is difficult to see how funds are to be supplied to him. He may be held responsible for the costs of litigations if eventually the appeal now pending before the Privy Council is successful. I hold that the order was ultra vires and it is accordingly set aside.

JOGENDRA NATH MALLIK v. SHIB NARAYAN MUKERJEE.

My attention has also been called to a previous order to be found in the order-sheet dated the 30th April 1917, in which it is recited that the appointment of Mr. Jog as guardian is cancelled. This is not correct. So far as I can find, there is no such order either in these proceedings or in the proceedings under the guardianship case. Each party will bear the costs of this petition of revision in both Courts.

Order set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 356 OF 1918.

August 19, 1918.

Present.—Mr. Justice Fletcher and

Mr. Justice Walmsley.

JOGENDRA NATH MALLIK—JUDGMENT—

DEBTOR—PETITIONER

versus

SHIB NARAYAN MUKERJEE—DECREE—

HOLDER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B C. of 1885), s. 170, cl. (3)
—Purchaser at rent sale, whether can deposit money for release of holding attached in execution of subsequent rent-decree against original tenant—Benamidar of original tenant, right of, to make deposit.

A purchaser at a sale in execution of a rent-decree, who is not a party to a subsequent decree for rent obtained by the landlord against the original tenant, is not entitled under section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to deposit the decretal amount due under the latter decree, inasmuch as his interest is not voidable at the sale in execution of the decree against the original tenant. [p. 966, col. 1.]

If such a purchaser is a benamidar of the original tenant, he has got no interest at all in the holding, voidable or otherwise, and, therefore, has no right under section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to make the deposit. [p. 966, col. 1.]

Rule against the order of the Munsif, 1st Court, Howrah, in Rent Execution Case No. 264 of 1918.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Hemendra Chunder Sen for Babu Jotindra Lal Banerjee, for the Petitioner.—This Rule arises out of an application under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code against an order refusing to allow the petitioner to deposit in Court, under section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the amount due to the decree-holder landlord. The petitioner purchased the holding at a sale in execution of a previous rent-decree obtained by the opposite party landlord against the original tenant. Then the opposite party landlord brought this suit for rent against the original tenant without making the petitioner a party to that suit, obtained a decree and in execution of the decree attached the holding. The petitioner, who had acquired an interest in the holding by his purchase at the rent sale, applied to deposit the amount due under the rent-decree to get the holding released from attachment. The landlord decree-holder knew very well that the original tenant had no interest in the holding after the petitioner's purchase at the rent sale and with a view to get rid of the petitioner's interest in the holding by the sale in execution, he brought a rent suit and obtained a decree against the original tenant. The landlord cannot refuse to recognise the interest of the petitioner and the latter may make a deposit under section 170 (3). Refers to Tarak Das v. Harish Chandra (1).

[Babu Surendra Nath Roy, for the Opposite Party.—The petitioner is a benamidar of the original tenant.]

The petitioner's application has not been disallowed on that ground. The question is whether he can make a deposit under section 170 (3), and I submit that he can.

Babu Surendra Nath Roy (with him Babu Satyendra Nath Roy), for the Opposite Party, referred to Jotindra Mchan Tagore v. Durga Dabe (2). By the sale of the judgment-debtor's property the petitioner's interest in the property cannot in any way be affected.

(1) 16 Ind. Cas. 977; 17 C. W. N. 163; 16 C. L. J. 548.

(2) 10 C. W. N. 438.

HAZARIMUL-SHOHANLAL V. SATISH CHANDRA GHOSH.

JUDGMENT.—This is a Rule calling on the opposite party to show cause why the order complained of should not be set aside and the petitioner permitted to pay the amount of the rent decree into Court. The petitioner alleged that he had purchased the holding at a sale in execution of a rent-decree. Subsequent to that, the landlord opposite party brought a suit for rent against the original tenants and obtained a decree. Thereupon, the petitioner applied to deposit the decretal amount into Court under the terms of section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The Court below has found that the present applicant was not a party to the rent suit and that the rent-decree was not passed against him and has accordingly refused the petitioner's application. Of course, the petitioner does not come under the purview of section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. If his story is true that he has got an interest, it is not an interest voidable on the sale because the sale of the judgment-debtor's property will not include the property purchased by the present petitioner. Therefore, if that is right, the applicant does not come under section 170 (3).

The other allegation is that the present applicant is a benamidar. If he is a benamidar he has no interest at all, voidable or otherwise, and has got no right under section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to deposit the money. The present application is wholly misconceived. This Rule, therefore, fails and must be discharged with costs, one gold mohur.

Rule discharged.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 337 OF 1913.

July 18, 1918.

Present :—Justice Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, KT.

HAZARIMUL SHOHANLAL—PLAINTIFF

versus

SATISH CHANDRA GHOSH AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS.

*Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 108, Excep. (v), 109—
"Goods," meaning of—Transfer, fraudulent—Transferee,* whether gets good title—Share certificates accompanied by blank transfer deeds, whether negotiable—Negotiability, conditions of—Usage, effect of.

One S. was the owner of certain jute shares. One U. obtained the shares from S. by fraudulent representations and sold them to L. who sold them to the plaintiff firm, the latter being bona fide purchasers. At the time of sale L., made over to the plaintiffs the share certificates and a blank transfer deed signed by J, the person then registered as owner of the shares:

Held, (1) that the transaction was covered by section 108 of the Contract Act and L, who bought the shares from U, did not acquire a good title to them and, therefore, could not pass a good title to the plaintiffs; [p. 968, col. 1; p. 999, col. 2.]

(2) that although U. was in possession of the shares, he could not give a good title under section 108, exception (1) of the Contract Act, which requires possession with the consent of the owner and which does not apply where that consent is obtained by deceit; [p. 968, col. 1.]

Cole v. North-Western Bank, (1875) 10 C. P. 354; 41 L. J. C. P. 233; 32 L. T. 733; Cahn v. Pockett's Bristol Channel Steam Packet Co., (1899) 1 Q. B. D. 643; 68 L. J. Q. B. 515; 80 L. T. 269; 47 W. R. 422; 8 Asp. M. C. 516; 4 Com. Cas. 163; 15 T. L. R. 247 and Oppenheimer v. Frazer, (1907) 2 K. B. 50; 76 L. J. K. B. 806; 97 L. T. 3; 12 Com. Cas. 289; 23 T. L. R. 410; 51 S. J. 373, relied upon.

(3) that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from L. the price they had paid for the shares with interest. [p. 970, col. 1.]

The expression "goods" in section 108 of the Contract Act includes all moveable property. [p. 963, col. 1.]

Share certificates with blank transfer deeds endorsed by the last registered owner are not negotiable instruments. [p. 969, col. 2.]

Mere proof of usage that sales of shares are effected by delivery of the certificate accompanied by transfer deeds endorsed in blank by the last registered owner is not sufficient to make the share certificates negotiable. [p. 969, col. 2.]

Certain requirements have to be fulfilled before a document can be considered negotiable. It must be in a form which renders it capable of being sued on by the holder of it pro tempore in his own name and it must be by the custom of trade transferable like cash by delivery. Failure of these requirements prevents a document from being considered negotiable. [p. 968, col. 2.]

Messrs. Zorab and A. N. Chaudhuri, for the Plaintiff Firm.

Messrs. N. Sirkar, H. D. Bose, S. C. Bose and R. C. Bannerji for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff firm claims to be the owner of 25 Baranagore Jute shares, being shares Nos. 51034 to 51088. These shares are now registered in the books of the Company in the name of Shohanlal, who is one of the partners of the plaintiff firm. The plaintiffs bought these shares from the defendant firm of Lalchand Prem.

HAZARIMUL-SHOHANLAL V. SATISH CHANDRA GHOSH.

sookh on the 7th May 1917 and paid for them at Rs. 27-8-0 per share. The defendant firm at the time of the sale made over to the plaintiff firm the certificate for the said shares and also a blank transfer deed signed by one Jugal Chandra Roy, whose name appeared upto the 11th May 1917 in the books of the said Company as the registered owner of the said shares. After the purchase by them the plaintiff firm got the transfer in the name of Shohanlal on the 12th May 1917. These shares were purchased by the defendant Satish Chandra Ghosh in February 1917. In or about April 1917 a person calling himself Upendra Nath Mukerjee came and proposed to him that he would be able to sell these shares at a better rate than was available in the market. Satish Chandra Ghosh thereupon made over these shares to his clerk Panchanan Mukerjee with directions to him not to part with the shares until cash was paid for them and he sent him with Upendra Nath Mukerjee. This happened on the 17th April 1917. It is stated by Panchanan Mukerjee that when they went to the share market, Upendra Nath Mukerjee persuaded him to make over the shares to him and asked him to wait as he was going to get payment for them; but eventually he did not turn up. Panchanan Mukerjee waited for sometime and then went to his master and reported that he could not trace the man, and from that time Satish Chandra Ghosh could not trace these shares until a Police enquiry was held. These shares appear to have been purchased by the defendant firm of Lalchand Premsookh & Co. from Upendra Nath Mukerjee. It is said by them that a sawda was made on the 5th May 1917, but that the shares were actually delivered to them on the 7th May; that payment was made to Upendra Nath Mukerjee by a crossed cheque; but that a few days later the man came back with the crossed cheque and said that he could not cash the crossed cheque and thereupon it is said that the defendant firm of Lalchand Premsookh & Co. paid him cash and took back the cheque. This payment is said to have been made on the 16th May. The rate at which they purchased was Rs. 85 and they say that they paid brokerage also. The plaintiffs bought from Lalchand Premsookh as above mentioned. I am satisfied upon the evidence that Satish Chandra Ghosh owned these shares and that Upendra Nath Mukerjee obtained them by a trick and disappeared with them. I am also satisfied that the plaintiffs purchased from the defendant firm of Lalchand Premsookh bona fide, that they paid full value for them and that they subsequently got their name registered as above mentioned. I am not quite satisfied with the account given by Lalchand of the transaction with Upendra. His account of the matter before me differs from the account given by him in the Police Court in important particulars. His clerk Lal Behari was examined, but he had no personal knowledge of the sawda. On the first day of the examination of Lalchand, he said nothing about one Jowala Prosad having acted as broker in the transaction, but he made such a statement on the second day of the hearing. Jowala Prosad has been examined and he says that he met Upendra Nath Mukerjee in the share market and had a conversation with him, that Lalchand came up, and then the matter was discussed between Lalchand and Upendra Nath Mukerjee and the purchase was effected by Lalchand. He says that although he was not a broker in the transaction, he was present at the time when the matter was discussed and, therefore, he claimed brokerage, and Lalchand "out of kindness" gave him some brokerage which he said was Rs. 12 8-0, but from the books of Lalchand Rs. 25 purports to have been paid to Jowala Prosad, which is more than the ordinary brokerage. Lalchand, although old and illiterate, is a shrewd man of business. It is absolutely impossible to rely upon his statements and I am not at all satisfied with the account of the transaction given by him. It is not supported with regard to the details by anybody; but having regard to the large dealings of this firm I will not say that the transaction was mala fide. Even accepting the figure mentioned by Lalchand as having been paid, the rate was somewhat lower than the market rate. No attempt has been made to prove that Upendra was a broker or that he was known as such. Lalchand's statement to that effect I am not prepared to accept. In his books the name of Dutt and Mukerjee appears, but the cheque was drawn in the name of

HAZARIMUL SHOHANLAL v. SATISH CHANDRA GHOSH.

Upendra Nath Mukerjee. It has not been shown that there was any such firm of brokers as Dutt and Mukerjee. I have carefully considered the matter and I am not at all satisfied with the account given by Lalchand or with the nature of the transaction between him and Upendra.

Under these circumstances what is the result? These shares were obtained by fraud from Satish Chandra Ghosh by Upendra Nath Mukerjee. He was tried in the Calcutta Police Court and has been convicted. The conviction is on alternative sections, criminal breach of trust, or cheating, but which section in fact it was, is immaterial. I hold that he obtained possession of these documents upon a fraudulent representation either to Satish Chandra Ghosh or his clerk and that he fraudulently dealt with these shares. If the transaction is covered by section 108 of the Contract Act, I hold that the person who purchased these shares from him did not acquire good title. The expression "goods" in that section includes all moveable property, see section 76 of the Contract Act. It was said that inasmuch as Upendra Nath Mukerjee was in possession, he could give good title under section 108, exception (1), but that exception requires possession with the consent of the owner. Here the consent was obtained by deceit and I, therefore, hold that the exception is not applicable. In support of this I refer to Cole v. North-Western Bank (1), Oahn v. Pockett's Bristol Channel Steam Packet Company (2) and Oppenheimer v. Frazer (3).

It has been argued that by mercantile usage these documents, share certificates with blank transfer deeds endorsed by the last registered owner, are negotiable instruments. These are certificates of shares in a Company whose Articles of Association require that the transfer shall be by a separate instrument executed both by the transferor and transferee and that the name of the transferee shall be entered in the register of shareholders. On the face of these documents they are not transferable, but it is claimed that inasmuch as in the Calcutta market sales of shares are effected when they are accompanied by such blank transfer deeds and pass from hand to hand, they are, therefore, to be considered as negotiable instruments; but certain requirements have to be fulfilled before any instrument of this character can be considered negotiable. It must be in a form which renders it capable of being sued on by the holder of it pro tempore in his own name and it must be by the custom of trade transferable like cash by delivery. Failure of these requirements prevents its being treated as a negotiable instrument. See Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 2, page 565, Article 967. It practically sums up what has been held in England. The authorities are there noted and it is, therefore, unnecessary to repeat them. In Chalmers's Bills of Exchange, 7th Edition, page 359, share certificates with blank transfers are stated not to be negotiable instruments on the authority of, amongst other cases, Swan v. North British Australasian Company (4). The position of similar documents has been discussed in a great many cases and it is perhaps useful to refer to some of them. In Colonial Bank v. Hepworth (5) the question is elaborately discussed. The following passage occurs at page 51:—"The ultimate shape in which the plaintiff's Counsel put their arguments was this: They did not contend, and indeed they could not have successfully contended, that the certificates with blank transfers were negotiable instruments in the strict sense of the term; but they urged that these documents were what they term negotiable by estoppel. They contended that the effect of the mere delivery of the document to a bona fide purchaser operated as a legal as well as equitable transfer of the shares whatever might be the defect in the title of the vendor, and that every prior holder was estopped from denying the title of such bona fide purchaser. They founded this argument on the first proposition relied on by Lord Cairns in Goodwin v. Roberts (6)."

(1) (1878) 10 C.P. 354 at pp. 373; 44 L.J.C.P. 233; 32 L.T. 733.

(2) (1899) 1 Q.B.D. 643 at p. 659; 69 L.J.Q.B. 515; 80 L.T. 269; 47 W.R. 422; 8 Asp. M.C. 516; 4 Com. Cas. 168; 15 T.L.R. 247.

(3) (1907) 2 K.B. 50; 76 L.J.K.B. 806; 97 L.T. 8; 12 Com. Cas. 289; 23 T.L.R. 410; 51 S.J. 373.

(4) (1863) 2 H. & C. 175; 32 L.J.Ex. 273 at p. 278; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 102; 11 W.R. 862; 159 E.R. 73; 126 R.R. 617.

(5) (1887) 36 Ch.D. 36; 56 L.J.Ch. 1089; 57 L.T. 148; 36 W.R. 259.

(6) (1876) 1 A.C. 476; 45 L.J.Ex. 743; 35 L.T. 179; 24 W.R. 987.

HAZARIMUL-SHOHANLAL v. SATISH CHANDRA GHOSH.

Discussing the question of estoppel the learned Judge says on page 53 "Estoppels cannot be manufactured arbitrarily; no estoppel can be raised on a document inconsistent with the terms of the document itself. What then is the estoppel here? Having regard to the practice proved and the condition in which these documents are when they pass from hand to hand, the right principle to adopt with reference to them is to hold that where the transfers are duly signed by the registered holders of the shares, each prior holder confers upon the bona fide holder for value of the certificates for the time being an authority to fill in the name of the transferee and is estopped from denying such authority, and to this extent, and in this manner, but not further, is estopped from denying the title of such holder for the time being. By the delivery an inchoate legal title passes, but a title by unregistered transfer is not equivalent to what has been termed 'Legal Estate' in the shares, or to the complete dominion over them."

In London and County Banking Company v. London and River Plate Bank (7) the question arose with regard to a certain share certificate which was in this form "... is entitled to 20 shares in the capital stock of the Company transferable only in person or by attorney on the books of the said Company." On the back of that document was the power-of-attorney. This was executed in blank for the name of the transferee and of the attorney. It was held, having regard to those circumstances, that it was a negotiable instrument. This question was again considered in the Colonial Bank v. Cady (8). Those shares were transferable on the books of the Company only on the surrender and cancellation of the certificate by endorsement thereon. Lord Watson expressed an opinion that in a case like that when the endorsed transfer had been duly executed by the registered owner of the shares, the name of the transferee being left blank, delivery of the certificates in that condition by him or by his authority transmitted his title to the shares both legal and equitable.

The person to whom it was delivered could effectually transfer his interest by handing his certificate to another, and the document could thus pass from hand to hand until it came into the possession of the holder who thought fit to insert his name as transferee and to present the document to the Company for the purpose of having his name entered in the register of shareholders and obtaining a new certificate in his favour. Lord Watson was of opinion that the negotiability of such an instrument was not based upon custom but upon estoppel and that the estoppel did not arise out of the mere form of the instrument but out of the fact (if it were a fact) that the owner had represented to the holder as having full authority to deal with the instrument. Lord Herschell added that the mere delivery of the certificate with the endorsed blank transfer and power-of-attorney, signed irrespective of any act or intent of the owner of the share, was not of itself sufficient to pass the title to them. Applying the tests suggested in the English cases and the principles therein enunciated, I hold that the shares in question cannot be treated as negotiable instruments. There is nothing more in the shape of evidence of usage in this case before me than that share certificates with transfer deeds endorsed in blank pass from hand to hand. For legal title it is conceded they must be registered in the books of the Company. I know of no case where it has been held that a transfer deed executed by a transferor in blank as regards the transferee and accompanied by the transferor's share certificates are negotiable instruments transferable by delivery and confer a good title on a bona fide holder without notice of any defect in the title of the person from whom he receives them, nor has any such case been brought to my notice. The idea of dealings in shares in this country has come from England and practically the same practice prevails here as in the English Market, and I think that unless there are distinguishing features we ought to follow the law on the subject as is to be found in English cases. I hold that the defendant firm did not acquire good title to these shares and that the plaintiffs by their purchase did not acquire title to them.

(7) (1888) 20 Q. B. D. 232.

(8) (1890) 15 A. C. 267; 60 L. J. Ch. 131; 63 L. T. 27; 39 W. R. 17.

JWALAPRASAD V. PUNDLIK PANDURANG.

Then the question arises as to what the plaintiffs are entitled to, their purchase having been bona fide and for value from the defendant firm. Under section 109 of the Contract Act the plaintiffs are entitled to recover the loss caused to them in consequence of these shares being declared not to belong to them. They claimed the market value of these shares on the date the Police took possession of them, and all interim dividends and privileges which have been declared and granted by the Company. On this basis they claim at the rate of Rs. 230 per share, but I do not think that they can claim anything more than the value that they paid for these shares with interest from the date of payment at 6 per cent. The result is that the shares are declared as not belonging to them, but as belonging to Satish Chandra Ghosh; that they are entitled to the price that they paid for such shares from the defendant firm with interest as above mentioned; that they are to pay the costs of Satish Chandra Ghosh of this action on scale No. 2 including reserved costs, if any, and to add such costs to their claim and to recover same as against the defendant firm. The plaintiffs will get their costs from the second defendant on scale No. 2.

Order accordingly.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 607 OF 1917.

April 25, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Kotwal, A. J. C.

JWALAPRASAD—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

PUNDLIK PANDURANG—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 176—Bailment—Pledge—Notice, whether necessary before suit.

Section 176 of the Contract Act requires a notice only when the pawnee wishes to exercise his option of selling the pledged goods. If he chooses to bring a suit upon the debt, no notice is required by that section.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Bhandara.

Mr. G. B. Pradhan, for the Appellant.

ABHA MUNSHI V. KAMU MOLLA.

JUDGMENT.—In view of the finding of the lower Appellate Court that the plaintiff had verbally asked the defendant to re-pay the loan several times, I cannot see my way to interfere with that Court's decision. Section 176 of the Contract Act requires a notice only when the pawnee wishes to exercise his option of selling the pledged goods. If he chooses to bring a suit upon the debt no notice is apparently required by that section.

As to ground No. 1 it seems to me that the whole case was here opened up on record, and it was open to the lower Appellate Court to reconsider its finding arrived at the ex parte hearing.

The finding may have been adverse to the appellant on that hearing, because he may have thought it unnecessary to prove his case fully on the point involved in the finding, hoping to succeed on other points. At any rate the finding referred to in ground No. 1 makes no difference to the result of the appeal before the lower Appellate Court.

This appeal fails and is dismissed under Order XLI, rule 11, Civil Procedure Code.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 368 OF 1918.

August 23, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

ABHA MUNSHI—PETITIONER

versus

KAMU MOLLA—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 18, Sch. I, Art. 166—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 90—Execution of decree—Sale—Application to set aside sale made more than thirty days after date of sale—Applicability of s. 18—Finding, necessary.

It is not competent to a Court to come to the conclusion that an application to set aside a sale under Order XXI, rule 90, of the Code of Civil Procedure made more than thirty days from the date of sale falls within the provisions of section 18 of the Limitation Act, without finding as a fact the date or time when the applicant came to know of the sale. [p. 271, col. 2]

Rule against the order of the Court of the Additional Sub-Judge, Noakhali, in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 144 of 1917.

KANCHANI BEWA v. JADUB PRAMANIK.

Moulvi A. S. M. Akram, for the Petitioner.—The petitioner purchased a certain holding at a sale in execution of a decree for rent. The sale took place on 27th November 1916. Thereafter the opposite party, claiming to have an interest in a portion of the lands sold, filed an application under Order XXI, rule 90, Civil Procedure Code, to get the sale set aside on the ground of fraud and irregularity. That application was made more than thirty days after sale. The application was allowed on the ground that the applicant was kept in ignorance of the sale through fraud and, therefore, his case came within the purview of section 18 of the Limitation Act. But the learned Munsif has not found when the opposite party came to know of the sale. My submission is that, without finding as a fact the date or the time when the applicant first became aware of the sale, the Court below was not competent to find that the case came within the purview of section 18 of the Limitation Act. It is impossible to know from the judgment of the Court below whether the application under Order XXI, rule 90, was made within thirty days from the date of knowledge of sale.

Babu Bepin Ohandra Bose, for the Opposite Party.—The Court below, by finding that the petitioner has brought his case within the purview of section 18 of the Limitation Act, has found by implication that the application was made within thirty days from the date of knowledge.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This Rule was issued at the instance of the petitioner, who is a purchaser at a sale in execution of a rent decree held on the 27th November 1916, calling on the opposite party to show cause why the order of the learned Additional District Judge should not be set aside. The case is a perfectly simple one. As I have already stated, the present petitioner purchased in execution of a rent decree on the 27th November 1916. The opposite party claims 1/3rd of the property to which the present application relates as being the purchaser at a sale in execution of a mortgage decree. The present case is this: On the 2nd April 1917, the opposite party made an application to the Court under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 90, Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside the rent sale on the ground of material irregularity and fraud. It is quite clear that that application could not be heard, because the period for making such an application was thirty days from the date of the sale, unless the applicant could bring himself within the provisions of section 18 of the Indian Limitation Act. The learned Judge considered that he had brought himself within the purview of section 18 of the Limitation Act. Whether he has or has not, it is not for us to say. But on the facts found, it is quite clear that the Judge was not entitled to come to the conclusion he has, because he has not found when the opposite party came to hear of the sale and unless he finds as a fact when the opposite party came to know of the sale, he cannot find whether the case comes within the provisions of section 18 of the Limitation Act or not. The case cannot stand on the findings of fact that have been made by the learned District Judge. We must, therefore, set aside the judgment of the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court and remit the case to him to re-hear it and to come to a proper finding on the facts in order to determine the matter that was pending before him. We make no order as to the costs of this Rule.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

Case remitted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 214 OF 1918.

July 26, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Cuming.

KANCHANI BEWA alias KANDANI BEWA—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER*versus*

JADUB PARAMANIK AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 10

BIJOY CHAND V. THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

—Appeal in forma pauperis—Security for costs, whether can be demanded.

A plaintiff preferring an appeal in forma pauperis cannot be required to give security for costs of the original suit or of the appeal.

Rule against the Court of the District Judge, Faridpur, in Title Appeal No. 325 of 1917.

FACTS of the case will appear from the following extract from the petition to the High Court:—

"That the learned District Judge of Faridpur, by his order, dated the 5th October 1917, permitted the petitioner to appeal as a pauper.

That on 11th February 1918 the opposite party Nos. 1 to 4 filed a petition under Order XLI, rule 10, Civil Procedure Code, praying that proper security for costs in the lower Court and in the Appellate Court be taken from the appellants.

That on the 27th February 1918 when the appeal came on for hearing, the Pleaders on both sides agreed that the granting or refusing of the respondents' prayer for security for costs was in the discretion of the Court.

That on the 27th February 1918 the appeal remained part heard.

That on the 28th February 1918 when the hearing of the appeal was resumed, the appellant's Pleader tried to contend that the Court had no jurisdiction to demand security for costs in the case of a pauper, but the learned District Judge of Faridpur did not hear him at all on the ground that the Pleader for the appellant was too late in his contention, and on the same day passed an order under Order XLI, rule 10, Civil Procedure Code, requiring the petitioner to furnish to the Appellate Court security for costs of the original suit and of the appeal."

Against the above order of the Appellate Court the petitioner moved the High Court and obtained this Rule.

Dr. Sarat Chunder Bysack (with him Babu Debendra Chunder Paul), for the Petitioner.—The petitioner brought a suit in forma pauperis and part of her claim was allowed by the first Court. She appealed in forma pauperis and on the application of the respondents the learned District Judge ordered security for costs from the appellant in the lower Appellate Court. My submission is that no security for costs can be demanded from a person suing or appealing in forma pauperis, inasmuch as the general provisions of Order XLI, rule 10, Civil Procedure Code, do not apply to such a case. It is not possible for the pauper who cannot pay Court-fees to give security for costs. The authorities on this point are Khemraj Shrikrishna Das v. Kisanlala Surajmal (1), Musammatt Hafizan v. Abdul Karim (2) and Nusseerooddeen Biswas v. Ujjul Biswas (3).

Babu Suriya Kumar Guha, for the Opposite Party, referred to Seshayyengar v. Jainulavadin (4).

JUDGMENT.—On the authority of the decisions reported as Musammatt Hafizan v. Abdul Karim (2) and Khemraj Shrikrishna Das v. Kisanlala Surajmal (1) we make this Rule absolute and set aside the order against which it is directed. We make no order as to costs.

Rule made absolute.

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 67; 42 B. 5; 19 Bom. L. R. 771.

(2) 12 C. W. N. 163; 7 O. L. J. 312.

(3) 17 W. R. 68.

(4) 3 M. 66; 4 Ind. Jur. 507; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 603.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 161 OF 1917.

August 8, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

HON'BLE (MAHARAJADHIRAJ) SIR
BIJOY CHAND MAHATAB BAHADUR,
K. C. S. I., K. C. I. E., I. O. M.—PLAINTIFF
—APPELLANT

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA
IN COUNCIL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 96—Rectification of lease, suit for, on ground of mistake—Limitation—Lease—Rent receiver deprived of small portion of land without any reduction of rent, whether entitled to damages from lessor—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 35—Costs—Practice.

A suit for the amendment or rectification of a lease, on the footing of a common mistake of the lessor and the lessee under which some land was wrongly included in the lease, is governed by Article 96 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act and must be brought within three years from the date when the plaintiff became aware of the mistake. [p. 974, col. 2.]

As regards costs of suit the parties are, in the absence of any special reason, entitled to have the ordinary rule observed, namely, that usually costs follow the event. [p. 974, col. 2.]

BIJOY CHAND V. SECRETARY OF STATE.

The plaintiff took settlement of certain resumed Ghatwali lands from the Government, subject to a permanent lease granted by the Government to one U., on the footing that the property so settled with the plaintiff would be treated as a permanently settled estate. Subsequently one B. brought a suit with reference to a small portion of the said lands, which he alleged was lakheraj. That suit to which the present plaintiff and the defendants were made parties, was successful. The plaintiff then brought a suit against the Government for rectification of the lease and for the refund of a small sum of money:

Held, that the mere fact that as rent receiver the plaintiff was deprived of a small portion of the lands without any reduction of rent payable to him by U. would not entitle him to any damages. [p. 974, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Bankura, dated the 1st December 1916, affirming that of the Munsif, 2nd Court, Bishunpur, dated the 16th of August 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Basant Kumar Bose, (with him Babus Bepin Behari Ghose II and Sarat Kumar Mitter), for the Appellant.—This appeal is on behalf of the plaintiff, and it arises out of a suit for amendment of a lease and for recovery of a certain sum of money. The defence is, first, that the suit is barred by limitation because the previous suit, in which a portion of the lands leased was adjudged to be lakheraj, was disposed of in 1909 and the present suit was brought more than three years after that suit; secondly, that the suit is not maintainable because there cannot be any reduction of revenue.

As regards limitation, my submission is that the Courts below have erred in holding that Article 96 of the Limitation Act, which relates to relief on the ground of mistake, applies to the case. The cause of action of this suit arises from day to day and, therefore, no question of limitation arises. At any rate Article 120 is applicable to the facts of this case and the period of limitation is six years, because it is a case of breach of a covenant contained in a registered lease. Mistake is not the cause of action in this case and hence Article 96 does not apply. It is the dispossession of Umesh Chandra Roy that gives rise to the plaintiff's cause of action.

The next question is, whether the plaintiff can claim reduction by way of apportionment of rent for loss of land even though the rent is fixed in perpetuity. In the case of putni a lease it has been held by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee that the plaintiff can claim abatement of rent for loss of land. It is a case of equitable relief. If the plaintiff is dispossessed from part of the demised premises by a person claiming under a title paramount, he can claim abatement of rent even though the rent is fixed in perpetuity.

Babu Ram Charan Mitter (with him Babu Brish Chandra Chowdhry), for the Respondents.—The plaintiff's own case, as it appears from the statement in the plaint and the grounds in the memorandum of appeal, is that by mutual mistake of the parties the land was included in the indenture of lease and, therefore, the Courts below are justified in holding that the suit is barred by limitation under Article 96.

The cross-appeal is with regard to the costs. In dismissing the appeal the lower Appellate-Court should have allowed costs to the respondent, as there is no special reason why the order as to costs should not be made against the plaintiff.

Babu Basant Kumar Gose replied.

JUDGMENT.

FLEICHER, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff against the decision of the learned District Judge of Bankura, dated the 1st December 1916, affirming the decision of the Munsif of Bishunpore. The plaintiff brought the suit for the amendment or rectification of an indenture of lease and, as consequential thereon, for the refund of a certain small sum of money. The facts are these:—The Government had resumed certain Ghatwali lands. Those lands were let out permanently to one Umesh Chandra Roy. After the grant of this permanent lease to Umesh Chandra Roy, the Maharaja of Burdwan entered into an indenture with the Secretary of State for India in Council, by which he took a lease of the resumed lands subject to the lease that had been granted to Umesh Chandra Roy in perpetuity, on the footing that the property would be treated as a permanently settled estate and the Government revenue should not be liable to increase. Subsequently, one Bholanath brought a suit with reference to a small portion of this land, which he alleged was lakheraj. To that suit, both the present plaintiff and the defendant were made parties as defendants and the suit was successful. So, a portion of the land apparently included in the lease to the plaintiff went to Bholanath. The finding of the Court of first instance is this: Notwithstanding that the plaintiff may have lost the bare interest in this small piece of land, he is still obtaining the same rent from Umesh Chandra Roy. Whether that is so or not I do not know. But obviously it was the duty of the plaintiff to give evidence of what damage he suffered. The mere fact that as rent receiver he has been deprived of a small portion of this land without any reduction of the rent payable by Umesh Chandra Roy, would not entitle the plaintiff to substantial damages. Without proof of substantial damage, it would be nominal damage, if Umesh Chandra Roy on the terms of his bargain is liable to pay to the plaintiff the same amount of rent notwithstanding the loss of a small piece of land. The matter was, however, dealt with by the learned District Judge on a different point of view. He held that the present suit was barred by limitation. It is quite clear that the suit was instituted five years after the time when the parties came to know of the matter. In 1909, both parties came to know that this piece of land, that Bholanath recovered possession of in his suit, had been by a mistake included in the lease executed by the defendant to the plaintiff, and thereupon the plaintiff became aware that any right to have the document rectified, or as he calls it amended in his plaint, arose when he became aware that Bholanath's suit was finally decided in his favour. He waited for five years before stirring up; and the frame of the suit in this case, as it was put quite clearly in the plaint, was for the amendment of the document on the ground of mistake, and that is supported by the grounds of appeal to this Court because the first ground of appeal is framed on the basis that the land recovered in Bholanath's suit had been included in the lease to the plaintiff by a mutual mistake of the plaintiff and the defendant. Therefore, the plaint in the present case is clearly founded on the ground of a mutual mistake between the plaintiff and the defendant. If there was a mutual mistake between the parties, it is quite clear that Article 96 of the Indian Limitation Act governs the suit. Article 96 is as follows:—"For relief on the ground of mistake...three years from when the mistake became known to the plaintiff." The plaintiff's own case is that his suit is on the footing of a common mistake between the plaintiff and the defendant, by which this land was included in the lease to the plaintiff. The plaintiff became aware of that mistake in 1909 and under the terms of Article 93, he was bound to bring his suit within three years of becoming aware of the mistake. I agree with the view of the learned District Judge that the present suit is barred by the terms of Article 96 of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act. The appeal, therefore, fails and must stand dismissed.

BIJOY CHAND P., SECRETARY OF STATE.

The cross-objection of the defendant is preferred only with regard to costs. No reasons have been shown why the usual order should not be made as regards this. It does not appear that the learned District Judge exercised any discretion or considered the matter. As far as I can see, he seems to have considered this question of costs such a trifling matter as to be beneath the notice of the litigants. That obviously is not so. The parties are entitled to have the ordinary rule observed, namely, that usually costs follow the event. In this case nothing has been shown why the usual practice should not be adhered to. In that view, we must allow the cross-objection of the defendant and direct that the plaintiff's suit be dismissed with costs both in this and in the two lower Courts.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

*Appeal dismissed;
Cross-objection allowed.*

ROOPCHAND JANKIDAS v. NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 65 of 1917.

July 18, 1918.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, Kt.
ROOP CHAND JANKIDAS—PLAINTIFF

versus

THE NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA,
LTD., AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS.Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 108, Exception (1), 178—“Possession,” meaning of—Juridical possession—Transfer, fraudulent, of shares by person in possession, whether confers good title on bona fide transferee—Share certificate accompanied by transfer deed, whether negotiable.

The word “possession” in Exception (1) to section 108 of the Contract Act does not apply in the case of qualified possession, such as that of a hirer of goods or where the possession is for a specific purpose. Juridical possession is different from mere possession. [p. 975, col. 2; 976, col. 1.]

Greenwood v. Holquette, 12 B. L. R. 42; 20 W. R. 467, followed.

A pledgee's possession is not such possession as entitles him to deal with the goods in fraud of the rights of the owner. [p. 976, col. 1.]

Biddomoyee Dabee Dabee v. Sittaram, 4 C. 497; 3 C. L. R. 398; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 316, J. W. Seager v. Hukma Kessa, 24 B. 458; 2 Bom. L. R. 403; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 837, Naganada Davay v. Bappu Chettiar, 27 M. 424; 14 M. L. J. 69, relied upon.

Share certificates accompanied by transfer deeds endorsed in blank by the last registered owner cannot be considered as negotiable instruments. [p. 976, col. 2.]

Defendant Bank purchased certain jute shares for one of their constituents and deposited them with the officer in charge of their safe custody department. The latter handed over the shares to A, the head clerk of the department, for the purpose of getting them registered in the name of the constituent for whom they had been purchased. A fraudulently disposed of the shares to S, who sold them to M, who sold them to B, from whom the plaintiff purchased them in good faith:

Held, that inasmuch as the possession of A. did not come within the purview of section 108, Exception (1) of the Contract Act, he could not transfer a good title to S. and that the subsequent sellers did not pass a good title to their respective purchasers. [p. 976, col. 2.]

Mr. A. N. Chaudhuri (with him Mr. N. N. Sarkar), for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Langford James (with him Mr. Surita), for the Defendants.

Mr. H. D. Bose (with him Mr. S. Ghosh), for the other Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the plaintiff firm purchased 25 Kelvin Jute shares on the 2nd November 1916 from the defendant firm of Baijnath Champalal. Baijnath Champalal bought them from Mungiram Banger and Co., who purchased them from one Shamdas Sil, who in his turn purchased them from one Asutosh Ghose on the 1st November 1916. Before Asutosh Ghose obtained possession of these shares, they belonged to the National Bank of India, who are defendants in this action. The Bank purchased them for one of their constituents through their brokers, Place, Siddons and Gough. The purchase was made about the end of October 1916. Following the rule in the Bank these shares were made over to the officer in charge of their safe custody department. It is also the practice of the Bank to get the shares registered in the Company in the name of their constituents on whose behalf they are purchased. With that object these shares were made over by Ross, the officer then in charge of the safe custody department, to Asutosh Ghose, the head clerk of that department, who, without sending the shares to the Company for such registration, fraudulently disposed of them to Sham Das Sil. The Bank did not know that any fraud had been committed, or that these shares had been dealt with by Asutosh Ghose, until sometime about the end of November 1916. In the meantime these shares passed from hand to hand as above stated. The purchase by the plaintiff from Baijnath Champalal and by Baijnath Champalal from Mungiram Banger and Co. and even the purchase by Shamdas Sil were bona fide purchases; full value was paid for these shares and they passed from hand to hand. Attached to the share certificate was a deed of transfer endorsed in blank by the last registered owner, one H. P. Stringfellow. It was contended that inasmuch as Asutosh Ghose was in possession of these documents, he could transfer good title to Shamdas Sil, and the subsequent sellers passed good title to their respective purchasers. Now the use of the word “possession” in section 108, Exception (1), does not include possession of this character. These shares were in the custody of an officer of the Bank and were made over to Asutosh Ghose for a particular purpose and he dishonestly dealt with them. It was held in Greenwood v. Holquette (1) that the Exception did not apply in the case of qualified possession, such as that of a hirer of goods or where the possession was for a specific purpose. A clear disinction has been made in this Court in respect of juridical possession and mere possession. The same word is used in section 178 of the Contract Act in respect of pledges and it has been held in, amongst other cases, Biddomoyee Dabee Dabee v. Sittaram (2), J. W. Seager v. Hukma Kessa (3) and Naganada Navay v. Bappu Chettiar (4) that a pledgee's possession was not such possession as entitled him to deal with the goods in fraud of the rights of the owner. The Bank never intended Asutosh to deal with these shares, never authorised him to deal with them and did not do anything by which it might be presumed that he had authority, express or implied, to deal with these shares. It was an absolutely dishonest dealing by him without knowledge of the defendant Bank.

(1) 12 B. L. R. 42; 20 W. R. 467.

ROOPCHAND JANKIDAS v. NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA LTD.

It was next contended that the share certificates accompanied by the blank transfer deed were negotiable instruments by mercantile usage and were transferable freed from all equities and complete title passed from purchaser to purchaser upon delivery of the certificate and transfer deed. I have just dealt with the question as to whether such share-certificates can be considered as negotiable instruments in my judgment in Suit No. 337 of 1918, [Hazarimul Shohanlal v. Satish Chandra Ghosh (5)], and, therefore, it is unnecessary to repeat myself. There is a little more evidence in this case about usage than there was in Suit No. 337. [Hazarimull Shohanlal v. Satish Chandra Ghosh (5)]. A member of the firm of Place, Siddons and Gough stated that if the purchaser wanted his name registered and if the Company refused to register the document then they, as his brokers, would not consider the script as good delivery but would return it to the vendor. There was some evidence from the Bank of Bengal which does not purchase shares on its own account, but purchases them on account of their constituents. The officer in charge of that department of the Bank said that they did not recognise these documents until registration was effected in the name of the purchaser. There is evidence that in the market these shares, accompanied by transfer deeds blank endorsed by the last registered holder, pass from hand to hand and registration is effected by the last purchaser if he desires to register his name, but apparently in order to avoid the cost of stamps and to save time registration is not usually effected; but that does not, in my opinion, give a negotiable character to the certificate. The defendant Bank at the same time lost another lot of shares, which curiously came back to them after having passed from hand to hand. This is relied upon as a strong circumstance showing the negotiable character of the documents. I do not think that a circumstance of additional value. The document on the face of it does not show that it is transferable, and it is well known that registration is necessary for a legal title and that registration has to be effected in terms of the articles of association. Several purchasers in fact want registration to be effected and do not accept the delivery of the certificate with a transfer deed blank endorsed as effective. For the reasons I have already given, I cannot treat the transfers in this case as transfers of a negotiable instrument. I, therefore, hold that the Bank is entitled to recover these documents. They held these shares originally as banker for their constituent, but they have made over shares of equal value to him and are now entitled to possession of these shares on their own account, and the plaintiff is not entitled to the declaration he seeks for. I hold that the plaintiff is entitled to recoup his loss from his vendor and I make an order that he is to be paid by Baijnath Champalal the value paid by him for these shares with interest at 6 per cent. from the date of his purchase.

Asutosh Ghosh who abstracted these documents was prosecuted, but the Jury differing, a re-trial was ordered, but before the re-trial took place he committed suicide.

I shall deal with the question of costs after hearing Counsel, who have expressed a desire to be heard.

Order accordingly.

(2) 4 C. 497; 3 C. L. R. 398; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 316.
(3) 24 B. 458; 2 Bom. L. R. 403; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 837.

(4) 27 M. 424 at p. 425; 14 M. L. J. 69.

(5) 48 Ind. Cas. 966; 22 C. W. N. 1036.

EMPEROR v. HANUMAN.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 15 of 1915.

February 18, 1915.

Present:—Mr. Pridemox, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

HANUMAN—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1893), ss. 30, 207, 254, 347—Offence exclusively triable by Sessions Court, committal for, by Magistrate empowered under s. 30—Commitment, legality of.

The committal of a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session is not illegal merely because the Committing Magistrate is himself empowered under section 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code to try the case. [p. 977, col. 2.]

The words "ought to be tried" in sections 207 and 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code must be read with section 254 of the Code. [p. 978, col. 1.]

Under section 207 of the Criminal Procedure Code a Magistrate who is competent to commit to the Court of Session can commit to that Court cases triable exclusively by that Court and cases which in his opinion ought to be tried by that Court. [p. 977, col. 2.]

Queen-Empress v. Kayemullah Mandal, 24 C. 429; 1 C. W. N. 414; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 954 and King-Emperor v. Pema Ranchod, 4 Bom. L. R. 85, followed.

A commitment, however, made on the sole ground that the accused has been committed in another case is bad in law. [p. 978, col. 1.]

Reference by the Sessions Judge, Chhatisgarh Division, under section 435, Criminal Procedure Code, with a view to set aside the order of commitment of the accused to the Court of Session passed by the Magistrate, 1st Class, Bilaspur.

Mr. Dick, for the Crown.

ORDER.—This case has been reported by the Sessions Judge, Chhatisgarh Division, for quashing a commitment. A Rule having issued the learned District Magistrate shows cause as follows:—

(a) The committal of a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session does not become ipso facto illegal merely because the Magistrate is empowered under section 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

(b) That some High Courts have even gone so far as to hold that where an accused is charged as this accused with two offences, one of which he was competent to try and the other he was not, the proper course is committal, Empress v. Ramanand (1).

(c) It has also been held that a commitment should not be quashed on the ground that the Sessions Judge on perusal of the record found the case triable by a Magistrate of the 1st Class, Empress v. Mailu Shah (2).

(d) That in the present instance the two offences with which the accused is charged, murder and arson, were practically part of the same transaction and some of the witnesses are the same in both cases. The Committing Magistrate had, therefore, some grounds for considering that the accused would be to some extent embarrassed by a trial in different Courts.

In conclusion, however, the District Magistrate admits that he has no practical objection to offer to the quashing of the commitment.

It goes without saying that the committal of a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session is not illegal merely because the Magistrate is empowered under section 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and it may be admitted that there may be cases where an accused charged with two offences, one triable by a Magistrate the other by a Judge, should properly be committed to the Sessions for the trial of both. It may be conceded that it would be improper to quash a commitment merely on the ground that the offence the accused is charged with is triable by a Magistrate, for a Sessions Court can try any offence under the Indian Penal Code (Section 28, Criminal Procedure Code). There can be nothing to prevent a Magistrate committing even a summons case for good reasons. It has been held that under section 207, Criminal Procedure Code, "A Magistrate who is competent to commit to the Court of Session can commit to that Court both cases triable exclusively by that Court and cases which in his opinion ought to be tried by that Court;" Queen-Empress v. Kayemullah Mandal (3). In a warrant case the Magistrate is bound by the provision of section 254, that is, when he is of opinion that the accused has committed an offence triable under Chapter XXI which he is competent to try and which

(2) 22 P. R. 1582 Cr.

(3) 24 C. 429; 1 C. W. N. 414; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 954.

(1) A. W. N. (1883) 199; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 612.

JANKIBAI v. SHIVRAM BABAJI.

he can adequately punish, he shall proceed to charge the accused, but if the Magistrate considers that he cannot adequately punish the accused there is nothing to prevent him committing the case.

The words "ought to be tried" of sections 207 and 347, Criminal Procedure Code, it has been held, must be read with section 254 of the Code. Thus a case which the Magistrate is not competent to try should be committed; also one in which in the Magistrate's opinion he cannot inflict adequate punishment: King, Emperor v. Pema Ranchod (4).

In the case before me the accused, one Hanuman, has been committed to the Court of Session for an offence under section 436, Indian Penal Code, by the 1st Class Magistrate, Bilaspur, a Magistrate empowered under section 30, Criminal Procedure Code. It is said the accused set fire to a house and that immediately after doing so, went to another house and wounded a woman who has since died of her wounds. Accused has, in a separate case before the same Magistrate, been charged under section 302, Indian Penal Code, and committed for trial to the Sessions Court. The only reason given by the Magistrate for the commitment in the arson case is that the same accused has been committed in the murder case. The Magistrate does not say that the fine and sentence which he can impose will not be adequate to meet the ends of justice. The commitment made on the sole ground that the accused has been committed in another case is bad in law. I accordingly quash the commitment of the accused in this case and direct that the First Class Magistrate, Bilaspur, do proceed with the trial of the accused and complete it according to law.

Commitment quashed.

(4) 4 Bom. L. R. 85.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION NO. 38 OF 1918.

May 9, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Kemp,
A. J. C.

Musammam JANKIBAI—APPLICANT

versus

SHIVRAM BABAJI—OPPONENT.

*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1895), s. 438—
Hindu wife leaving husband's house without cause—
Maintenance, right to, on return to husband's house.*

The duty of a husband to maintain his wife under the Hindu Law is absolute and under the Criminal Procedure Code it is subject only to the wife's chastity. When a Hindu wife, therefore, leaves her husband's house without good cause, her right of maintenance is only suspended and she has the right to return to her husband's house at any time and claim to be maintained by him. [p. 978, col. 2; p. 979, col. 1.]

Application for revision of an order of the Additional City Magistrate, Karachi.

Mr. U. B. Chandiramani, for the Applicant.

Mr. Parsram Tolaram, for the Opponent.

Mr. T. G. Elphinstone, Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order made by the Additional City Magistrate, Karachi, under section 488, Criminal Procedure Code, refusing the applicant's petition to order her husband, opponent, to pay her maintenance.

The applicant left her husband on the 4th June 1916, alleging that her husband ill-treated her. On 8th June 1916 the husband gave notice accusing her of theft and forbidding her to enter his house. Next month the applicant filed a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, but it was dismissed for want of prosecution in December 1916. She then filed this application for maintenance on the 18th January 1918 and on this application the Magistrate, holding that cruelty was not proved and that she left her husband of her own accord, concluded there was no justification for the application. But the allegation of cruelty is only relevant to the claim for separate maintenance under the proviso to sub-section (3) and sub-section (5).

Under Hindu Law the duty of the husband to maintain his wife is absolute: Parami Ramayya v. Mahadevi (1), and under the Criminal Procedure Code it is subject only to the wife's chastity, section 488 (4).

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 960; 34 B. 278; 12 Bom. L. R. 196.

EMPEROR v. NURKHAN.

Further even if she left her husband's house without good cause, her right of maintenance is only suspended. See Surampalli Bangaramma v. Surampalli Brambaze (2). She has the right to return to her husband's house at any time and claim to be maintained by him.

The husband's refusal to maintain her is avowed in his notice of the 8th June 1916, but Mr. Parsram relies on the dictum in Gavarishanker v. Bai Reva (3) that if the wife voluntarily leaves the husband without being justified in doing so, she is not entitled to claim maintenance. That passage only refers to the wife's claiming separate maintenance. This is evident from the context, which implies that cruelty or ill treatment is evidence of refusal to maintain, as was subsequently held in Bhikaini v. Maneckji (4).

The applicant is clearly entitled either to maintenance by her husband in his house or to receive a separate maintenance allowance.

We accordingly reverse the order of the Additional City Magistrate and remand the application for disposal on the merits.

Application remanded.

(2) 31 M. 333; 3 M. L. T. 266; 18 M. L. J. 254.

(3) 5 Bom. L. R. 614.

(4) 9 Bom. L. R. 359; 5 Cr. L. J. 334.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 212 OF 1918.

November 1, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Findlay, Offg. A. J. C.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

NURKHAN—ACCUSED

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 435, 439, 562—Accused released under s. 562—Revision—Sentence of imprisonment, whether can be passed.

Section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code presupposes that a sentence has been imposed. Therefore where an accused is released on good probation under section 562 of the Code, the High Court cannot substitute a sentence of imprisonment or of whipping in revision. [p. 980, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Ghasite, 26 Ind. Cas. 635; 37 A. 31; 12 A. L. J. 1244; 16 Cr. L. J. 43, followed.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Wardha, under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code.

Revision of the order of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Wardha, dated the 13th August 1918.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. P. Dick, for the Crown.

Mr. M. Y. Sharif, for the Accused.

ORDER.—This case has been reported under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, by the District and Sessions Judge, Wardha. The accused Nurkhan was convicted by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Wardha, of an offence under section 380, Indian Penal Code, viz., the theft of a silver necklace from the person of a child. He was released under section 562, Criminal Procedure Code, no substantive sentence being imposed. The District and Sessions Judge represents that the case was one in which a sentence of whipping or imprisonment should have been imposed. Notice was issued to the accused to show cause why such an order should not be passed. He has been represented by Counsel who has shown such cause and the Standing Counsel has appeared in support of the reference.

The case is a very clear one. The accused entered the house where the child was asleep at noon and removed the necklace from her person; there were, it may be mentioned, no adults in the house at the time. I see no reason to doubt the soundness of the conclusions arrived at by the trying Magistrate and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on the questions of fact involved in the case, nor would it be the custom of the Court to do so in such a reference as the present.

Counsel for accused, however, relies on Emperor v. Ghasite (1), in support of his position that a sentence of imprisonment or whipping cannot be imposed in the present case. That decision, if accepted, no doubt concludes the present case, but the learned Government Advocate has argued that the learned Judge who was responsible for the above decision has overlooked the provisions of section 435 of the Criminal Procedure (1) 26 Ind. Cas. 635; 37 A. 31; 12 A. L. J. 1244; 16 Cr. L. J. 43.

EMPEROR v. SUMAR.

Code. On the whole, however, I am of opinion that section 439 pre-supposes that a sentence has been imposed: it is no doubt an unintentional omission of the Legislature that no specific provision has been made in that section by a use like the present but until this omission has been supplied, I think this Court is debarred from interfering. That the accused should escape on what is after all a technicality is perhaps regrettable, for an offence of this nature committed on a defenceless child doubtless merited a substantive sentence.

The learned Standing Counsel also urged that the offence amounted to robbery and that, therefore, the order under section 562, Code of Criminal Procedure, was in any case wrong. I am unable, however, on the evidence to hold that the necessary constituents of the offence of robbery are present: no hurt or wrongful restraint was caused or threatened to be caused to the child.

In the circumstances, therefore, I decline to interfere. Let the proceedings be returned accordingly.

Proceedings returned.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REPORT No. 10 OF 1918.

February 28, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and

Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—APPLICANT

versus

SUMAR AND OTHERS—OPPONENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250—Compensation, order to pay, against person instigating the giving of false information, validity of.

Section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not warrant an order to pay compensation against a person who only instigates the giving of false information but who does not himself make the complaint or give the information to the Police. [p. 981, col. 1; p. 980, col. 2.]

Report made by the 2nd Additional Sessions Judge, Hyderabad, against the order of the City Magistrate, Hyderabad.

Mr. T. G. Elphinstone, 1st Assistant Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is a report by the Additional Sessions Judge, Hyderabad, under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of an order passed by the City Magistrate, Hyderabad.

The case before the City Magistrate was one in which 2 accused were prosecuted for the offence of theft on an information to the Police by Din Mahomed, who had been instructed to do so by Haji Ahmed, the owner of the stolen cattle. The City Magistrate discharged the accused and finding that the prosecution was frivolous or vexatious, made an order, under section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, requiring Haji Ali Ahmed, whom he describes as the complainant, to pay to the accused Rs. 100 as compensation.

The Additional Sessions Judge refers the case to us on the ground that it was not competent for the City Magistrate to make that order.

The Magistrate was clearly wrong in describing Haji Ahmed as the complainant, for no complaint had been filed in the case. The case was instituted not upon complaint, but upon information to the Police which was lodged by Din Mahomed. If the Magistrate considered that Din Mahomed was responsible for the false accusation, it was open to him to require Din Mahomed to pay compensation. But if the Magistrate found that Din Mahomed was not responsible for the false accusation, he could not make an order against Din Mahomed for the reasons given by this Court in the case of Emperor v. Kouro (1), viz., that the object of the section is that compensation should be recoverable from the person responsible for the false accusation. But as pointed out by the Additional Sessions Judge, the effect of that ruling is that when the person who actually gives the information does not know his complaint to be false, he cannot be made to pay compensation, and it does not imply the converse proposition that the person responsible for the false accusation can be made to pay the compensation, even if he does not himself make the complaint or give information to the Police.

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 738; 11 S. L. R. 55; 18 Cr. L. J. 1005.

MELLOR v. MUTHIAH CHETTY.

Section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, does not warrant an order to pay compensation against a person who only instigates the giving of false information.

We, therefore, reverse the order of the lower Court and direct that the compensation, if paid, be refunded to Haji Ahmed.

Order reversed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT,
CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 675 OF 1917.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 534 OF 1917).

June 6, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri.
P. J. MELLOR, CUSTODIAN OF ENEMY PROPERTY AND LIQUIDATOR OF HOSTILE FIRMS, BOMBAY, BROUGHT ON RECORD IN THE PLACE OF MENASCHI—COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER

versus

A. M. MUTHIAH CHETTY—ACCUSED—
RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 253, 435, 439—Revision against order of discharge—High Court, jurisdiction of—Interference, limits of—Alien enemy trading under license, whether competent to file complaint or move High Court in revision—Internment after filing of revision petition under Enemy Ordinance, effect of—Confession, extra-judicial, value of.

In dealing with revision petitions against orders of discharge of accused persons by Magistrates, the High Court will apply the same principles as are applicable to cases of petitions to revise orders of acquittal. In either case the High Court will not interfere where there is no clear error or defect in the proceedings of the lower Courts which has resulted in grave injustice but the question is merely one as to the appreciation of doubtful evidence. [p. 984, col. 1.]

It is competent to an alien enemy residing in British India by license of the King to complain against crimes directed against his person or property and to apply in revision to the High Court against any order of a Magistrate discharging the accused on the materials placed before him. [p. 982, col. 2; p. 983, col. 1.]

The internment of an alien subject, after he has filed a revision petition, does not necessarily stay the hands of the High Court. [p. 983, col. 1.]
Porter v. Freudenberg, (1915) 1 K. B. 857; 84 L. J. K. B. 1001, explained.

Evidence as to extra-judicial confessions of his guilt by an accused person is by itself of very little importance, as such evidence is easy to adduce and difficult to rebut. [p. 984, col. 2.]

Petition under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise the order, dated the 8th October 1917, of the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Egmore, in Calendar Case No. 9220 of 1917.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

The Crown Prosecutor, on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. Nugent Grant (with him Messrs. S. Guruswami Chetti and K. G. Babu Row), on behalf of the Accused, took the preliminary objection that the petitioner, being an enemy subject, who was under internment, was not entitled to invoke the aid of the Criminal Court and to continue the proceedings in revision filed by him in the High Court.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Richmond, for the Petitioner.—The petitioner was trading in British India under a license both when he filed the complaint and when he filed the revision petition in the High Court. He is thus placed on a footing of equality with other subjects of His Majesty the King. Besides, the disability to institute civil proceedings does not extend to criminal proceedings. It will lead to disastrous results if persons could be allowed to commit offences against the person or property of alien enemy subjects with impunity. In all criminal cases the prosecution is in the name of the King-Emperor on the information of a private party, and there is nothing to prevent an alien enemy from moving the machinery of the Criminal Court. In revision the High Court is empowered to act suo motu and any statutory disability of the complainant arising after the filing of the revision petition in the High Court will not stop proceedings or prevent justice taking its course. The internment of the original complainant is no impediment to the revision proceedings being conducted to the end.

On the merits, the lower Court has not correctly appreciated the evidence, or considered the effect of the accused's confessions as to the pledge of diamonds. The High Court can interfere, in revision against orders of discharge, on questions of fact though in cases of acquittals, its interference is generally more limited.

Mr. Nugent Grant for the Respondent.—The complainant's license had already been cancelled when the revision petition filed by him was ripe for hearing, and he has no locus standi to continue the proceedings.

MELLOR v. MUTSIAH CHETTY.

The Magistrate has considered all the prosecution evidence and arrived at the conclusion that there was no case for the accused to meet. His finding should not be interfered with by the High Court unless it is opposed to the evidence or is manifestly unjust. The principles governing revisions against acquittals are equally applicable to petitions filed to revise orders of discharge. The lower Court had the witnesses before it when giving evidence and was competent to judge of their demeanour and its conclusion should not be lightly disturbed.

ORDER.—This is an application to revise the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate discharging the accused under section 252 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Both the complainant and the accused were diamond merchants, the former carrying on business in Bombay and the latter in Madras. The case for the prosecution is that complainant used to send on approval diamonds to the accused in parcels bearing prices, weights in carats, and numbers, that accused used to communicate his acceptance of the price or make counter-offers, that in the event of the parties agreeing as to the price the same was paid by the accused either in cash or by means of Hundis according to the terms under which they carried on business, and that the accused got from the complainant four packets of diamonds marked 4695, 4696, 4665 and 4666 which were sent to him at his request, which packets he pledged before any property in them passed to him without the knowledge or consent of the complainant. It is also alleged that the accused was in a hopelessly insolvent condition when he asked for the diamonds and that he asked the complainant to send them to him, not for any bona fide purpose of his trade, but to raise money thereon for his own benefit and that he was guilty both of criminal breach of trust and of cheating.

The Chief Presidency Magistrate was of opinion that no case had been made out which would justify his calling upon the accused to enter upon his defence and discharged him under section 253, Criminal Procedure Code. He held that it had not been shown that the accused was in insolvent circumstances when he asked the complainant to send him the diamonds and that it had not been proved that the diamonds sent by the complainant had been pledged by the accused. The learned Magistrate also was of opinion that the complainant knew that the accused was dealing with the diamonds sent before prices had been settled and that the complainant, with a view to pushing on his trade, threw all caution to the winds.

A preliminary objection has been taken that the complainant, who is an alien enemy now interned, has no right to invoke the aid of the Court and that the criminal revision petition filed by him ought to be dismissed. No objection was taken in the lower Court as to his competence to file the complaint, the objection being raised for the first time when the criminal revision petition was taken up by me for disposal. There is no dispute as to the facts. The complainant who is an enemy subject was carrying on business in Bombay under license both when he filed the complaint in the Presidency Magistrate's Court and the revision petition in the High Court. His license was cancelled by an order of Government dated 8th December 1917, and the business carried on by him was directed to be wound up. On the 5th February 1918 Mr. Mellor as custodian of enemy property applied to the High Court for permission to be brought on record and to continue proceedings in the High Court, and permission was granted by Mr. Justice Bakewell on the 8th February 1918.

There is, so far as I can see, nothing to warrant the view that an alien enemy has no right to complain against crimes directed against his person or property or that a subject of His Majesty the King-Emperor can with impunity violate the provisions of the Indian Penal Code simply because the offence is committed in respect of an alien enemy. In criminal cases it is the King Emperor who prosecutes in vindication of his peace and though the complainant brings the facts to the cognizance of those charged by the Crown to administer justice, it is the Crown that prosecutes. I do not think that Courts exercising criminal jurisdiction, whether original or appellate, can decline to exercise it simply because the offence is committed against the person or property of an alien enemy.

NELLORE V. MUTHIAH CRETTY.

So far as criminal revision petitions to the High Court are concerned, sections 437 and 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code empower the High Court to proceed either suo motu or on the facts being brought to its notice by any persons, not necessarily the complainant. There is, therefore, nothing to prevent the High Court from revising the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate discharging the accused on the application of the custodian of enemy properties, where the offence is committed in respect of property which would in law vest in him.

It is also clear that the complainant was living and carrying on business in India under a trading license both when he filed the complaint and the criminal revision petition. When an alien enemy resides in the country by license of the King and under his protection, he stands on the same footing as an alien friend or an ordinary subject so far as the right of maintaining actions is concerned, the right of suit being incidental to the right of protection. Porter v. Freudenberg (1), Volkl v. Rotunda Hospital (2), Princess of Thurn and Taxis v. Moffitt (3) and Rex v. Vine Street Police Superintendent (4) are authorities clearly in point. The complaint and revision petition were, therefore, instituted by a person legally competent to do so.

As a criminal revision petition is not in the nature of an appeal, which under the Code of Criminal Procedure must necessarily be filed by the accused in the case of a conviction or by the Government in the case of an acquittal, and as under sections 437 and 439 of the Code the High Court can act in revision where facts are brought to its notice by any person and not necessarily by a party to the original proceeding, the internment of the complainant after the filing of the criminal revision petitions does not necessarily stay the hands of the High Court. All that was decided in Porter v. Freudenberg (1) was that the appeal filed by an alien enemy plaintiff before the war should be suspended till the restoration of peace. The position of a person who was residing and carrying on business in the country under a license from the Crown and so entitled to file a criminal appeal or revision but whose license has been revoked before the appeal or revision petition comes on for trial, could not be worse. In any view the revision petition cannot be dismissed as contended for by the Crown Prosecutor and Counsel for the accused. It can at the most only be ordered to lie over till the end of the war. For the reasons already given, I am of opinion that it is open to the High Court to dispose of the criminal revision petition against the order of discharge on the application of the custodian of enemy property. I overrule the preliminary objection and shall proceed to deal with the case on the merits.

As the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate heard all the evidence adduced by the prosecution and has written an order giving his reasons for not acting on the prosecution evidence, oral and documentary, the order, though not technically an order of acquittal, should, in my opinion, be dealt with on the same principles as would be applied to a case of acquittal. There is, in my opinion, very little difference in substance between the case of a person who has been discharged after all the prosecution evidence has been taken and weighed by the Magistrate and that of a person who is acquitted after a charge has been framed. In the former case the Magistrate considers that the prosecution evidence is so weak that there is nothing for the accused to meet and in the latter case the evidence, though sufficiently strong to call upon the accused to meet it, has, in the opinion of the Magistrate, been met by the defence. There is no reason why different tests should be applied in revision or why an accused against whom the prosecution evidence is weak should be in a worse position than one against whom it is strong enough to warrant a charge being framed. The observations in Emperor v. Kiru (5) are in point.

In the case of revision petitions against orders of acquittal Courts have been either

(1) (1915) 1 K. B. 857; 84 L. J. K. B. 1001.

(2) (1914) 2 K. B. Ir. 543.

(3) (1915) 1 Ch. D. 53; 84 L. J. Ch. 220.

(4) (1916) 1 K. B. 233; 85 L. J. K. B. 210.

(5) 11 Ind. Cas. 132; 12 Cr. L. J. 364 at p. 369; 10 P. R. 1911 Cr.; 24 P. W. R. 1911 Cr.; 205 P. L. R. 1911 (F. B.).

MELLOR v. MUTHIAH CHETTY.

unwilling or very reluctant to interfere in revision at the instance of private parties. Thandavan v. Periana (6), Heera Bai v. Framji Bhikaji (7), Sheikh Amin-ud-din, In the matter of (8), Emperor v. Madar Bakhsh (9) and Faujdar Thakur v. Kasi Choudhuri (10). It is well settled that Courts will not interfere, when there is no clear error or defect in the proceedings of the lower Courts which has resulted in grave injustice but the question is merely one as to appreciation of doubtful evidence. I need only refer to Sinnu Gounden, In re (11), Emperor v. Madar Bakhsh (9), Faujdar Thakur v. Kasi Choudhuri (10), Natesa Padayachi, In re (12), Emperor v. Lakshminarayana Aiyar (13), Ahmedabad Municipality v. Maganlal Kushaldas (14) and Vellayanambalam v. Solai Servai (15). I am of opinion that a rule equally strict should be applied to cases of revision against orders of discharge based on a consideration of all the prosecution evidence, when no evidence has been shut out and there is no illegality or irregularity in the procedure adopted by the Court.

Applying these considerations to the facts of the present case, I do not think I ought to interfere with the order of discharge. So far as the charge of cheating is concerned, I do not think it has been satisfactorily established before the Magistrate that the accused, when he asked the complainant to send the diamonds, was unable to pay for them. The arrangement between the parties was that he was to have credit for £7,000 and that he was to pay Rs. 6,000 a week. The complainant admits that till February 1917 the accused was making payments regularly and that in February complainant raised accused's credit to £7,000 and gave him additional facilities for payment. It is not alleged that, when the accused asked the complainant to send him the parcels which formed the subject-matter of the complaint, he had dishonoured any of the Hundis drawn on him by the complainant. The fact that he was in financial difficulties in July would not necessarily show any dishonest intention in April, especially as the accused to the knowledge of the complainant used to sell diamonds to other parties and remit moneys out of the sale-proceeds when the Hundis fell due.

As regards the charge of criminal misappropriation in respect of parcels 4695 and 4696, these diamonds are melee or small diamonds. There is nothing particular by which they can be identified. It is difficult from the complainant's evidence or the documents filed by him to arrive at any date from which it can be reasonably certain that the diamonds pledged by the accused are the diamonds which were sent by the complainant in packets numbered 4695 and 4696. I attach very little importance to the evidence adduced by the complainant as to the accused having orally admitted his having pledged the diamonds. Such evidence is easy to adduce and difficult to rebut. I agree with the Chief Presidency Magistrate that no prima facie case has been made out as regards parcels 4695 and 4696.

Turning to parcels 4665 and 4666 the learned Magistrate, though admitting that the case was somewhat stronger, was not prepared to accept the evidence of the complainant that the parcels pledged with P. W. No. 1 were the diamonds sent by him. He observes: "In Court P. W. No. 2 (the complainant) has been put to several tests to see if he can identify the stones now before the Court as those described in his mixture book, but I am bound to say that though he has made a good bid for it, he has failed to satisfy me that he can with absolute certainty describe his own diamonds, and even the prosecution does not press this point in the identification of stones." The Magistrate also believed that the letters of hypothecation were genuine and was of opinion that there was a difference between the number and weight of the stones sent by the complainant and those

- (6) 14 M. 363; 2 Weir 571; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 253.
- (7) 15 B. 349; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 238.
- (8) 24 A. 346; A. W. N. (1902) 89.
- (9) 25 A. 128; A. W. N. (1902) 200.
- (10) 27 Ind. Cas. 186; 19 C. W. N. 184; 42 C. 612; 21 C. L. J. 53; 16 Cr. L. J. 122.
- (11) 23 Ind. Cas. 188; 26 M. L. J. 160; (1914) M. W. N. 273; 15 Cr. L. J. 236; 38 M. 1028.
- (12) 29 Ind. Cas. 830; 28 M. L. J. 690; 17 M. L. T. 457; (1915) M. W. N. 411; 16 Cr. L. J. 658.
- (13) 5 Criml. Law Review 78.
- (14) 9 Bom. L. R. 156; 5 Cr. L. J. 171.
- (15) 30 Ind. Cas. 152; 28 M. L. J. 692; (1915) M. W. N. 540; 16 Cr. L. J. 600; 39 M. 505.

EMPEROR v. RAI SINGH.

pledged by the accused. The case as regards those stones was fully argued by both sides, and giving it my best consideration I cannot say that there is any such error or defect in this judgment of the Magistrate as would justify me in setting aside the discharge and sending the case back for enquiry. If I had to try the case as an Original Court, I would probably have on the materials placed before me framed a charge and put the accused on his defence; but the question is whether, sitting in revision, I would be justified in setting aside the order of the trial Judge who had the advantage of seeing the demeanour of the witnesses and who was not favourably impressed with the complainant's evidence. As a civil suit will probably be filed, I do not think it expedient to go into the facts in detail or give my opinion as to the various points that have been urged. It is sufficient for me to say that the present case has not satisfied the requisites laid down by the cases above referred to and I do not think it proper to re-open the enquiry.

I, therefore, dismiss the petition. The diamonds which are with the pledgees will be kept by them on the same terms as at present till 15th July.

M. G. P.

Petition dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 100-B OF 1916.

November 1, 1916.

Present:—Sir Henry Stanyon, Kt., J. C.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

RAI SINGH AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 107, 112, 537—Security for breach of peace—Accused agreeing to give security—Breach of peace, proof of, absence of—Order, legality of—Disregard of express law, whether irregularity or illegality.

A Magistrate called upon the accused under section 112 of the Criminal Procedure Code to show cause why they should not furnish security to keep the peace under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, on the ground that they were members of an unlawful assembly which passed a mosque with loud music and which intended to cause a breach of the peace by repeating this procedure. The accused denied these allegations but expressed their willingness to execute bonds to keep the peace. Thereupon the Magistrate directed them to execute bonds for Rs. 100 to keep the peace for one year.

Held, that the order was illegal, inasmuch as the accused denied every allegation on the basis of which they were considered liable to furnish security and no evidence was taken to prove those allegations. [p. 986, col. 2.]

Ram Chandra Halder v. Emperor, 35 O. 674; 8 C. L. J. 68; 8 Cr. L. J. 128, Palaniappa Asary, In re, 6 Ind. Cas. 682; 34 M. 139; 7 M. L. T. 304; (1910) M. W. N. 228; 11 Cr. L. J. 393, Prathipati Venkatasami v. Emperor, 30 M. 330; 17 M. L. J. 407; 2 M. L. T. 329; 6 Cr. L. J. 278, Mul Chand v. Emperor, 26 Ind. Cas. 653; 37 A. 30; 12 A. L. J. 1262; 16 Cr. L. J. 61, followed.

A disregard of the express provisions of the law is not a mere irregularity which can be condoned or remedied but an illegality and the Court cannot maintain or overlook an illegal order upon any ground of administrative convenience. [p. 986, col. 1.]

Subrahmania Ayyar v. King-Emperor, 25 M. 61; 11 M. L. J. 283; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 28 I. A. 267; 5 O. W. N. 866; 2 Weir 271; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 160 (P. C.), followed.

Report made by the Sessions Judge, West Berar, under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, against the order of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Akola, in Criminal Case No. 3 of 1916, on 25th August 1916, under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, ordering each of the accused to execute a bond of Rs. 100 with one surety for Rs. 100 to keep the peace for one year.

Messrs. P. S. Kotwal and Ghate, for the Non-Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—This case has been reported under section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, as applied to Berar, by the Sessions Judge of West Berar. The facts are these. A Magistrate of the 1st Class at Akola made an order under section 112 of the said Code declaring that two Hindus, namely, Rai Singh and Daolat, had allegedly been members of a procession which, contrary to established usage, had passed by a Musalman mosque on the 31st July 1916 accompanied by loud music and that they apparently intended to cause a breach of the peace by repeating this procedure at the coming Pola festival. The same order called upon Rai Singh and Daolat to show cause why they should not furnish security under section 107 of the same Code. In answer to this Rule the said persons appeared before the Magistrate, who asked them to show cause. Rai Singh and Daolat denied having been members of the procession of the 31st July 1916, expressed their readiness to observe the custom of stopping clamorous music while passing the mosque, denied that they had any intention of disturbing the peace on the Pola day, added that they are willing to execute a bond to convince the Magistrate of their peaceful intentions. Thereupon the Magistrate directed Rai Singh and Daolat each to execute a bond in Rs. 100 to keep the peace for a year. The learned Sessions Judge reports this order as illegal. A Rule issued to the District Magistrate, in response to which he candidly admits the irregularity of the order but asks that it may be maintained as expedient.

EMPEROR V. NADAR.

I have every sympathy for the view put forward by the learned District Magistrate, and I fully appreciate the difficulties which sometimes arise from Hindu musical processions going past Musalman mosques and the advisability of doing nothing to weaken the hands of the executive by undue interference with preventive action upon technical grounds. But as pointed out by the Supreme Tribunal in Subrahmanya Ayyar v. King-Emperor (1), the disregard of express provisions of law is not a mere irregularity which can be condoned or remedied, but an illegality and this Court cannot maintain or overlook an illegal order upon any ground of administrative convenience.

The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code are clear enough as to the procedure which must be followed where an accused person disputes the truth of the information laid against him, but if it is necessary to supplement the eventually published judicial interpretation of it, that requirement can be satisfied by referring to Ram Ohandra Haldar v. Emperor (2), Palaniappa Asary, In re (3), Prathipati Venkatasami v. Emperor (4) and Mul Ohand v. Emperor (5).

(1) 25 M. 61; 11 M. L. J. 232; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 28 I. A. 257; 5 C. W. N. 866; 2 Weir 271; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 160 P. C.).

(2) 35 C. 674; 8 C. L. J. 68; 8 Cr. L. J. 128.

(3) 6 Ind. Cas. 682; 84 M. 139; 7 M. L. T. 304; (1910) M. W. N. 223; 11 Cr. L. J. 393.

(4) 30 M. 330; 17 M. L. J. 407; 2 M. L. T. 329; 6 Cr. L. J. 278.

(5) 26 Ind. Cas. 653; 37 A. 30; 12 A. L. J. 1262; 16 Cr. L. J. 61.

The accused denied every allegation upon the basis of which they were considered liable to furnish security and not a shred of evidence was taken to prove them. A Magistrate cannot enter into a compromise with an accused person for the purpose of disposing of a criminal case. Criminal liability arises out of acts and intentions which, if not admitted, must be legally proved. That is not an abstruse proposition of law, it is an obvious rule of common sense. Suppose these two persons having been brought before the Magistrate accused of assault or theft had denied the offence but added that they were willing to undergo conviction in token of their innocence, would the Magistrate have been justified in convicting them, even for the purpose of dealing with them as first offenders and releasing them on probation of good conduct? Obviously not. Yet that is very like what he has done in this case. He has convicted them without evidence of acts and intentions which they denied. The order was absolutely illegal and cannot be sustained.

For the above reasons the order directing Rai Singh and Daolat to execute security bonds is set aside and the bond or bonds executed by them are discharged.

Order set aside.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REPORT No. 16 of 1918.

March 14, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and

Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—APPLICANT

versus

NADAR—OPPONENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250—Compensation, order to pay, where complaint vexatious in one particular, validity of.

An order for compensation under section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, cannot be justified merely because the complaint filed was vexatious in one particular. An award of compensation can only be made where there has been a complete discharge or acquittal of the accused on all the heads of the charges against him. [p. 987, cols. 1 & 2.]

Report made by the Additional Sessions Judge, Sukkur, against the order of the First Class Magistrate, Tando Adam, JAIWANTI V. EMPEROR.

Mr. T. G. Elphinstone (Acting Public Prosecutor for Sind), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is a report by the Additional Sessions Judge, Sukkur, inviting our revision of an order made by the First Class Magistrate, Tando Adam, under section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, directing the complainant to pay the accused a sum of Rs. 50 as compensation for bringing a false or vexatious complaint.

The complainant, a Bania and a petty land-owner, refused to grant the accused a further lease of his land; and this refusal led to a quarrel in the course of which the complainant sustained injuries which necessitated his going to hospital. The complainant then filed a complaint against the accused for hurt under section 323, Indian Penal Code, and criminal intimidation under section 506, Indian Penal Code, and theft under section 379, Indian Penal Code. The charge of theft referred to the loss of complainant's ear-ring. The complainant said that the ear-ring was dropped on the ground in the course of a quarrel and the accused picked it up and refused to return it.

The Magistrate discharged the accused on each of these offences, but it cannot be said that the charges under section 323 or 506 were frivolous or vexatious. A threat was uttered and the Bania did receive injuries in the quarrel and his witnesses depose that those injuries were inflicted by the accused. But the Magistrate has discharged the accused only because he thinks the witnesses are unreliable and their evidence perhaps exaggerated. There is, however, reason for thinking that the charge under section 379 was vexatious. The Magistrate disbelieves the evidence that the accused took the ear-ring and accusations of theft are very often introduced into complaints of petty assaults in the hope of the complainant receiving immediate attention either from the Magistrate or from the Police.

But we do not think the order for compensation can be justified merely because the complaint filed was vexatious in one particular. No doubt the words used in section 250 are that the accusation is frivolous or vexatious, and this wording might be construed as referring to the accusation in respect of each individual charge.

But if this be the correct construction of the section, it would lead to the result that the accused might under the same complaint be convicted and sentenced on one head of charge and yet awarded compensation on another head. It was held in the case of Mukti Beva v. Jhotu Santra (1) that this was not the correct construction of the section and the award of compensation could only be made when there has been a complete discharge or acquittal. We think the intention of the section is that an accused person who has been unnecessarily brought to Court should receive compensation from the person making the false accusation. That is not the case here, for whether the accused did or did not steal the ear-ring there were good grounds for the complainant obtaining process to enforce his attendance in Court to answer other charges of hurt and criminal intimidation.

We accordingly reverse the order made by the Magistrate under section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, and direct the compensation, if paid, to be refunded.

Order reversed.

(1) 24 C. 33; 1 C. W. N. 17; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 700.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 42-B OF 1916.

June 17, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Pridéaux, A. J. C.

Musammat JAIWANTI—APPLICANT

versus

RAMRAO—NON-APPLICANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145 (4), 148, 435, 439—Proceedings under Chapter XII—Local enquiry—Procedure—Order passed without taking evidence—Jurisdiction—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

A High Court cannot ordinarily interfere in revision under sections 435 and 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code with proceedings under Chapter XII of the Code, but it has power to interfere where the subordinate Court has passed an order without giving the parties an opportunity of calling evidence, and has thus acted without jurisdiction. [p. 988, col. 2.]

GURUMURTHI CHETTI, In re.

Kolha Koer v. Muneswar Tewari, 34 C. 840; 6 Cr. L. J. 452, followed.

Where in a proceeding under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a local inquiry is directed to be made, the result of the local enquiry becomes a part of the proceeding and the party affected by it is entitled to be made acquainted with the result thereof and should be given an opportunity of rebutting the report.

A Magistrate deputed to hold a local enquiry under the provisions of section 148 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, should hold the enquiry himself and should not delegate it to somebody else.

Revision of the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Amraoti, in Miscellaneous Case No. 150 of 1915, decided on the 9th December 1915.

Mr. K. K. Gandhi, for the Applicant.

Mr. S. K. Barlingay, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—The procedure adopted by the Magistrate who had tried this case is contrary to the provisions of section 145 (4) of the Criminal Procedure Code. The local enquiry directed was made by the Naib-Tahsildar, a Third Class Magistrate, and not by the Tahsildar, the First Class Magistrate, but on this ground alone I would not interfere. The order-sheet shows, the parties put in their written statements on the 30th August 1915, on which date the case was adjourned to the 16th September 1915 for the Tahsildar's report. This was not returned by that date and the order passed then ran.

"No local enquiry papers have been received from the Tahsildar, Amraoti. Parties told not to attend this Court as the result of this case will be made known to them through the Tahsildar. Put up on the 30th September 1915."

This order is written by some clerk and initialled by the Magistrate. There are three similar adjournment orders written by a clerk, the last being of the 15th November 1915. It is: "put up on the 30th November 1915."

The next order, apparently passed without notice to the parties, is the final order of the 9th December 1915, directing that Ramrao was entitled to possession of the field No. 16 of suit.

When the local enquiry had been made and the result reported, it became part of the proceedings, and the party affected by it was entitled to be acquainted with the result thereof and should have been given an opportunity of rebutting the report. In the present case it is clear that applicant has had no opportunity of calling the evidence contemplated by section 145 (4) of the Criminal Procedure Code.

I know of the ruling laying down that a High Court cannot interfere in revision under sections 435 and 439 with proceedings under Chapter XII of the Criminal Procedure Code, but it is settled law that this Court can interfere where the subordinate Court has acted without jurisdiction, and it seems to me that in the present case I must hold following Kolha Koer v. Muneswar Tewari (1), that the order passed without giving a party an opportunity of calling evidence is without jurisdiction, and as such I have power to set it aside. I do so and direct that the Magistrate will come to a fresh decision after giving the parties an opportunity of adducing evidence. I may add that in these cases a Tahsildar, deputed to hold a local enquiry under the provisions of section 148 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code, should not pass on the enquiry to his Naib. He has not legally the power to do so. Many Naib-Tahsildars are now Third Class Magistrates, and they can be employed for this purpose by the Magistrate trying the case direct. A local enquiry should not, as a rule, be directed on matters, which may be proved by evidence, such as actual possession. It is the business of the Magistrate to record this himself.

Order accordingly.

(1) 34 C. 840; 6 Cr. L. J. 452.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 270 OF 1918.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 213 OF 1918).

September 27, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kumaraswamy Sastri.
In re GURUMURTHI CHETTI—ACCUSED—PETITIONER.

Explosives Act (IV of 1884), s. 4 (1), (2)—China crackers, whether explosives—Rules framed under the Act, rr. 3, 71—Toy fireworks—Presumption—Possession of explosives—License to possess certain quantity for specified period—Contravention of conditions of license—Offence.

GURUMURTHI CHETTI, In re.

China crackers are explosives within the meaning of clauses (1) and (2) of section 4 of the Explosives Act. [p. 939, col. 2.]

The onus is on the person in possession of explosives to show that they are toy fireworks under rule 3 of the rules framed under the Act. [p. 990, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Rachapa Gurappa Hattarvat, 37 Ind. Cas. 491; 18 Bom. L. R. 556; 18 Cr. L. J. 139 and Emperor v. Bansidhar, 5 Ind. Cas. 911; 5 P. R. 1910 Cr.; 9 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.; 11 Cr. L. J. 287, distinguished.

The whole scheme of the rules framed under the Explosives Act is to require a separate license for possession, at any one time and place, of explosives in addition to a license to import, during a particular period. Where a permit for possession is granted limiting the quantity to be possessed at any specified period or at any particular place, the permission to import a larger quantity during the longer period must be read subject to the quantity in possession being exhausted or reduced below the maximum for which possession is permitted. [p. 990, col. 1.]

Petition under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Cuddalore, in Criminal Appeal No. 3 of 1918, preferred against the judgment of the Court of the Stationary 2nd Class Magistrate, Chidambaram, in Civil Case No. 19 of 1917.

Mr. T. V. Gopalaswamy Mudaliar, for the Petitioner.—The accused was in possession only of China crackers which are not explosives. Under rule 3 of the rules framed under the Act toy fireworks are not within the meaning of section 4, Emperor v. Rachapa Gurappa Hattarvat (1) and Emperor v. Bansidhar (2). Crackers are toy fireworks only. The fact that petitioner, obtained license for possession of crackers will not place them in the category of explosives.

Then again, under the terms of the last license Exhibit A, the petitioner was at liberty to import 10,000 lbs. of fireworks till 31st December 1917. This virtually superseded the earlier permits, which restricted the quantity to be possessed still further. The petitioner could not be charged for possessing any quantity under 10,000 lbs. The permission is available to him till 31st December.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.—Crackers are explosives which fall under the mischief of section 4 of the Explosives Act. The section is wide enough to include crackers. Petitioner has not shown, by evidence, that they are toy fireworks which are excepted under rule 3. The cases relied on by petitioner's Vakil bear on their facts and do not lay down any rule of general or universal application.

The petitioner could not possess more than 1,000 lbs. at a time. He cannot take shelter under the terms of the last license, which prescribes the maximum quantity that may be stocked by him during the year. All the 3 licenses should be read together. The earlier licenses define the quantity which the licensee may be in possession of for a given period, and it is only when that quantity is diminished or exhausted that he could import more. The fixing of the maximum was made on grounds of convenience and so as to obviate the necessity for applying for licenses at each reduction of the stock below 1,000 lbs.

ORDER.—The petitioner obtained in April 1917 a license Exhibit C, which licensed him to possess and sell fireworks. It limited the maximum quantity possessed at any time to (fifty) 50 lbs. In August 1917 he obtained the permit Exhibit B to possess fireworks not exceeding 1,000 lbs. for a period of seven days from 7th November 1917 to 13th November 1917. In October 1917 he got a license Exhibit A to import 10,000 lbs. of fireworks, the license being valid till 31st December 1917. He was charged and convicted for possessing 2,325 lbs. of China crackers on 7th November 1917 and thus contravening the terms of the license Exhibit B. His plea before the Magistrate was as follows: 'I admit what I did is wrong I did so misunderstanding the rules. I am guilty.' He was sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 100 which, on appeal, was reduced to Rs. 50.

Two points are urged in revision. It is argued (1) that China crackers are not explosives, and (2) that the license to import being for 10,000 lbs., he is not guilty of any offence.

As regards the first point, section 4, clauses 1 and 2 of the Indian Explosives Act, IV of 1884, are wide enough to include crackers and the only question is, whether the crackers in the possession of the accused fall under rule 3 of the rules framed, which exclude toy fireworks from the operation of the Act. The onus is on the accused to show that the fireworks in his possession fall within the description of toy fireworks. This is in all cases a question of fact and, in the present case, I do not see how in the absence of any evidence I can hold that the crackers are toy fireworks, especially when he took the trouble of getting licenses for crackers on the footing that they fell under the Explosives Act. Emperor v. Kachapa Gurappa Hattarvat (1) and Emperor v. Bansidhar (2) referred to by the petitioner's Vakil proceeded on the nature of the fireworks in question in those cases, and cannot be taken as authorities to show that crackers are as a rule to be excluded from the category of explosives.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 491; 18 Bom. L. R. 556; 18 Cr. L. J. 139.

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 911; 5 P. R. 1910 Cr.; 9 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.; 11 Cr. L. J. 287.

PILAJI V. DARYA.

The second objection is that the possession of the import license superseded the terms of the license Exhibits Band C. I am unable to agree with this contention, the effect of which will be to enable an importer to keep in his possession at one time and in one place quantities of fireworks more than 1,000 lbs. Rule 71 states that a permit may be granted to a holder of a license in forms A, B, C or D to possess any quantity of manufactured fireworks not exceeding 1,000 lbs., and rule 35 states that an explosive shall not be possessed except in accordance with the conditions of a license granted under the rules. An exception is made in cases of permits granted under rules 68, 69, 70 or 71.

I am of opinion that the whole scheme of the rules is to require a separate license for possession, at any one time and place, of explosives in addition to a license to import during a particular period. Where permit for possession is granted limiting the quantity to be possessed at any specified period or at any particular place, the permission to import a larger quantity during the longer period must be read subject to the quantity in possession being exhausted or reduced below the maximum for which possession is permitted. The permission to import a larger quantity is given for purposes of preventing a separate application each time the stock is reduced or exhausted and it will be unreasonable to suppose that, while the rules framed under the Act fixed 1,000 lbs. as the maximum in the case of manufacturers or retail dealers, it left importers free from any restrictions as to the quantity they can keep or store so long as they did not exceed the maximum quantity they were allowed to import during any year. Public safety was the reason for fixing the maximum quantity which a person can possess and the public danger is the same whether the explosives are stocked by an importer or retail dealer.

The rules framed are not quite clear but the construction placed by me seems to follow from the various provisions and safeguards as to possession of explosives.

I see no grounds to interfere and dismiss the petition.

M. C. P.

Petition dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 74 of 1918.

May 29, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Kotwal, Offg. A. J. C.

PILAJI—APPLICANT

versus

DARYA AND OTHERS—NON-APPLICANTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145 147—Enquiry under s. 147—Procedure—Order passed without giving parties opportunity to produce evidence, legality of—Jurisdiction—Order affecting persons not parties to proceedings.

An enquiry under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, has to be made in the manner provided by section 145 of the Code and the Magistrate conducting such enquiry must receive the evidence of the parties. Failure to give an opportunity to the parties of calling evidence affects the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. [p. 991, cols. 1 & 2.]

Musammnat Jaiwanti v. Ramrao, 48 Ind. Cas. 987, followed.

Section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, contemplates an order to be passed between parties to the proceedings only. An order affecting persons who are not parties to the proceedings is not within the purview of the section and is, therefore, liable to be set aside as affecting jurisdiction. [p. 992, col. 1.]

Revision of the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, 1st Class, Tahsil Sansar, District Chindwara, in Criminal Case No. 16/26 of 1917 of his Court decided on the 5th January 1918.

Messrs. K. K. Gandhe and S. K. Barlingay, for the Applicant.

PILLAJI v. DARYA.

Mr. K. V. Deosker, for the Non-Applicant.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. P. Dick, Standing Counsel, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, must be set aside on two grounds affecting jurisdiction, first, that he failed to receive the evidence of the first party before making the order against him; second, that the order is not one within the purview of section 147, inasmuch as it is not an order between the parties to the proceeding.

As to the first ground the order-sheet shows that the parties put in their written statements on the 19th November 1917, and the 30th November 1917 was fixed for hearing evidence. On that day two witnesses for the first party and five for the second were present, but owing to the other work the case was adjourned to the 1st December 1917. This day's order sheet runs thus:—

"Pillaji by Mr. Mishra and the parties No. 2 in person and by Mr. Triwedi. Arguments of both parties heard and it is decided to go for spot enquiry. Their witnesses be discharged at present. Case for 5th January 1918. Put up on 3rd January 1918."

The next entry in the order-sheet, dated 20th December 1917, is as follows:—

"The spot was inspected on my way today. Pillaji's son was present and all the accused also. Settlement papers were seen in this connection. The case is for 5th January 1918 here. Parties were asked to be present here."

On 5th January 1918 the order-sheet runs thus:—

"Pillaji present in person and only Kishan and Yeshwant are present for the other party. Order passed. Police informed."

An enquiry under section 147 has to be made in the manner provided by section 145 and the Magistrate must receive the evidence of the parties. It is clear from the entries in the order-sheet reproduced above that the Magistrate failed to receive the oral evidence of the parties. The first party had obtained against three of the second party a decree of the Civil Court which had considered the settlement entry and he might have succeeded on the same evidence in convincing the Sub-Divisional Magistrate that the settlement entry was not justified or conclusive.

As regards the District Magistrate's remarks that the order of the Settlement Officer was incorporated in the village administration papers which appear to have been signed on the 10th May 1917, it appears from the record of this case (see leaves Nos. 18, 19 and 20) that the entry was made by the Revenue Inspector in the wajib ul-arz on the 27th or 28th September 1917. Failure to give an opportunity to the parties of calling evidence affects jurisdiction [Musammatt Jaiwanti v. Ramrao (1)].

As regards the second ground the Magistrate's order is as follows:—

"(1) This is a case under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, started on the Police report. It is alleged that a dispute over the right of way over field No. 232/1 of Pillaji exists between Pillaji on one side and Dasrya, Kishan, Jago son of Narsu and Jago and Praja sons of Nago and Bapuji on the otherside.

"The dispute is about the right of way to the platform of Maroti during the time of Pola for one day.

"(2) The parties filed their written statements. I went over to see the spot along with the Patwari and find according to the new settlement misl that the right of way exists in favour of the villagers during Pola. In fact this application is regarding the dispute over it between Pillaji and the whole village.

"(3) The documentary evidence, specially the settlement record, clearly proves that Pillaji has no right to restrain the public or the second party as named above from proceeding to the Maroti platform on the Pola day. If his crops are damaged by the bullocks that day, he has his right of action for damages against the individuals liable for them.

"(4) Accordingly I order Pillaji not to restrain any person on Pola day to carry his bullocks to pay homage to the Maroti platform through his field No. 232/1, unless the same is prohibited by the Civil Court in due course, as it is clear that the villagers did exercise the right on the last Pola day also, except Dasrya, Kishan and Jago and Govinda who are restrained by the Civil Court."

(1) 43 Ind. Cas. 987.

KRISHNADHON GHOSE v. MAHENDRA NATH DUTT.

I cannot take this to be an order between the parties to the proceedings in view of the passages underlined (italicised) by me. Section 147 does not contemplate an order like the one passed in this case.

I set aside the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate dated the 5th January 1918 and direct that the Magistrate take such evidence as the party may wish to adduce and then pass a proper order. I may add that it is advisable to draw up a final order separate from the judgment or order dealing with the merits of the case on the lines of Form No. XXIV, Schedule V, Criminal Procedure Code.

Order set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 661 OF 1918.

August 28, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tennon and

Mr. Justice Cuming.

KRISHNADHON GHOSE AND ANOTHER—
PETITIONERS*versus*MAHENDRA NATH DUTT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 403 (4), 530 (k)—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 408, 409, 477 A—Acquittal by Magistrate not empowered to try case, whether bars subsequent trial—Procedure—Jurisdiction.

A complaint was made against the accused disclosing offences punishable under sections 409 and 477A of the Penal Code. The case was by some mistake made over for trial to an Honorary Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate of the Second Class. He proceeded to deal with the case as one under section 408, Indian Penal Code, and finally acquitted the accused. Subsequently the complainant presented a further complaint to the District Magistrate praying for the trial of the accused under sections 409 and 477A of the Penal Code. The District Magistrate thereupon took cognizance of the case and referred the complaint to a First Class Magistrate for disposal.

Held, that inasmuch as the Second Class Magistrate who had dealt with the case was not empowered to commit accused persons for trial to the Court of Session, the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to take cognizance of the second complaint having regard to the provisions of section 350 (k) and section 403 (4) of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Criminal revision against the order of the District Magistrate, Burdwan, dated the 27th June 1918.

Babus Manmathanath Mukerjee and Rishindra Nath Sarkar, for the Petitioners.

Babus Dasarathi Sanyal and Pankaja Kumar Ganguly, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—In this case against the petitioners before us a complaint was made disclosing offences punishable under section 409 and section 477A of the Indian Penal Code. The case was by some mistake made over for trial to an Honorary Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate of the Second Class. He proceeded to deal with the case as one under section 408, Indian Penal Code, and finally acquitted the accused. After certain intermediate proceedings to which we need make no further reference, the complainant presented a further complaint to the District Magistrate praying for the trial of the accused under sections 409 and 477A, Indian Penal Code. The Magistrate thereupon took cognizance of this complaint and has referred the same to a Magistrate of the First Class for disposal.

It appears that the Magistrate of the Second Class who has dealt with the case is not empowered to commit accused persons for trial to the Court of Session. If he had been so empowered, we might possibly have considered his order of acquittal under section 408, Indian Penal Code, as tantamount to an order of discharge under sections 409 and 477A. That not being so, having regard to the provisions of section 530 (k) and section 403 (4), Criminal Procedure Code, and the decision of this Court in Abdul Ghani v. Emperor (1), we are unable to say that in taking cognizance of this second complaint the learned District Judge has erred. It is contrary to the practice of this Court to interfere with a prosecution at the initial stage, and in the present case notwithstanding the Honorary Magistrate's discussion of the evidence adduced before him, we are not prepared to do so in this case.

We, therefore, discharge this Rule.

Rule discharged.

(1) 29 C. 412.

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 53
OF 1916.

August 5, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea and Mr. Justice Smither.UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

NOBOKISHORE MONDAL AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow, alienation by—ijara granted to de facto manager—Necessity—Burden of proof—Recital as to necessity, effect of, where independent evidence available—"Benefit of estate," meaning of—Estoppel—Reversioner receiving rent due for period prior to death of widow, whether ratifies lease—Property acquired by widow with savings out of income of husband's estate, whether follows corpus.

A de facto manager of the estate of a Hindu widow taking an ijara of the properties inherited by the widow from her husband must show that there was legal necessity for the grant of the ijara or that the ijara was granted for the benefit of the estate. [p. 996, col. 2, p. 997, col. 2.]

R. a Hindu died leaving three sons, T., M. and H., each of whom got one-third share of the estate left by R. H. died and his one-third share passed to his widow B. Then T. died and his one-third share passed to his brother M., who thus got a two-thirds share in the estate left by R. Thereafter M. died leaving his widow P., who thus inherited a two-thirds share of the properties. P. and B. then granted an ijara pattah of their respective shares in favour of one K., who was the brother's son of P. and who had been living with P. from his infancy and who was managing the estate for P. and B. The recital in the pattah was that it was granted for the purpose of liquidating the debts incurred in the life time of M. and in the time of the widows' possession of the estate and the debts incurred for meeting the expenses of the shraddhs.

Held, (1) that as the evidence that was available as to the pecuniary condition of the estate at the time of the alienation proved that the money that came into the hands of the widows was sufficient for paying off the debts left by their respective husbands, as no legal necessity for the grant of the ijara was made out and as the ijara was not granted for the benefit of the estate, the ijara could not be binding upon the reversioners; [p. 1001, col. 2.]

(2) that had the ijaradar been a stranger he could not have been expected to account for the money that came into the hands of the widows, nor would he have been responsible for the previous mismanagement, if any, of the estate, but that the lessee, being the de facto manager of the estate, must show that there was legal necessity for the grant of the ijara. [p. 996, col. 2.]

When independent evidence is available as to the pecuniary condition of the estate at the time of an alienation by the widow, such evidence might be accepted in preference to the recital in the deed of alienation alleging the existence of legal necessity. [p. 996, col. 2; p. 997, col. 1.]

Nanda Lal Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore Acharjya, 36 Ind. Cas. 420; 43 I. A. 249; 20 M. L. T. 835; 31 M. L. J. 563; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 336; 4 L. W. 458; 18 Bom. L. R. 565; 14 A. L. J. 1103; 24 C. L. J. 487; 1 P. L. W. 1; 21 O. W. N. 225; 44 C. 186; 10 Bur. L. T. 177 (P. C.), Murugesam Pillai v. Manickavasaka Desika, 39 Ind. Cas. 659; 44 I. A. 98; 32 M. L. J. 369; 15 A. L. J. 281; 21 M. L. T. 288; 1 P. L. W. 457; 5 L. W. 759; 21 C. W. N. 761; 40 M. 402; 19 Bom. L. R. 456; 25 C. L. J. 589; (1917) M. W. N. 487 (P. C.), referred to and distinguished.

The expression "benefit of the estate", although it cannot be precisely defined, includes the preservation of the estate from extinction, its defence against hostile litigation, its protection from inundation and similar circumstances. [p. 997, col. 2; p. 998, col. 1.]

Powers of a Hindu widow to deal with family property discussed and case-law reviewed.

The recovery by the reversioner from lessees of arrears of rent due to the widow for a period prior to the death of the widow does not amount to a ratification of the lease granted by the widow. [p. 1001, col. 2.]

Modhu Sudan Singh v. Rooke, 25 C. 1; 24 I. A. 164; 1 C. W. N. 433; 7 M. L. J. 127; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 194; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1, distinguished.

In deciding whether the property acquired or purchased by a Hindu widow with savings out of the income from her husband's estate is to descend with the husband's estate or is to be treated as separate estate of the widow, the matter to be considered is whether the widow has made any distinction between the original estate and the after-purchases. In each case the question is one of intention. If the widow intended to treat the purchased properties as part of the original estate, they must follow the corpus. [p. 1001, col. 2; p. 1002, col. 1.]

Isri Dutt Koer v. Hansbatti Koerain, 10 I. A. 150; 10 C. 324; 13 C. L. R. 418; 7 Ind. Jur. 557; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 459; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 217; Sheelochun Singh v. Sahab Singh, 14 C. 387 at p. 393; 1 I. A. 63; 11 Ind. Jur. 231; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 1; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 257, followed.

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, 24 Perganas, dated the 29th June 1915.

Babus Ram Chandra Mazumdar, Manmatha Nath Roy, Norendra Nath Set, Bijoy K. Bhattacharjee and Sitaram Banerjee, for the Appellants.

Babus D. N. Chackerburty, Tarak Chandra Chackerburty, Jatindra Nath Lahiri, Bimola Chandra Deb, Apurba Charan Mukherjee and Profulla Ch. Chakraburty, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for a declaration that certain transactions entered into by a Hindu widow were not binding upon the reversioners, and for recovery of possession of the properties in suit [under the] following circumstances.

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBOKISHORE MONDAL.

One Raghunath had three sons, Thakur Das, Madhu Sudan and Hari Narain, each of whom got $\frac{1}{3}$ rd of the estate left by Raghunath. Hari Narain died leaving his widow Bamakali and his $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share devolved on her. Then Thakur Das died; his $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share passed to his brother Madhusudan, who thus got $\frac{2}{3}$ rd share. Then Madhusudan died on the 13th August 1867, leaving his widow Prosanna Kumari, who thus inherited $\frac{2}{3}$ rd share of the properties. After the death of Madhusudan, Prosanna Kumari settled all the properties left by him, excepting the Thakurbati, Kacharibati, dwelling house, tank and garden at the back of the house and a Taluk No. 395, in permanent lease with her brother's son Khetra Mohan Samanta on the 17th September 1869. Bamakali, widow of Hari Narain, joined in this settlement and gave a lease of her $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share to the said Khetra Samanta. Bamakali died on the 14th February 1891. After her death a suit was instituted by Prosanna Kumari as guardian of Basanta Kumar, the alleged adopted son of Madhusudan, for a declaration of Basanta's preferential right to the share of Hari Narain against Kailash and certain other persons who were then the reversionary heirs of Hari Narain. The suit was dismissed as the adoption was not proved and the reversioners obtained a decree for costs against Prosanna Kumari.

In execution of the decree for costs, Prosanna Kumari's interest in the property covered by the Ijara was put up to sale and purchased by one Radha Mohan. In the certificate of sale it was stated that only her life-interest was sold.

On the same day in execution of another decree obtained by Kailash Chandra and others against Ram Chandra father of Khetra Samanta and Syama Sundari, the aunt of Khetra, their interest in the Ijara, namely, $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share, was purchased by or on behalf of Raj Kishore Mondal, the predecessor of defendants Nos. 1 to 6. On the 5th May 1895 Prosanna Kumari sold certain lands which had been purchased by her to the said Raj Kishore. Prosanna Kumari died on the 7th August 1907. At that time Srikanta and Nilkanta Mondal were the actual reversionary heirs and they gave a permanent lease of the properties to the plaintiffs on the 3rd December 1912.

The plaint, as it originally stood, comprised three estates Nos. 396, 397 and 398, and plots Nos. 1 to 1161. The claims with regard to Taluks Nos. 396 and 397 and plots Nos. 1 to 602 have been compromised with the defendants who set up rights to the same.

The main defence was that Madhusudan at his death was involved in debts, that the Ijara was granted by Prosanna Kumari in order to pay off these debts, that Prosanna acquired an absolute right to the properties covered by the Kobala of 5th May 1895 and that she had absolute power of disposal over the same, and that the share of Madhusudan in estate No. 395 had been sold away for arrears of revenue.

The learned Subordinate Judge found that the Ijara to Khetra Samanta was executed for legal necessity, at any rate, the alienation could be justified on the ground that it was beneficial to the estate, that the properties covered by the Kobala of 1895 were acquired out of the income of the properties left by Madhusudan, that Prosanna Kumari was justified in dealing with them, as she did not express any intention to treat them as part of her husband's estate, that the sale in respect of estate No. 395 was binding on the reversioners and that the remaining plots of land were not shown to have been included in the estate of Madhusudan.

The plaintiffs have appealed to this Court. The appeal relates to estate No. 398 and plots Nos. 603 to 1161.

The main contentions in this appeal are that the Ijara was a collusive transaction and that even if not collusive, it was not justified by legal necessity, nor was it beneficial to the estate so as to be valid against the reversioners, that the properties covered by the Kobala, dated the 5th May 1895, formed part of the corpus of the estate inherited by Prosanna Kumari from her husband and could not be alienated, that only her life-interest had passed under the conveyance and that the remaining plots of land actually belonged to Madhusudan's estate. With respect to estate No. 398, the learned Pleader for the appellant admitted that regard being had to the current of recent decisions, he could not press his claim against the purchasers.

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

The first question for consideration, therefore, is as to the validity of the Ijara dated the 17th September 1869. As stated above, Madhusudan died on the 13th August 1867, that is, about 2 years before the Ijara was granted. He undoubtedly left some debts. The defendants' case is that he was in a hopelessly embarrassed condition at the time of his death. So far as the documentary evidence goes, there were only two debts due by him, namely, one a Kistibundi bond for Rs. 7,900 executed on the 3rd August 1863 in favour of Radha Mohan Mondal and the other a Kut Kobala in favour of one Lebrani Dasi, dated 3rd Jaista 1269 B. S. corresponding to 6th May 1862, for Rs. 800 which was to become absolute on the 16th Pous 1271 if the mortgage was not redeemed before that date. It does not appear whether the Kut Kobala was redeemed by Madhusudan or was made absolute before his death, which took place before 1867. A number of Howlati slips and letters have been produced on behalf of the defendants to show that Madhusudan was in constant need of money and had to borrow even petty sums from Radha Mohan Mondal. These Howlati slips and letters were for the period 1261 to 1236 B. S. and the Kistibundi bond dated 3rd Falgoun 1269, which was substituted by another Kistibundi bond dated 3rd August 1863, shows that it was in respect of monies borrowed from time to time and that it was executed for money due on adjustment of account. It appears, therefore, that the monies borrowed from time to time during the period 1261 to 1266 under the Howlati slips and letters (Exhibit C series) were covered by the Kistibundi bond. Oral evidence has been adduced to show that Madhusudan had various other creditors; but the witnesses who speak about these creditors cannot say whether there was any document in respect of the debts, nor can they say what the amount of debts was, nor whether they were paid off by Madhusudan.

Ram Kumar Bag, witness No. 1 for the defendant, was in the service of Madhusudan up to his death and afterwards was in the service of Prosanna Kumari till her death. He says that the debts left by Madhusudan including his Sradh expenses amounted to Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 11,000.

Another witness, Mohesh Chandra Haldar, who was also in the service of Madhusudan, says that the debts of Madhusudan gradually rose to Rs. 15,000 or Rs. 16,000. There is no evidence, either oral or documentary, to shew that the debts left by the deceased exceeded Rs. 15,000.

It appears from the evidence that Madhu at the time of his death left shares in four Taluks, namely, estates Nos. 395, 396, 397 and 398, and 2591 bighas of land, some of which, however, appear to be small and scattered pieces of land. One of them Taluk No. 395 was sold after his death by Prosanna Kumari to one Shama Sandari, aunt of Khetra Samanta, for Rs. 10,000. There is no documentary evidence as to the sale, but there is no doubt that it was sold after the death of Madhusudan and before the Ijara to Khetra Samanta, as it was not included in the Ijara which comprised all the properties with the exception of the dwelling house and a few other houses and garden mentioned above. The sale of this Taluk is referred to in the Kobala Exhibit A1, dated 18th December 1888, produced on behalf of the defendant, and it appears from the evidence of the defendant's witness Mohesh Chandra Haldar that Khetra had offered Rs. 10,000 for the property and he (Mohesh) was told that Khetra's aunt had purchased it. So that at any rate about Rs. 6,600 came into the hands of Prosanna Kumari by the sale of the property, assuming that Bamakali had a $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share in the property.

Then it appears from the application of Prosanna Kumari, dated 21st January 1868, for the collection of the debts due to Madhusudan under Act XXVII of 1860 that Rs. 9,000 was due to him: and the witness Ram Kumar says that the amount was realized. It also appears from the evidence of that witness that Madhusudan left moveable properties of considerable value, about Rs. 20,000. However that may be, we have it upon the evidence of the witnesses for the defendants themselves that at least Rs. 15,600 came to the hands of Prosanna Kumari after the death of Madhusudan and before the grant of the Ijara. This, together with the income of the properties for two years, appear prima facie sufficient for paying off the debts left by the deceased which, it may be noted, were Rs. 7,000 or Rs. 8,000 according to the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge or Rs. 15,000 or Rs. 16,000 according to the witness Mohesh Chandra Haldar.

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL V. NOBOKISHORE MONDAL.

The plaintiff alleged in the plaint that the income of the estate left by Madhu was Rs. 4,000 a year, and one of his witnesses said that the income of Prosanna Kumari and Bamakali exclusive of revenue and costs (of collection) was Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 6,000. The defendants' witness Ram Kumar also says that the nett income excluding jama and collection charges was Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 6,000. The learned Subordinate Judge, referring to the statement in the plaint that the income was Rs. 4,000, says that the evidence was not satisfactory, but he has apparently overlooked the evidence of the defendants on the point, and he has also overlooked the fact that by the sale of estate No. 395, Rs. 10,000 came to the hands of the ladies. He has further erred in holding that the amount of Rs. 9,000, for the collection of which Prosanna Kumari applied and obtained succession certificate, was not available to her, when the defendants' witness says that the amount was realized by Prosanna Kumari.

The Ijara was granted to Khetra Samanta, but it appears that it was taken on behalf of his family, i.e., his father and uncles. Khetra was the son of Prosanna Kumari's brother. Prosanna had no child of her own and this nephew Khetra was brought up by her from his infancy. He was married at the costs of Prosanna and he lived in her house with his wife and children. It was he who looked after Prosanna's estate up to the death of Madhusudan and it was to him that the Ijara was granted, which comprised shares in the three Taluks Nos. 393, 397, 398, and all the rent-free and rent-paying lands, excepting the "dwelling house-Kacharibati, Thakurbati and the tank and garden at the back of the house." The whole estate was let out at a rent of Rs. 3,901 and a selami of Rs. 1,000. The revenue and rents payable for the Taluks and the lands amounted to about Rs. 3,200 and Rs. 700 appears to be the only profit which the ladies were to get under the Ijara. No boundaries of the lands were stated in the Pattah, only Mouzaha in which they were situated being set out in the Pattah.

Some of the witnesses for the defendants stated in a general way that the debts of Madhusudan were paid off by sale of some of the properties and by the grant of the Ijara. But assuming that Rs. 1,000 was paid as selami to Prosanna and Bamakali, it is not shown what became of the Rs. 10,000 obtained by the sale of the Taluk No. 395 and of the large sum of Rs. 9,000 which came to the hands of Prosanna when the succession certificate was taken out by her. Besides the above two sums the income of the properties for two years since the death of Madhu came to her hands. Had the Ijaradar been a stranger, he could not have been expected to account for the money, nor would he have been responsible for the previous management, if any, of the estate. Here the lessee was Khetra Samanta who was the de facto manager of the estate, and it was for the defendants to show that there was necessity for the grant of the Ijara. It was recited in the Ijara Pattah that the lease was granted "for the purpose of liquidation of debts incurred in the lifetime of the late Madhusudan Mondal and in the time of our possession of the estate and the debts incurred in the Adya Sradha of the said Mondal."

In the case of Nanda Lal Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore Acharya (1) the Judicial Committee, in referring to the recital of legal necessity in a conveyance executed by a Hindu widow, observed: "But in such a case as the present their Lordships do not think that these recitals can be disregarded, nor on the other hand can any fixed and inflexible rule be laid down as to the proper weight which they are entitled to receive. If the deeds were challenged at the time or near the date of their execution so that independent evidence would be available, the recitals would deserve but slight consideration and certainly should not be accepted as proof of the facts. But as time goes by, and all the original parties to the transaction and all those who could have given evidence on the relevant points have grown old or passed away, a recital consistent with the probability and circumstances of the case assumes greater importance and cannot lightly be set aside, for it should be remembered that the actual proof of the necessity which justified the deed is not essential to establish its validity. It is only necessary that a representation should have been made to the purchaser that such necessity existed and that he should have acted honestly and made proper enquiry to satisfy himself of its truth."

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 420; 43 I. A. 249; 20 M. L. T. 335; 31 M. L. J. 563; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 336; 4 L. W. 458; 18 Bom. L. R. 868; 14 A. L. J. 1103; 24 C. L. J. 487; 1 P. L. W. 1; 21 C. W. N. 225; 44 C. 186; 10 Bur. L. T. 177 (P. C.).

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

In the present case, however, although the transaction is more than 40 years old, two of the witnesses examined on behalf of the defendants were in the service of Madhusudan and Prosanna Kumari. Evidence, therefore, is available as to the pecuniary condition of the estate at the time of the alienation. Besides the alienation in the case before the Judicial Committee was made to strangers, in the present case it was to a person who in fact managed the estate for the lady. If the nett income of the estate of the two ladies was anything like five or six thousand rupees (about Rs. 4,000 in Prosanna Kumari's share, as deposed to by Ram Kumar and Mohesh Chandra), the grant of an Ijara at a rent of Rs. 3,901 and a selami of Rs. 1,000, which left only Rs. 700 as profit ($\frac{2}{3}$ of which represented Prosanna Kumari's share), was certainly detrimental to the estate.

Reliance was placed on behalf of the respondents upon the case of Murugesam Pillai v. Manickavasaka Desika (2), where the Judicial Committee commented upon the non-production of books of accounts, which would have shown that the lease executed by the manager of a Hindu temple (in that case) had been recognised by his successors. In the present case it does not appear that the plaintiffs-lessors had got the books and accounts of the estate on the death of Prosanna Kumari and we think, therefore, that the observations made in that case do not apply to the present.

It is true that Bamakali joined in granting the Ijara; but she had no son and she was living apparently amicably with Prosanna Kumari in the same house. Khetra was managing the estate for both the ladies and Bamakali might have thought it convenient to join with Prosanna Kumari who had a $\frac{2}{3}$ share. Having regard to all the circumstances, we do not think that legal necessity for the grant of the Ijara has been made out.

The learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the Ijara could be supported on the ground that it was beneficial to the estate. Referring to the litigation which Madhusudan had with Kailash, he observes: "This litigation is continued for some years after his death and it naturally interfered with collection of rent. Besides, it was a source of constant drain on the slender means of the widows Prosanna Kumari and Bamakali. Obviously it was difficult for them to husband the resources so as to be able to meet the cost of litigation and at the same time pay off the existing debts. Madhusudan could not himself do it. If the widows had allowed the old state of things to go on, the entire estate might be lost. Such was the position of the widows when the Ijara was granted. It secured them a nett profit of about Rs. 700 a year; relieved them from the pressure of litigation costs and at the same time enabled them to save the properties from the clutches of creditors. Having regard to all the circumstances, the permanent Ijara in favour of the Samantas must be taken as a step beneficial to the estate, and apparently it was more advantageous than the permanent Ijara which the reversioners have granted to the plaintiffs. It has been beneficial to the reversioners in that it has saved the estate. On this consideration alone, apart from legal necessity, the Ijara must be held binding on the reversioners."

On behalf of the appellant, reliance was placed on the case of Palaniappa Ohetty v. Sreemath Deivasi kamony Pandara (3). In that case Lord Atkinson in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee states: "The phrase 'benefit of the estate', as used in the decisions with regard to the circumstances justifying an alienation by the manager of an infant heir or by the trustee of a religious endowment, cannot be precisely defined, but includes the preservation of the estate from extinction, its defence against hostile litigation, its protection from inundation and similar circumstances."

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 659; 44 I. A. 98; 32 M. L. J. 369; 15 A. L. J. 281; 21 M. L. T. 298; 1 P. L. W. 457; 5 L. W. 759; 21 O. W. N. 761; 40 M. 402; 19 Bom. L. R. 456; 25 C. L. J. 589; (1917) M. W. N. 487 (P. C.).

(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 722; 44 I. A. 147; 21 O. W. N. 729; 15 A. L. J. 485; 1 P. L. W. 697; 33 M. L. J. 1; 19 Bom. L. R. 567; 22 M. L. T. 1; (1917) M. W. N. 477 & 507; 26 C. L. J. 153; 40 M. 769; 6 L. W. 222 (P. C.).

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

It is contended on behalf of the respondents that those observations were made with reference to the powers of a Shebait of a religious endowment or the manager of an infant heir, and are inapplicable to the case of a Hindu widow, who unlike a Shebait or a guardian does not hold the property for another. A Hindu widow is not a tenant for life, but is owner of her husband's property, subject to certain restrictions on alienation and subject to its devolving upon her husband's heirs upon her death, and it is argued that she has greater latitude in dealing with her property than a Shebait or a guardian where it is for the benefit of the estate, and certain cases have been relied upon. It is unnecessary in the present case to discuss the question whether the words "benefit of the estate" should be understood in the same sense in relation to the powers of a Hindu widow in which they have been used with reference to the powers of a Shebait or a guardian in the case cited above, because in our opinion the Ijara was not for the benefit of the estate in any sense of the term, and the cases relied upon do not help the respondents.

In the first case cited before us, Dayamani Debi v. Strinibash Kundu (4), it was held that a permanent lease granted by a Hindu widow which was for the benefit of the estate was binding upon the reversioner. But it was found, in that case that "the previous tenants on the property would not adhere to it, because it was not profitable, and that it was impracticable, the land being jungle, to bring it under cultivation without spending a substantial sum on its improvement," and the lease was granted under those circumstances. It was also found that the bargain was a good one, that both the bonus and the rents went into the pockets of the plaintiffs (who were the sons and reversioners of the lady) and that what the mother did was for the good of the plaintiffs who had been benefited by her act.

The next is that of Bijoy Gopal Mukerji v. Girindra Nath Mukerji (5), when the question was as to the validity of an Ijara for 60 years, dated the 7th September 1863, which had been executed by a Hindu widow aged 42 with the consent of the then reversioners and which was part of an arrangement or settlement in which all the branches of her husband's family shared. In a suit brought after the death of the widow by the reversionary heirs of her husband, this Court (Caspersz and Coxe, JJ.) said, "if we find that the arrangement was for the benefit of the estate and did actually benefit the estate, we should apply and even broaden the principle adopted in the case of Dayamani Debi v. Strinibash Kundu (4)," and after referring to the principle laid down in that case observed, "the principle is based upon the decisions of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee and it was applied in Venkaji Shridar v. Vishnu Babaji (5), where Sir C. Sargent, C. J., said: 'A widow like a manager of the family must be allowed a reasonable latitude in the exercise of her powers, provided she acts fairly to her expectant heirs,' a fortiori if Sayamani Debi made a good bargain for herself, and if that bargain did not prejudice the position of the then reversioners it should be given effect to, and the present reversioners ought not to be allowed to obliterate the history of nearly half a century." [See Bijoy Gopal Mukerji v. Girindra Nath Mukerji (5).]

The case was taken up to the Privy Council, see Bijoy Gopal Mukerji v. Girindra Nath Mukerji (5), and the decision of this Court was upheld. Their Lordships held that the arrangement of which the Ijara formed part was in truth dictated by the necessities of the case and that the choice of the term of 60 years as the term of the Ijara was made for the benefit of the estate, and did not injure any one. It was pointed out that from 1882 to 1893 when the widow died, the persons who now

(5) 23 Ind. Cas. 162; 41 C. 793; 18 C. W. N. 673; 19 C. L. J. 620; 27 M. L. J. 123; 16 M. L. T. 68; (1914) M. W. N. 430; 1 L. W. 533; 16 Bom. L. R. 425; 12 A. L. J. 711 (P. C.).

(6) 18 B. 534 at p. 536; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 865.

(4) 33 C. 842.

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

sought to set the Ijara aside acquiesced in and took the benefit of the arrangement which, it might therefore be inferred from their conduct, had, in their opinion, been made in good faith and under such circumstances of necessity as would give it validity according to Hindu Law; and the conduct of the appellants themselves during those years afforded evidence on which the respondents were entitled to rely. Their Lordships observed: "They are of opinion that the case depends entirely on the facts, and that it raises no new question of law as to the powers of a Hindu widow to deal with family property in case of necessity with the consent of the then present reversioners and they are, therefore, of opinion that the appeal fails."

In that case the fact that some of the then reversioners took a Dur-ijara was relied upon and our attention has been called to the fact that in the present case also Kailash, one of the then reversioners, took a sub lease from Moaraja Dasi, the aunt of Khetra Nath, in respect of $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share of the Ijara, in the benami of one Baikuntha Majhi. But Kailash was one of many of the then reversioners, and any inference which may be drawn from his taking a Dur ijara of the said share is weakened if not destroyed by the fact that he along with several others, the then reversioners, had put up the $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share of the Ijara right, expressly stating that it was good only for the lifetime of the widow Prosanna Kumari.

The last case relied upon is that of Upendra Nath Bose v. Bindeshri Prosad (7). In that case a permanent mokarari lease granted by the daughter of a deceased Hindu of some properties belonging to his estate in settlement of a bona fide dispute was held binding on the reversioners, and it was pointed out that the test to be applied in determining the validity of an alienation by a limited owner is whether the purpose for which the alienation was made was in the circumstances of the case proper and legitimate and the existence of legal necessity "in the narrow sense of actual pressure on the estate or the danger to be averted" is not the only test. In that case the permanent lease was not only attested by the reversioner, but he later on set up the lease in answer to a suit of the grantee claiming the entire estate by survivorship as the undivided co-partner of the last male owner and ultimately joined in a compromise by which the plaintiff in the suit admitted that he had no title to the estate and the reversioner affirmed the Mokarari Pattah.

All the cases relied upon, therefore, are clearly distinguishable. In the present case the learned Subordinate Judge no doubt says that the litigation with Kailash continued for some years after Madhusudan's death and it naturally interfered with the collection of rent, and that if the widow had allowed the old state of things to go on, the entire estate might have been lost. Some witnesses have said in a general way that the litigation continued for 20 years, but we do not know the nature of the litigation, nor what the cost of the litigation was. The Ijara was granted within 2 years of Madhusudan's death, and it does not appear with whom the litigation continued after the grant of the Ijara. The only documentary evidence about litigation placed before us relates to the suit brought by Prosanna Kumari as guardian of Basant Kumar, the alleged adopted son of Madhusudan, for recovery of the properties of Harinarain as his reversionary heir on the death of Bamakali. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the adoption was not proved. Basant Kumar, who was set up as the adopted son of Madhusudan, was the son of Khetra Nath. We fail to see how this litigation about the adoption which took place long after the grant of the Ijara, and which was conducted presumably for the benefit of the son of Khetra Nath the Ijaradar, can be taken into consideration in determining whether the Ijara was for the benefit of the estate. It appears that the widows made some savings, and purchased some lands, so there could not have been any drain on their "slender means" by any litigation, and there is no evidence to show that the Ijaradar was involved in any litigation with Kailash and others. It is pointed out that there were a large number of small plots of land and that the rental payable for the lands was heavy. But if the nett income in Prosanna Kumari's share was anything like Rs. 4,000, the rent payable cannot be said to be heavy.

(7) 32 Ind. Cas. 468; 20 C. W. N. 210; 22 C. L. J. 452.

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

The estate was being managed by Khetra since the death of Madhusudan and it was to him or his family (father and uncles) that the Ijara was granted. If the estate was well-managed by Khetra as Ijaradar, there does not appear to be any reason for saying that it was not equally well-managed by him before the Ijara. There is no suggestion that Khetra, who had been brought up by Prosanna Kumari from his infancy and who was living with her with his wife and children, had refused to manage the estate for her unless the Ijara was granted to him; there is no mention of any such reason in the Ijara Pattab, nor even that it would be convenient to let out the properties in Ijara, and there is no evidence to show that they could not be let out except under a permanent lease. The only reason assigned for the grant was that there was necessity for raising money for liquidating the debts. The management appears to have been continued after the Ijara in the same way as before the grant. The property was practically transferred subject to the profit of Rs. 700, and it seems to us that the grant of the Ijara was not for the benefit of the estate, but for the benefit of Khetra and his family, Khetra being the object of affection of Prosanna Kumari.

It appears that in 1876, i.e., 7 years after the Ijara, Prosanna Kumari and Bamakali sold some rent-free lands to Radha Mohun, vide Exhibit B (2). Radha Mohun excavated a tank and constructed a brick built ghat. He then made a gift of it to his son in 1296. There is another sale by the two widows in favour of Umamoyee, brother's wife of Radha Mohan. Umamoyee also after her purchase in the name of her daughter excavated a tank, constructed a brick built ghat and planted trees in the garden. These sales took place after the grant of the Ijara when the widows were entitled only to the Ijara rent, and there is no explanation as to how Radha Mohun or Umamoyee obtained khas possession of these properties. These transactions are relied upon as showing the collusive nature of the Ijara. They throw some doubt about the real nature of the Ijara. But apart from these two transactions, there is nothing to show that the widows had anything to do with the lands covered by the Ijara. Having regard to the object of granting the Ijara which was to benefit Khetra and his family and the subsequent dealings with the Ijara, we think that it was not proved that the Ijara was a collusive one. We have, however, found that the Ijara was not justified by legal necessity and not beneficial to the estate.

The strongest argument in favour of the respondent is that the reversioners themselves had let out the entire estate to the plaintiff at a rent of Rs. 200 taking a selami of Rs. 1,000, and that this shows that the terms upon which the Ijara was granted by Prosanna Kumari were beneficial to the estate. It is contended on behalf of the respondents that the reversioners were entitled to the proprietary right as only the life-interest of Prosanna Kumari had been sold, and, therefore, entitled at any rate to two-thirds of the Ijara rent (Rs. 700 $\frac{1}{3}$) and that in the circumstances the rent reserved by the widow, as compared with that reserved by the plaintiff, was certainly beneficial to the estate.

But the Ijara did not contain the boundaries of the lands let out. The plaintiff claims 1,161 plots of land in the suit. As a matter of fact, the learned Subordinate Judge found that some of the plots have not been shown to form part of the estate of Madhusudan. Then the Ijara by Prosanna Kumari and Bamakali comprised the three Taluks Nos. 396, 397 and 398, which were the only revenue-paying lands included in the estate, and they have already been sold away since the grant of the Ijara.

Two other properties were sold away by the widows to Radha Mohun and Umamoyee as stated above, and it is not clear from the record what are the relative values of the Taluks and the two properties and the lands included in the Ijara.

The defendants contested even the proprietary right of the reversioners, and the plaintiffs in taking the lease took upon themselves the burden of a heavy and costly litigation,

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

The Ijara right of Khetra, his brother and Shama Sundari, namely, 2/3rds share of the Ijara, was put up to sale on the 15th August 1895 at the instance of Kailash and others who were some of the then reversioners, and was purchased by Raj Kishore father of defendants Nos. 1 to 6 in the name of his servant. It is stated in the sale certificate that "the Ijara Pattah granted by Prosanna Kumari one of the proprietors and Zemindars of the judgment-debtors in respect of the properties sold at auction shall remain in force during her lifetime so far as her right is concerned." It is pointed out on behalf of the respondents that in the certificate of sale by which Prosanna Kumari's Maliki right to the land, namely, 2/3rds share was purchased by Raj Kishore on the 15th August 1895, although the Maliki right was described as a life-interest only, it was stated that "the judgment-debtor has only a life-estate in the properties described in the above schedule and the Maliki right only to get the said permanent Ijara rent during her lifetime has been sold."

It is contended on behalf of the appellant that the words in the original mean: "Lasting for the lifetime of the judgment-debtor" (Prosanna), and do not mean permanent Ijara right. But we think that the original, as it stands, means a permanent Ijara right, though it cannot be said to be quite clear. The decree-holders, however, at whose instance the two sales took place were the same persons, namely, Kailash and others, and the sales took place on the same day. In the certificate of sale relating to the Ijara right, it was distinctly stated that the Ijara was to remain in force only for the lifetime of Prosanna Kumari, and it is difficult to see why the same Ijara right was described as a permanent Ijara right in the sale certificate in connection with the Maliki right. The statement in the sale certificate Exhibit 3 (1) might have been due to some mistake. In any case, having regard to the clear terms in which the Ijara was described in the certificate of sale relating to the sale of that right, we are unable to hold that there was any recognition of the permanent Ijara right by Kailash and others.

It appears that Prosanna and Bamakali brought a suit for arrears of rent against the Ijaradar and that on the death of Bamakali, the reversioners got themselves substituted in her place. It is accordingly contended on behalf of the respondent that that amounted to ratification of the Ijara: and reliance was placed on the case of Modhu Sudan Singh v. Rooke (8). But in that case the rent, which was deposited by the Patnidar, and was withdrawn by the reversioners, was for a period subsequent to the death of the widow. In the case before us, the arrears of rent were for a period prior to the death of Bamakali and the reversioners could recover the amount due to the deceased only by getting themselves substituted in her place and proceeding with the cause of action upon which the suit had been brought by Bamakali. We do not think that under those circumstances it could be said that there was any ratification of the Ijara by the reversioners, at any rate so far as Prosanna Kumari's share was concerned. We are accordingly of opinion that the Ijara is not binding upon the plaintiff.

The next question relates to the lands conveyed by Prosanna Kumari by the Kobala (Exhibit B), dated 5th May 1908, in favour of Raj Kishore Mondal for Rs. 800, in which it was recited that the lands had been purchased with her Stridhan. These lands, it appears, were certain jamas situated within the estate and were purchased in lieu of arrears of rent due to the estate of Madhusudan. The defendant's contention was that the rent being due to the widows, the properties purchased in lieu of such rent must be taken to be the Stridhan of the ladies.

The question for consideration, therefore, is whether the properties so acquired were her absolute properties or were accretions to the estate.

As laid down by the Judicial Committee in the case of Isri Dutt Koer v. Hansutti Koerain (9), the matter which has to be looked at in deciding whether the property acquired or purchased by the widows is to descend with the husband's estate or is to be treated as a separate estate, is whether the widows have "made any distinction between the original estate and the after-purchases." In Sheolochun Singh v. Sahab Singh (10) their Lordships observed: "Where a widow comes into possession of the property of the husband, and receives the income and does not spend it, but invests it in the purchase of other property, their Lordships think that prima facie it is the intention of the widow to keep the estate of the husband as an entire estate, and that the property purchased would prima facie be intended to be accretions to the estate. There may be no doubt circumstances which would show that the widow had no such intention, that she intended to appropriate the savings in another way." The question in each case is one of intention.

(8) 25 O. L. 1; 24 I. A. 164; 1 O. W. N. 433; 7 M. L. J. 127; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 194; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1 (P. C.).

(9) 10 I. A. 150; 10 C. 324; 13 O. L. R. 418; 7 Ind. Jur. 557; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 459; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 217 (P. C.).

UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL V. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL.

It appears that the jamas were purchased by the two widows Prosanna Kumari and Bamakali jointly in proportion to their shares in the original estate, namely 2/3rds and 1/3rd respectively. Prosanna Kumari while selling the property declared in the Kobala that it was her Stridhan. And it is contended that the lands were purchased in the benami of one Mohesh who executed a conveyance in favour of the ladies, and that indicates an intention to keep the lands separate from the estate. But the land covered by the Kobala Exhibit B was 97 bighas, and Mohesh says that only 22 bighas 2 cottas had been purchased in his name. On the other hand, in a suit brought by her as guardian of her alleged adopted son Basanta for recovery of the properties of Hari Narain on the death of Bamakali referred to above, 1/3rd share of this purchased property, though described as "self-acquired property of Prosanna Kumari and Bamakali purchased with their own money," was claimed as part of Hari Narain's estate. No doubt it was a suit by Basanta but Prosanna Kumari brought this suit as his guardian. The fact that the properties were claimed as Hari Narain's estate shows the intention to treat the property as part of the original estate. The learned Subordinate Judge says that as the boundaries of the lands are not given in the plaint, it is difficult to say if these lands are identical with the lands transferred by the Exhibit B. But it is not suggested that Prosanna Kumari or Bamakali had purchased any lands other than those covered by the conveyance. We think that the intention of the widows was to treat the purchased properties as part of the original estate, and, therefore, they must follow the corpus.

The appellants do not press their claim, and rightly so, with regard to Taluk No. 398 which has been sold for arrears of rent.

With regard to the remaining lands which are not covered by the Kobala (Exhibit B) nor by the certificate of sale, the plaintiffs' claim must fail. It is contended that no question was raised by the defendants that these lands did not form part of Madhusadan's estate, but there was a distinct issue raised on the point and it was found against the plaintiffs. We are of opinion that the decision of the Court below is right on this point.

The result is that the decree of the lower Court will be modified and the claim of the plaintiffs will be decreed only in respect of the plots Nos. 603 to 1161 covered by the Ijara Pattah and the Exhibit B.

The plaintiffs are entitled to mesne profits from the date of the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession, to be ascertained in further proceedings. As regards the period prior to the institution of the suit, however, we think having regard to the circumstances of the case that the plaintiffs should get profits for 3 years prior to the date of the suit, calculated on the basis of the Ijara rent payable in respect of Prosanna Kumari's share in proportion to the lands decreed out of the properties covered by the Ijara, after deducting therefrom the proportionate rents and other demands payable in respect of the said lands, the amount of such profits being ascertained in further proceedings.

The parties will be entitled to costs in the proportion of two-thirds (appellants) and one-third (respondents).

Decree modified.

(10) 14 C. 387 at p. 393; 14 I. A. 63; 11 Ind. Jur. 281; 5 Sup. P. O. J. 1; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 257 (P. C.).

DEPUTY COLLECTOR, MADURA v. MUTHIRULA MUDALI.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL SUITS NOS. 267 TO 270 OF 1917.

March 16, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

THE DEPUTY COLLECTOR, MADURA DIVISION—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

MUTHIRULA MUDALI AND OTHERS—

CLAIMANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), s. 54—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908); O. XLI, rr. 22, 33, applicability of, to land acquisition cases—Appeal against part of decree—Memo. of objections, maintainability of, against other parts covered by decree but not subject of appeal.

Under Order XLI, rule 22 of the Civil Procedure Code, a memorandum of objections may be filed against a decree as a whole or against a part of it which may not be the subject-matter of the appeal. [p. 1004, col. 2; p. 1005, col. 1.]

National Society for the Distribution of Electricity by Secondary Generators v. Gibbs, (1900) 2 Ch. 280; 69 L. J. Ch. 457; 52 L. T. 443; 48 W. R. 499; 16 T. L. R. 348; 17 R. P. C. 303, considered.

Where the Collector preferred an appeal against the valuation of some of the plots in a land acquisition case fixed by the District Judge:

Held, that it was competent to the claimant to file a memorandum of objections in respect of other plots which were covered by the petition, though not the subject of appeal. [p. 1004, col. 1.]

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act makes no departure from the ordinary rule of the Civil Procedure Code which allows a party to appeal not only against the whole decree but also against parts of it. [p. 1005, col. 1.]

A memorandum of objections need not be confined to the subject-matter of the appeal. [p. 1005, col. 1.]

What the appellant objects to is not to be the criterion, but the question in each case must be whether the respondent's rights have in any way been imperilled by the action taken by the appellant. [p. 1005, col. 1.]

Appeals against the decrees of the District Court, Madura, in Original Petitions Nos. 622, 624, 625 and 627 of 1916 respectively.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Mr. V. Ramesam (Government Pleader), for the Appellant.—The memorandum of objections is unsustainable. It relates to plots of lands which are not the subject-matter of appeal and the respondent is not entitled to be heard with reference to them. The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code with regard to cross-objections should not be followed in appeals under the Land Acquisition Act. The language of section 54 of the latter enactment that "an appeal shall lie from any part of the award," indicates that the decree under appeal is that part of it to which the appellant has taken objection, and that is the decree appealed against within the meaning of the section.

Mr. A. Sambamurthy Ayyar (with him Messrs. C. V. Ananthakrishna Ayyar, Subbaraya Ayyar, S. Subramania Ayyar and W. Kothandaramiah), for the Respondents.—The provisions of Order XLI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code, are applicable to appeals under section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act. A memorandum of objections could be filed against any part of the decree, whether the subject matter of appeal or not. Section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act makes no departure from the ordinary rule. The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code are not expressly excepted.

JUDGMENT.

ABDUR RAHIM, J.—These appeals in my opinion must fail. Objection is taken to the valuation of the District Judge in respect of plots Nos. 611F, 611G, 383, A2. The District Judge has awarded Rs. 1,143 per acre for all these plots. Mr. Ramesam contends that these are back lands and that, therefore, they ought not to be valued at the same rate as the lands with frontage. But I think the District Judge is right in holding that the purchase by the Madura Mills Company in 1915 of lands similarly situated furnishes a good index of the proper market price. We have considered the question carefully and are not prepared to dissent from the District Judge's estimate.

The appeals are dismissed with costs. The time for payment will be three months from this date.

A preliminary objection has been taken with reference to the memoranda of objections. The memoranda of objections relate not merely to the plots covered by the appeals but also to other plots, though all the plots to which the memoranda of objections relate are the subject of the same petition to which the appeals relate. I should take it that each petition forms a separate case in the land acquisition proceedings and the award on each petition is a separate decree. Section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act incorporates by reference the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to appeals from original decrees. Order XLI, rule 22 (1), of the Civil Procedure Code provides for memorandum of objections in these words: "Any respondent, though he may not have appealed from any part of the decree, may not only support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below, but take any cross-objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed such objection in the Appellate Court within one month from the date of service on him or his Pleader of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal, or within such further time as the Appellate Court may see fit to allow." The section is expressed in very general language, but after having heard the matter fully discussed I have little doubt that a memorandum of objections may be filed against the decree as a whole or against a part of it which may not be the subject-matter of the appeal. One of the strongest cases that have been brought to our notice is that reported in Kamat v. Kamat (1), the judgment of Sargent, C. J. There the appeal was with respect to costs disallowed by the lower Court, and the memorandum of objections related to the decree on the merits and it was held that such cross-objections could lie. There is also a Full Bench ruling of this Court in Munisami Mudaly v. Abbu Reddy (2). There by a memorandum of objections a question which affected a co-respondent to the appeal was allowed to be raised. Our attention has also been drawn to a judgment of the Bombay High Court, Raghunathdas v. Secretary of State (3). The case there arose out of a matter under the City of Bombay Improvement Act. The appeal was with reference to a certain percentage allowed for water cess while the memorandum of objections raised a question as regards the allowance for vacancies, and it was held that such a memorandum of objections was valid. Mr. Ramesam, while conceding that under the Civil Procedure Code it is not necessary that the memorandum of objections should be only with reference to that part of the decree which is the subject-matter of the appeal, argues that section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act makes a difference so far as appeals in land acquisition cases are concerned. He lays stress on the provision of that section "an appeal shall lie to the High Court from the award or from any part of the award of the Court in any proceedings under this Act," and argues that the Legislature in expressly saying that an appeal shall lie from any part of the award wanted to imply that the decree under appeal must be taken to be that part of it to which objection was taken by the appellant. He then argues that the memorandum of objection must be confined to the subject-matter of the appeal itself, as that is the decree that is appealed against within the meaning of section 54. But what section 54 enacts is in no way different from the ordinary provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, because an appeal may be filed against the entire decree or any part of it. Once an appeal is filed, a memorandum of objections may be filed by the respondent with reference to any portion of the decree to which he objects. I do not think, therefore, that section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act makes any difference in the law and I hold that the respondents are entitled to press their memorandum of objections.

DEPUTY COLLECTOR, MADURA V. MUTHIRULA MUDALI.

On the merits, I am satisfied that the District Judge has given a perfectly fair price for the plots referred to in the memorandum of objections and I dismiss them with costs.

SESHAGIRI Aiyar, J.—I agree. On the merits, although there is this that must be said in favour of Mr. Ramesam's contention that the frontage should be differently valued from the back portion, having regard to the fact that the valuation on which the District Judge has relied was given a year before the proclamation, I agree with my learned brother in holding that the value fixed by the District Judge does not err on the side of giving the claimants too much and that the appeals must be dismissed.

On the question of the memorandum of objections, my mind had been vacillating a good deal during the course of the argument and, after having had the matter fully discussed, I have also come to the conclusion that the respondents are entitled to be heard. There is a great deal to be said in favour of the view taken by

(1) 8 B. 368; 8 Ind. Jur. 687; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 619.

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 323; 38 M. 705; 27 M. L. J. 740; (1915) M. W. N. 45.

(3) 29 B. 514; 7 Bom. L. R. 569.

DOMA v. DAYARAM.

Lindley, M. R., in National Society for the Distribution of Electricity by Secondary Generators v. Gibbs (4). The learned Lord Justice points out that if a cross notice is given in respect of a matter which is not the subject-matter of the appeal, ordinarily a party should not be heard about it. But the language of the Civil Procedure Code is very wide. Reading Order XLI, rule 22, and rule 33 of the same Order together, it looks as if the Legislature intended to give a party every means of remedying the injustice which has been done to him by the action of the lower Courts. It is arguable that as the inherent powers vested in the Court by rule 33 are wide enough to cover all cases of injustice, rule 22 should be confined to cases where the objection relates to the subject-matter in appeal; but it is doubtful whether the party's right of invoking the aid of the Court was intended to be less extensive than the right of the Court to move suo motu, having regard to the language of rule 22. In my opinion, it is safe to say that wherever the right of a respondent has been imperilled by the appellant preferring an appeal, it is apparently the intention of the Legislature that every facility should be given to him to get his rights adjusted by filing a memorandum of objections. The decision to which my learned brother referred in Kamat v. Kamat (1) is a very strong illustration of this view. The decision in Munisami Mudaly v. Abbu Reddy (2) also seems to point to the fact that what the appellant objects to is not to be the criterion, but the question in each case must be whether the respondent's rights have in any way been imperilled by the action taken by the appellant. As regards section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act to which the learned Government Pleader drew our attention, I have little hesitation in holding that it makes no departure from the ordinary rule of the Civil Procedure Code, which allows a party to appeal not only against the whole decree but also against parts of it. For these reasons I agree that the memorandum of objections should be disposed of on the merits.

(4) (1900) 2 Ch. 280; 69 L. J. Ch. 457; 82 L. T. 443; 48 W. R. 499; 16 T. L. R. 348; 17 R. P. C. 303.

On the merits, I agree that the memorandum of objections must be dismissed.

M. C. P.

Appeals and Memo. of Objections dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 229 of 1914.

February 21, 1916.

Present:—Sir Henry Drake-Brockman, Kt., J. C.

DOMA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

APPLICANTS

versus

DAYARAM.—PLAINTIFF—NON-APPLICANT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. XXIII, rule 1 (2)—Withdrawal of suit, leave for, grant of, for reasons not covered by sub-rule (2)—Revision—High Court, whether can interfere—Misapplication of law—Jurisdiction, illegal exercise of.

The main object of sub-rule 2, rule 1, Order XXIII of the Civil Procedure Code, is to prevent a defect of justice on technical grounds. Where no formal defect necessitating failure of the suit is shown to exist, there must still be a defect which has the effect of shutting out a fair trial on the merits and arises out of some error made in good faith by the plaintiff which can only be effectively set right by a trial de novo. [p. 1006, col. 2.]

The High Court has power to interfere in revision in a case where withdrawal of a suit has been allowed without reasons which can properly be regarded as covered by Order XXIII, rule 1, sub-rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 1006, col. 2.]

Hira Lal Mitra v. Uday Chandra Dey, 14 Ind. Cas. 33; 16 C. W. N. 1027; 16 C. L. J. 103; and Bai Kashibai v. Shidappa Anapa Pujari, 21 Ind. Cas. 24; 37 B. 68; 15 Bom. L. R. 823, followed.

To apply a provision of law to a case to which it has no application is to act without jurisdiction or at any rate to act illegally in the exercise of jurisdiction within the meaning of section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 1006, col. 2.]

Brajabala Devi v. Gurudas Mundle, 33 C. 487 3 C. L. J. 293, followed.

Revision of the order, dated the 8th July 1917, passed by the District Judge, Bhandara, in Civil Appeal No. 28 of 1914.

Mr. V. R. Pandit, R. B., for the Applicants.

Mr. Atmaram Bhagwant, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—The plaintiff in the suit out of which this application for revision arises sued several defendants, three of whom are the applicants to this Court, to obtain possession of a plot of land between the premises of the parties. The plot in dispute is marked E F G H I in the plan annexed to the plaint. The defence set up was that the plaintiff had no right whatever over the plot and after a trial in which both sides examined a number of witnesses the trial Judge gave a decree, the effect of which was to declare the plaintiff entitled to retain possession of a narrow strip on the west side of the said plot, the boundary being held to be a fencing which was admittedly erected by the defendants.

DOMA V. DAYARAM,

The plaintiff appealed re-stating his claim to the plot, while the defendants preferred cross-objection urging that the trial Judge should have dismissed his claim entirely seeing that in his plaint he alleged himself to be in possession right up to the fencing.

The plaintiff sought leave to withdraw his suit with liberty to institute a fresh one in respect of the subject-matter. He advanced two reasons, viz.—

(1) That since his suit was instituted the premises in the defendants' occupation had been held in another litigation to belong to one Gulab Sao.

(2) That he had failed to claim a relief by way of declaration that the defendants had no right of way over the southern half of the plot to the exit at the southern end.

The defendants objected that the grounds stated were insufficient and that since the termination of the other suit referred to, Gulab Sao had given them the premises they occupied. The District Judge, however, allowed the application for a single reason which he stated baldly as follows:—

"His suit is likely to fail owing to the plaint being defective in not claiming certain reliefs."

This Court is asked to interfere on the ground that sub-rule (2), rule 1, Order XXIII, First Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code, has no application to the facts. For the plaintiff it is urged that even if the District Judge erred in thinking the sub-rule applicable, this Court cannot interfere, the error being one of law only; also that the new suit was launched in August 1914 and should not be interrupted after being so long in progress.

There is recent authority for interference in a case where withdrawal has been allowed without reasons which can properly be regarded as covered by the provisions cited. See Hira Lal Mitra v. Uday Chandra Dey (1) and Bai Kashibai v. Shidappa Anapa Pujari (2). In both these cases it was held that the circumstances did not come within the scope of the sub-rule 1, and Brayabala Devi v. Gurudas Mundle (3) is authority for the view that to apply a provision of law to a case to which it has no application is to act without jurisdiction or at any rate to act illegally in the exercise of jurisdiction. In the present case it seems to me perfectly clear that there was no merely formal defect in the plaint, much less one which necessitated failure of the suit. The omission of Gulab Sao as a party could not lead to dismissal of the suit for possession as against the defendants who did not claim under Gulab Sao. As for the omission of the particular relief said before the District Judge to have been overlooked, it is not intelligible how the plaintiff could claim to prevent the defendants using the southern part of the plot unless he could make good his own claim to possess that area. No sort of basis for the new claim other than title to the plot was suggested to the District Judge or is shown here.

The main object of the sub-rule under consideration was explained in Sitarum v. Ohhotkai (4) as being to prevent a defect of justice on technical grounds. When no formal defect necessitating failure of a suit is shown to exist, there must still be a defect which has the effect of shutting out a fair trial on the merits and arises out of some error made in good faith by the plaintiff which can only be effectively set right by a trial de novo.

In the present case the only effect of the permission given will be to afford the plaintiff a fresh opportunity of making good the title he failed to establish to the satisfaction of the trial Judge. He should not in such circumstances be allowed to

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 33; 16 C. W. N. 1027; 16 C. L. J. 103.

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 24; 37 B. 682; 15 Bom. L. R. 823.

(3) 33 C. 487; 3 C. L. J. 293.

(4) 3 Ind. Cas. 61; 5 N. L. R. 88.

MANGAL v. INDAR KUAR.

put the defendants to the trouble and annoyance of a fresh suit.

The fact that the new suit was launched in August 1914 seems to me no sufficient reason for declining to interfere. The applicants moved this Court on the 28th of that month; the District Judge's order complained of having been passed on the 8th July preceding and copy of that order having been obtained on the 18th idem., greater promptitude could hardly be looked for.

In a very recent case cited at the Bar, Bansi Singh v. Kishun Lal Thakur (5), it seems to have been held that the Court is powerless to interfere with an order of the kind in question, inasmuch as it does not decide any case. This view involves placing a very limited meaning upon the word "case", which I held in Mahadeo v. Nago (6) should be understood in its widest and most ordinary sense.

The order permitting withdrawal with liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter is hereby set aside. The District Judge will now proceed to dispose of the appeal and the cross-objections. The plaintiff will pay the costs of this application. I allow Rs. 15 as Counsel's fee in this Court.

Order set aside

(5) 26 Ind. Cas. 203; 41 C. 632.

(6) 12 Ind. Cas. 357; 7 N. L. R. 130.

OUDEH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 29-30 OF 1916.

January 8, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Stuart, A. J. C., and Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

MANGAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

Rani INDAR KUAR—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151,
O. XLI, r. 27—Execution of deed—Additional evidence, admission of—Substantial cause—Appellate Court, power of.

In a suit the plaintiffs had some reason to suppose that the execution of the deeds on which the suit was based would not be seriously challenged. But it was seriously challenged. The plaintiffs then produced formal evidence of the execution of the deeds, by examining a witness to prove the signature of one of the attesting witnesses to the deeds. The trial Court, however, disbelieved this witness and dismissed the suit.

Held, that under these circumstances there was substantial cause to justify the Appellate Court under section 151 and Order XLI, rule 27, Civil Procedure Code, in permitting the plaintiffs to produce additional evidence as to the execution of the deeds. [p. 1008, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Sitapur, Tahsil Biswan, dated the 11th March 1916.

Mr. St George Jackson, Babus Ram Ohandra and Chhail Bihari Lal, for the Appellants.

Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra and Pandit Harkaran Nath Misra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Appeals Nos. 29 and 30 of 1916 relate to suits instituted on the basis of two mortgage-deeds which are alleged to have been executed on the 13th February 1902 by Raja Karan Singh. The suits have been brought against Rani Indar Kuar, the mother of Raja Karan Singh, and Rani Khem Kuar, the widow of Raja Karan Singh. The alleged mortgages purport to transfer property which, as found by the learned Subordinate Judge, belonged to Rani Indar Kuar but which she permitted to be recorded first in the name of her husband, Raja Dip Singh, and then in the name of her son, Raja Karan Singh, both of whom managed it in their own right. The learned Subordinate Judge found that in these circumstances the mortgagees could claim the benefit of section 41, Act IV of 1882, and proceed against the property transferred. But as he found that the two deeds of mortgage in question had not been proved to have been executed by Raja Karan Singh, he dismissed the suits. The position with regard to the execution of these two deeds of mortgage is as follows:—The deeds were registered. The Sub-Registrar's endorsement shows that Raja Karan Singh whom he knew personally admitted execution of these deeds in his presence. In a deed of agreement made between Rani Indar Kuar and Rani Khem Kuar it is stated that

MANGAL V. INDAR KUAR.

Rani Indar Kuar will be responsible for the payment of the amount due on these two deeds. In these circumstances the plaintiffs-appellants had some reason to suppose that the execution of the deeds in question would not be seriously challenged. But it was seriously challenged. Sufficient evidence was produced in the lower Court to prove the signature of one of the attesting witnesses to both deeds. The appellants considered it sufficient to prove the execution of the deeds by Raja Karan Singh through the production of a certain witness Sheo Ratan Lal. They were not in a position to know the view that the learned Subordinate Judge had taken as to the evidence of this witness. The learned Subordinate Judge found that this witness was an unreliable person and thus that there was not sufficient evidence of the execution of the deeds in question by Raja Karan Singh, and dismissed the suits. As this decision must necessarily have taken the appellants by surprise, for they had no reason to suppose that the evidence of the execution of these deeds need be anything but formal, we consider that they have had some grievance in not being given an opportunity to prove the execution of the deeds by other evidence. Under the provisions of Order XLI, rule 27, we can give permission to the appellants to produce other evidence for substantial cause, and we think that there is a substantial cause in this case which would justify us in permitting them to produce such additional evidence. We consider that apart from the provisions of Order XLI, rule 27, we have authority to pass this order under the provisions of section 151, Act V of 1908, as we consider our order necessary for the ends of justice. We, therefore, send back the case with the following additional issues:—

1. Did Raja Karan Singh sign the mortgage-deeds in suit?

2. Did he admit having signed and executed the said deeds before the Sub-Registrar at the time of registration?

Both sides will be permitted to produce any evidence that they may wish to produce upon these remitted issues. The learned Subordinate Judge's successor will record such evidence as may be produced and decide these remitted issues and return the evidence certified with his findings on or before the 8th March 1918. Ten days will then be allowed for objections.

Issues remitted.

END OF VOLUME XLVIII.

GENERAL INDEX

VOLUME XLVIII—1918.

— : O : O : O : —

Acts—General.

- Act 1839—XXXII. See INTEREST ACT.
 — 1850—XXI. See CASTE, DISABILITIES REMOVAL ACT.
 — 1856—XV. See HINDU WIDOW'S REMARRIAGE ACT.
 — 1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.
 — 1863—XX. See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS ACT.
 — 1870—VII. See COURT FEES ACT.
 — 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
 — 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
 — 1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
 — 1877—XV. See LIMITATION ACT.
 — 1878—XI. See ARMS ACT.
 — 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.
 — 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.
 — 1882—II. See TRUSTS ACT.
 — 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
 — 1882—V. See EASEMENTS ACT.
 — 1882—VI. See COMPANIES ACT.
 — 1882—XIV. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
 — 1884—IV. See EXPLOSIVES ACT.
 — 1886—II. See INCOME TAX ACT.
 — 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSES COURTS ACT.
 — 1889—VII. See SUCCESSION CERTIFICATE ACT.
 — 1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT.
 — 1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT.
 — 1894—I. See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
 — 1895—XV. See CROWN GRANTS ACT.
 — 1897—X. See GENERAL CLAUSES ACT.
 — 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
 — 1899—II. See STAMP ACT.
 — 1899—IX. See ARBITRATION ACT.
 — 1903—XV. See EXTRADITION ACT.
 — 1907—III. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
 — 1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
 — 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
 — 1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.
 — 1911—II. See PATENTS AND DESIGNS ACT.
 — 1911—III. See CRIMINAL TRIBES ACT.
 — 1913—VI. See MUSSALMAN WAQF VALIDATING ACT.
 — 1915—IV. See DEFENCE OF INDIA ACT.
 — 1916—V. See INCOME TAX (AMENDMENT) ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bengal.

- 1873—VI. See BENGAL VILLAGE CHAUKIDARI ACT.
 — 1885—VIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
 — 1899—III. See CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bombay.

- Act 1874—III. See BOMBAY HEREDITARY OFFICES ACT.
 — 1876—X. See BOMBAY REVENUE JURISDICTION ACT.
 — 1888—III. See CITY OF BOMBAY MUNICIPAL ACT.
 — 1898—IV. See CITY OF BOMBAY IMPROVEMENTS ACT.

Acts—(Local)—C. P.

- 1881—XVIII. See C. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
 — 1893—XI. See C. P. TENANCY ACT.
 — 1903—XVI. See C. P. MUNICIPAL ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Madras.

- 1864—II. See MADRAS REVENUE RECOVERY ACT.
 — 1865—VIII. See MADRAS RENT RECOVERY ACT.
 — 1884—IV. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT.
 — 1896—IV. See MADRAS MARRIAGE ACT.
 — 1900—I. See MALABAR COMPENSATION FOR TENANTS' IMPROVEMENTS ACT.
 — 1908—I. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Punjab.

- 1887—XVI. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.
 — 1887—XVII. See PUNJAB LAND REVENUE ACT.
 — 1913—I. See PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT.

Acts—(Local)—U. P.

- 1869—I. See OUDH ESTATES ACT.
 — 1876—XVIII. See OUDH LAWS ACT.
 — 1886—XXII. See OUDH RENT ACT.
 — 1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.
 — 1910—III. See OUDH ESTATES (AMENDMENT) ACT.

Statutes.

- 1915—(5 & 6 GEO. V, C. 61), See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT.

Action for money had and received, scope and extent of.

Per Oldfield, J.—The action for money had and received is still to be regarded, as it was originally, as based on an implied or fictional promise. The authorities, however, negative the possibility of such a promise being deduced from the exquum et bonum, as it may appeal to the sympathy of the Court in the particular case or from circumstances in which the defendant having no privity with the plaintiff, when the money was received, need not be supposed to have given and had no duty to give any promise.

Action for money had and received—concl'd.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—While privity of contract between the parties is not necessary to sustain an action for money had and received, there must be what might be called some privity of a legally recognizable nature; such as some knowledge of particular facts in the man who received the money and some mistake or ignorance of fact on the part of the man who paid the money, or some relation of trust or confidence between the person who received the money and the person claiming the money or a portion thereof, on which the Court could fasten as creating the relation of principal and agent (though by fiction) between the plaintiff and the defendant.

A co-sharer may, by a stretch of language, be treated as standing in a position of confidence towards his co-sharers, but a person who ignorantly purchases from a co-sharer the whole of the claim of all the co-sharers cannot be said to be in such a position. M RAMASAMI NAIDU v. MUTHUSAMIA PILLAI, 35 M. L. J. 581; 41 M. 923; (1918), M. W. N. 746

756

Administration of estate—Executor, duty of.

B. by her Will appointed G., H., L. and T. her executors. It was also provided that S. would be able to act as executor when he attained majority. G., H. and L. obtained Probate in 1882 and went on administering the estate until 1888, when T. was appointed executor. T. died in 1908. There was a legacy in favour of S. who presented an application for Probate long after the death of the testatrix:

Held, that it was not necessary or proper to grant Probate 30 years after the death of the testatrix in order that S. might get the property bequeathed to him, when the genuineness of the Will and the right of the parties under the Will had been established by the previous grant of Probate.

The duty of an executor is to administer the estate of the deceased only so far and so long as to enable him to carry out the terms of the Will of which he is executor. After the property has ceased to be the estate of the deceased and has become the property of the residuary legatee under the Will, the executor as such has no authority to manage the estate on his behalf. C SANKAR NATH MUKHERJI v. BIDDUTLATA DEBI, 28 C. L. J. 271-295

Administration suit, decree in, directing administration under supervision of Court—Court, power of, to grant allowances to beneficiaries pending administration—Discretion, exercise of.

Where the administration of an estate is being carried on under the supervision of a Court, that Court has power, in a proper case, to grant an allowance, pending the administration, to any of the parties who will eventually be entitled to share in the property. That power ought, however, to be exercised with proper discretion and having regard to the claims that are likely to be made upon the estate, and the Court ought not to grant to any of the beneficiaries properties by way of an allowance unless it is satisfied that the assets will be sufficient to satisfy the creditors. PAT FAZLUR RAHMAN v. KALI MUZAFFAR

533

Administrative orders—High Court—Revision, interference in.

The High Court has no appellate or revisional authority over administrative orders of a District Magistrate. M ARUNACHALAM PILLAI v. PONNUSWAMI PILLAI, 35 M. L. J. 454; 8 L. W. 422; 24 M. L. T. 396; (1918) M. W. N. 824; 20 C. L. J. 78

878

Admissions of parties, effect of.

The Courts should not lightly ignore admissions made by parties to proceedings M KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI v. MANNARGHAT RAMANUNNI, 35 M. L. J. 212; (1918) M. W. N. 666

925

Adverse possession between co-heirs—Co-heir remaining in exclusive possession of estate to knowledge of others—Possession, whether adverse

The plaintiff claimed her share of the properties left by her father, who died 37 years before the date of the institution of the suit, from her brother who had been in exclusive possession of the same to the knowledge of the plaintiff since the death of their father:

Held, that the possession of the brother was adverse to the plaintiff, even though it was not shown that there was any demand made by the plaintiff which was refused by the brother. C CHAND. BIBI v. LAL MOHAMAD

692

Mortgagor and mortgagee—Death of mortgagor—Mortgagee claiming to succeed as heir against the proprietary body—Mutation in favour of mortgagee, effect of.

Where on the death of a mortgagor without issue and without leaving any reversioner related to him in a definite degree of relationship, the mortgagee claimed to succeed to the land as heir of the mortgagor as against the proprietary body of the village and mutation was effected in his favour:

Held, that the possession of the mortgagee became adverse to the proprietary body of the village from the date of the mutation. P RAM SINGH v. BASTI, 89 P. W. R. 1918

447

Possession of widow against will of sons, whether adverse.

The possession of a small residential house by a widow, against the will of her sons in exercise of her right of residence, cannot be said to be adverse to the sons. P CHUEAR BAI v. RAMA NAND, 113 P. W. R. 1918

114

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s.

167—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Ejectment of tenant, decree for, by Revenue Court—Declaration, suit for, in Civil Court, maintainability of.

Where a Revenue Court has exclusive jurisdiction to try a certain question and it tries that question as between the parties, the finding arrived at by it is binding upon the parties and cannot be questioned in a Civil Court.

Defendant brought a suit in the Revenue Court to eject the plaintiff from certain fields on the ground that the latter was a sub-tenant, and obtained a decree. During the pendency of that suit the plaintiff brought a suit in the Civil Court for a declaration that he was a co-owner of the occupancy right with the defendant and was not, therefore, liable to ejectment:

Held, that having regard to the provisions of section 167 of the Agra Tenancy Act the suit in the Civil Court was not maintainable. A KISHORE SINGH v. BAHADUR SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 938

470

Appeal (Civil)—Appellate Court, interference by, on finding of fact—Evidence, weighing of.

By THE DIVISION BENCH.—(Sir Dawson Miller, C. J., and Justice Sir Ali Imam).—A Court of Appeal should not readily disturb the findings of fact arrived at by the trial Judge even if it might be inclined to take a different view from reading the evidence, but if the Appellate Court is satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt on considering the evidence that the findings are erroneous, then it ought to interfere. Or again, if the reasons given by the Judge of the lower Court for arriving at his conclusions are such that they cannot be supported then the Court of Appeal is clearly entitled to disregard those findings and form its own independent judgment of the facts from the evidence and probabilities of the case. PAT UMA SHANKAR PRASAD v. NAGESWARI KOERI, 3 P. L. J. 663 625

Documentary evidence, conflicting—Appellate Court, duty of.

Per Sanderson, C. J.—Where a case has been decided on documentary as well as oral evidence, if the documentary evidence is conflicting, great weight should be given by the Appellate Court to the opinion of the trial Judge who has seen and heard the witnesses.

The Court of Appeal should not allow an appeal unless they are satisfied that the Judge who tried the case was wrong. If they are in doubt at the end of the argument whether the Judge was right or wrong, since the burden of proof is on the appellant and he has not satisfied them that the Judge was wrong, the appeal should be dismissed. The Judge in the Court below may have heard witnesses and if so, the Court of Appeal should be more unwilling to set aside his judgment especially if there was a conflict of evidence, than in a case tried on written evidence, where the witnesses were not before the Judge, because of the opportunity afforded of judging how far the witnesses were worthy of credit. C MARIAM BIBEE v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, 28 C. L. J. 306 561

to Privy Council—Question of fact—Burden of proof

An appellant must realise that by bringing a question of fact, which has been carefully examined by Judges fully conversant with the habits and practices of the country, before the Privy Council he takes a heavy burden upon himself. P C JURAWAN LAL v. BALDEO SINGH, 21 O. C. 104; 5 O. L. J. 410 225

(Second)—Finding of fact not deduced from evidence, whether binding.

A finding of fact, in order to be binding in second appeal, should be one that can be reasonably deduced from the evidence. If it is not such a finding, the High Court has authority to interfere with it. N RAMCHANDRA v. DATTATRAYA 742

Question of law raised for first time, whether can be entertained.

When a question of law is raised for the first time in a Court of last resort, upon the construction of a document or upon facts either admitted or proved beyond controversy, it is not only competent but expedient in the interests of justice to entertain the plea. C SHIB CHANDRA KAR v. DULCKEN, 28 C. L. J. 123 78

Approver, evidence of—Corroboration, whether necessary.

An approver giving his evidence under a promise of pardon cannot be believed unless he is corroborated by independent evidence. P BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR, 31 P. R. 1918 Cr.; 20 Cr. L. J. 65 865

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 8 395

s. 19—Appeal, right of, against order under s. 19 of Arbitration Act—Staying or refusing to stay suit—“After appearance,” meaning of—Stay of suit—Duty of Court—Burden of proof.

An appearance by a defendant for the purpose of making a stay application can be treated as an appearance in the suit.

The expression “after appearance” in section 19 of the Arbitration Act is merely directory, and neglect of this procedure would not invalidate an order of stay made by the Court.

Under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, where there is an agreement to refer, it is prima facie the duty of the Court to stay a suit and the onus is on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by his agreement.

The provision of English Law whereby an arbitrator can be compelled to refer a point of law for the opinion of the Court does not apply in India. Under the Arbitration Act an arbitrator is the sole judge of both questions of fact as well as of law arising under the reference and it is discretionary with him to apply for the Court's opinion on any question of law. S KODUMAL KALUMAL v. VOLKART BROS., 12 S. L. R. 34 434

Arms Act (XI of 1878), ss. 4, 19—“Arms,” what are.

The definition of the expression “arms” as given in the Arms Act is not, and is not intended to be exhaustive, and the true meaning of the term must be arrived at by consideration of the circumstances in each case.

Neither the length, breadth or the form of the blade of a weapon, nor the handle, afford any certain test of its classification as “arms.” Whatever can be used as an instrument of attack or defence and is not an ordinary implement for domestic purposes falls within the purview of the Act. P EMPEROR v. RALLA SINGH, 32 P. R. 19.8 Cr.; 20 Cr. L. J. 11 486

s. 19 486
s. 25 489

Attestation of document, proof of—
Evidence, conflicting, effect of—Court, discretion of.

Where there is one class of evidence showing that a document was properly attested and another class of evidence suggesting that it was not so, it is open to the Court on a consideration of the probabilities of the case to reject the one and accept the other. The fate of a document is not necessarily at the mercy of attesting witnesses. The mere fact that they repudiate their signatures or make statements suggesting that they attested at the instance of persons other than the executant or in his absence, does not invalidate the document, if it can be proved by evidence of a reliable character that they have given false testimony. O MAHARAJ LAL BIHARI v. ANJUMAN-UN-NISA, 5 O. L. J. 667 538

Benami transaction Possession or title— deed not with purchaser—Presumption.

Where from the circumstances surrounding a sale it is probable that the transaction is a benami one,

Benami transaction—concl'd.

the probability becomes a certainty when it is found that the ostensible purchaser is neither in possession of the property nor of the sale-deed. PAT BISHAN DAYAL SINGH v JAISAI KUER, (1918) PAT. 323 746

Test for determining nature of transaction.

Per Mukerji, J.—Where the question arises, whether the ostensible purchaser is also the real purchaser, the familiar test to apply is what is the source of the purchase-money. In a case of gift, however, when it is alleged that the transaction was fictitious, this test fails, and the Court must rely upon other aspects of the matter, namely, the surrounding circumstance contemporaneous with the gift and the subsequent conduct of the parties concerned.

The burden lies on the appellant to satisfy the Court that the finding of the trial Court which he assails is not supported by the evidence on the record. C MARIAM BIBER v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, 28 C. L. J. 306 561

Bengal Land Law—Ghatwali tenure—Rights of ghatwali and his family over property subject to tenure, nature of.

In the Zemindari of Kharakpur in Bengal the ghatwali tenure is ordinarily hereditary, the estate descending to such male member of the family as the Zemindar approves as competent, and it is the right of the family, so long as they have male members competent to perform the duties, to have one or more of them appointed ghatwals, but the incidents of the tenure are not such as to give the family any rights over the property while it is in the hands of the ghatwal.

Where the Zemindar on being released from the performance of ghatwali duties gave a pattah to four ghatwals, members of a family, granting the lands (which were till then subject to the ghatwali tenure) in perpetuity at an annual fixed jama:

Held, that the members of the family other than the four grantees took no beneficiary interest in the lands granted. P C DURG PRASAD SINGH v. TREBINI SINGH, 24 M. L. T. 407; 26 C. L. J. 508; 9 L. W. 60 527

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), ss. 29, 52—Area of holding increased on measurement—Agreement to pay rent at rate considerably in excess of original rate, whether enforceable.

The area of a holding for which the rent payable was Rs. 10-5-0 was described in the dakhilas (rent receipts) given to the tenant and in the papers kept by the landlord as 7½ bighas. On a fresh survey made by the landlord the area was found to be 9½ bighas: whereupon the tenant agreed to pay Rs. 16-14-0 as rent per annum for the holding as found by the measurement:

Held, that as the landlord could not point to any particular piece of land as being an excess area for which the tenant agreed to pay him so much rent in excess, the agreement of the tenant to pay Rs. 16-14-0 for the 9½ bighas found on measurement was unenforceable under section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, since by it the original rate of rent per bigha was increased considerably in excess of the authorised increase of 2 annas in the rupee. C SONAULLA SARDAR v. BHAGABATI DEBYA CHOWDHURANI, 28 C. L. J. 142 35

Bengal Tenancy Act—concl'd.

s. 52

35

ss. 61, 62—Deposit of rent made by tenant—Tenant not entitled to make deposit—Deposit, whether operates as tender—Landlord, remedy of.

The receipt given by a Court on accepting a deposit under section 62 of the Bengal Tenancy Act cannot operate as a valid acquittance unless the tenant is entitled under section 61 of the Act to make the deposit.

If the tenant deposits his rent without first making a tender or without any of the other conditions existing which makes section 61 applicable, the landlord's only remedy is to sue for rent ignoring the deposit, which cannot even be treated as a tender of rent so as to suspend the running of interest. C JADUPATI CHATTERJEE v. KAHETRA NATH 445

s. 65

794

s. 106, suit under—Court-fee payable—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), Sch. II, Art. 17, cl. 3—Declaratory suit.

A suit instituted under the provisions of section 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is in fact a suit for a declaration that the Record of Rights is wrong. Therefore, such a suit, being one for a declaratory decree within the meaning of Article 17, clause 3 of Schedule II of the Court Fees Act, is not chargeable with an ad valorem Court-fee even where it is transferred to the Civil Court for the purpose of trial. C SAILAJA NATH ROY CHAUDHURY v. CHANDI CHARAN LAHA, 28 C. L. J. 301 552

s. 143A

726

s. 161 (a)—Incumbrance, meaning of—Interest of purchaser of portion of tenancy, whether incumbrance.

The interest of the purchaser of a portion of a tenancy is not an incumbrance within the meaning of section 161 (a) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, which the purchaser of the tenancy in execution of a rent decree would have to annul under section 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. An incumbrance implies a limitation of the rights of the tenant, and not a total extinction of them. C FAZARALI MAHALDAR v. POROO MIAN, 28 C. L. J. 266 300

s. 170, cl. (3)—Purchaser at rent sale, whether can deposit money for release of holding attached in execution of subsequent rent-decree against original tenant—Benamidar of original tenant, right of, to make deposit.

A purchaser at a sale in execution of a rent-decree, who is not a party to a subsequent decree for rent obtained by the landlord against the original tenant, is not entitled under section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to deposit the decretal amount due under the latter decree, inasmuch as his interest is not voidable at the sale in execution of the decree against the original tenant.

If such a purchaser is a benamidar of the original tenant, he has got no interest at all in the holding voidable or otherwise, and, therefore, has no right, under section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to make the deposit. C JOGENDRA NATH MALLIK v. SHRI NARAYAN MUKERJEE 965

Bengal Village Chaukidari Act (VI B. C. of 1870), s. 1, applicability of—Services required, nature of—Evidence.

Each and every case that comes before the Courts in which there may be definite and conclusive evidence to satisfy the Court as to what was the nature of the services required from the service tenure-holder cannot be held to be governed by section 1 of the Bengal Village Chaukidari Act. C SATS CHANDRA BANDOPADHYA v NATABAR DOME, 28 O. L. J. 281

s. 51

Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (III Bom. of 1874), ss. 4, 18—Bombay Revenue

Jurisdiction Act (X Bom. of 1876), s. 4 (a):—Mahar Vatan, existence of, question as to, determination of—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Procedure.

Plaintiffs, villagers, brought a suit for an injunction to prevent the skins of their dead animals being taken by the defendants, who were village Mahars claiming the right as Vatan-dars. The suit was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that it was not cognizable by a Civil Court under section 18 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act and section 4 (a) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act:

Held, (1) that the question whether there was or was not a Mahar Vatan was within the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts:

(2) that prima facie the skins belonged to the owners of the dead animals and that the plaintiffs were entitled to their injunction unless the Mahars could succeed in showing that there was an hereditary office, in which case the parties would have to be referred for the settlement of their disputes to the Collector under section 18 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act. B SAVLA TUKARAM MALI v. SANTYA PARSRA MAHAR, 20 Bom. L. R. 993

ss. 10, 11A

s. 18

Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X Bom. of 1876), s. 4 (a) Burden of proof

Calcutta Municipal Act (III B. C. of 1899), Sec. V, r. 2—Nomination paper, form of—Description of candidate, omission of, effect of—Proposer, whether can sign as approver—Alternative nomination papers, validity of.

What is contemplated by rule 2 of Schedule V of the Calcutta Municipal Act is that a nomination paper should be self-contained and complete and that the nomination paper which is presented by the candidate must contain all the matters which are specified in the rule, one of them being the description of the candidate.

It is clear from the wording of clause (d) of the rule that if a person signs the nomination paper of a candidate, either as proposer or seconder, he cannot also sign it as an approver.

The name of a firm which is not the signature of an individual voter is not a good signature of an approver under clause (d) of the rule.

The intention of the rule is that a nomination paper in order to be valid should, among other matters, contain the name of the candidate, and the names of the proposer and seconder, and then the names of the approvers.

Calcutta Municipal Act—concl'd.

Per Woodroffe, J.—Under rule 2 of Schedule V of the Calcutta Municipal Act alternative nomination papers may be sent to the Chairman, so that if one is held, either in whole or in part, to be invalid, the other may be used. In such case, however, each nomination paper should be complete in itself.

A candidate may send in a nomination paper with names of more than 18 voters as mentioned in the rule, in order to meet the case of possible objections to any of the voters whose names appear upon the paper. In such case, more than one nomination paper may be used but the papers must be connected by placing on each paper the name, description and address of the candidate as appearing in the first paper. C NARENDRA NATH MITTER v. RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR, 22 O. W. N. 943; 23 C. L. J. 289

Sch. V, r. 2 (a)—Rai Bahadur, whether sufficient description of candidate

Quære.—Whether the addition of the words 'Rai Bahadur' to the appellant's name was a sufficient description of the appellant within the meaning of Schedule V, rule 2 (a) of the Calcutta Municipal Act. C MANI LAL NAHAR v. MOWDAD RAHAMAN, 22 O. W. N. 951

Caste Disabilities Removal Act (XXI of 1850), effect of Cause of action—Mortgage—Puisne mortgagee, suit by, for possession

C. P. Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881), ss. 64, 65, 103, 116—Sale of malik makbuza plot for arrears of revenue payable to malguzar, effect of—Sale, whether free from incumbrances

Defendant purchased a malik makbuza plot in execution of a decree obtained by the malguzar for arrears of revenue payable in respect of the plot. The plaintiff thereupon sued to enforce his mortgage which comprised the malik makbuza plot. The defendant urged that the revenue payable under the sub-settlement being, under section 65 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, the first charge on the plot, the plaintiff's mortgage could not be enforced against him as the sale was free from incumbrances:

Held, (1) that as the malguzar did not obtain a sale decree nor did he join the plaintiff as a party to the suit for the arrears of revenue, the defendant did not acquire a title free from all encumbrances;

(2) that the plaintiff was, however, bound to redeem the defendant's charge, before he could enforce his mortgage by sale of the plot.

Section 108 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act applies only when a sale under the provisions of the Land Revenue Act takes place for the recovery of arrears payable directly to Government. It does not apply to sales for the recovery of arrears of revenue payable to the malguzar in respect of a malik makbuza plot, as section 64 makes it clear that land revenue in respect of a malik makbuza plot is paid not directly to Government but through the malguzar. N GUNESH PRASAD v. GHASITILAL

s. 69, applicability of—Settlement record, entry in, suit for correction of—Limitation applicable.

Section 63 of the C. P. Land Revenue Act relates to disputes as to whether or not land admittedly belonging to one particular proprietor is sir land or not. It has no application whatever to disputes as to whether A or B is the proprietor of a plot of land.

C. P. Land Revenue Act—concl'd.

The special rule of limitation laid down in section 69 (4) of the C. P. Land Revenue Act has, therefore, no application whatever to a suit brought for the correction of a settlement entry in which the defendant has been recorded as a proprietor instead of as an occupancy tenant of sir land. N HAZARILAL MOTILAL v. SHYANIBABU 932

ss. 108, 116 92

C. P. Municipal Act (XVI of 1903),

s. 66—Application for permission to build—Delay in passing orders, effect of.

Under section 66 (3) of the C. P. Municipal Act, delay in passing orders on a valid notice given under section 66 (1) of the Act may, if followed by a failure to reply to a written reminder, lead to a conclusion that the proposed building has been absolutely sanctioned. N MOHAMAD YACUB v. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR, 20 Cr. L. J. 89 889

s. 86—Notice to erect latrine, contents of—Directions, whether should be given—Committee, duty of.

It is clear from the language used in sub-section (1) of section 86 of the C. P. Municipal Act that a notice under that section is itself to contain the directions as to the nature and position of the required latrine. The law does not contemplate delegation to an individual officer of the power to give the necessary directions, though the Committee are at liberty to guide themselves by the advice of any expert in their employ. N ABDUL SATTAR v. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR, 20 Cr. L. J. 82 882

s. 139—Continuing breach—Daily fines, whether can be imposed for future breaches

The daily fine which may be imposed under section 139 of the C. P. Municipal Act must relate to a period anterior to the Magistrate's order of conviction. There cannot be punishment under that section for a future breach. N MOHAMAD YACUB v. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR, 20 Cr. L. J. 89 889

s. 159—Complaint, whether necessary in respect of each accused tried jointly.

A complaint has to be made as required by section 159 of the C. P. Municipal Act in order to enable a Court to take cognizance of an offence punishable under the Act. But once cognizance has been legally taken of an offence, the Magistrate is seized of the whole matter as to all other accused whose guilt may appear during the trial of the case. N GAMBHIR CHAND v. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR, 20 Cr. L. J. 84 886

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s.

35 (4) Surrender, implied, doctrine of, applicability of—Occupancy tenancy, alienation of, by female holder—Necessity, want of—Alienee, possession of, whether adverse to reversioner.

The doctrine of implied surrender contained in section 35 (4) of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act is intended to apply to normal circumstances where the landlord or the person put in by him holds adversely to the tenant. Where, however, a female holder alienates an occupancy tenancy and the alienation is not for legal necessity, the alienee does not begin to hold adversely to the ultimate reversioner until the death of the female holder, and the doctrine of implied surrender has no application to such a case. N NAGO v. PAIKU 623

C. P. Tenancy Act—cont'd.

s. 35 (4)—Surrender of tenancy—Non-cultivation of land.

The provisions as to implied surrender embodied in section 35 (4) of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act do not apply to a case where the non-cultivation of land and non-payment of rent are not voluntary but are due to obstruction which is the outcome of the landlord's improper behaviour. N PANDU v. SITAL PRASAD, 14 N. L. R. 176 188

s. 45, applicability of—Sir lands—Mortgage registered before commencement of Act—Award of Conciliation Board after passing of Act, effect of.

A mortgagee of certain villages including sir lands obtained the usual preliminary decree for foreclosure in a suit on the mortgage on 30th June 1899. The matter was then referred to a Conciliation Board which made its award on 20th February 1905, which provided that the amount payable under the said decree should be considerably reduced, that the reduced amount should be paid in the manner therein stated, and that in default of payment only seven of the mortgaged villages should be foreclosed. No mention was made of sir lands. The award was filed in Court under section 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and a decree was passed in terms of the award, and on 16th June 1905 that decree was made final as the foreclosure decree, in which the names of the seven villages to be foreclosed were given, but no mention was made of the sir lands. In execution the mortgagee decree-holder claimed actual possession of the sir lands in the seven villages.

Held, (1) that the conciliation award was a fresh origin of rights between the parties, and that although it came into existence in consequence of the registered mortgage and the transactions thereunder, it was, both for the purpose of enforcement and for the purpose of the application of section 45 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1898, as amended by Act XXI of 1899, the transaction between the parties which was the foundation of their rights;

(2) that sub-section (1) of section 45 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act must be applied to the case and that, therefore, in spite of the terms of the award, the mortgagor could not so transfer his right to occupy sir lands as to divest himself of his right as an occupancy tenant under the Act;

(3) that consequently the mortgagee could only obtain symbolical or constructive possession of the sir lands, the actual possession remaining with the mortgagor as occupancy tenant of the lands. P C NARAYAN GANESH GHATATE v. BALIRAM, 24 M. L. T. 345; 14 N. L. R. 165; 28 C. L. J. 447; (1918) M. W. N. 895; 23 C. W. N. 297 141

s. 45 (2)—Lease of sir land—Sanction of Revenue Officer, failure to obtain, effect of.

Section 45 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act requiring the sanction of a Revenue Officer for a lease of sir land has no application to an agricultural lease. N PANDU v. SITAL PRASAD, 14 N. L. R. 176 188

C. P. Tenancy Act—concl'd.

s. 60—Occupancy tenancy—Sub-lease—Ejection of sub-lessee—Notice to eject—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

Under section 60 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act a sub-lease of occupancy land cannot be made from year to year, it can only be made for a term of one year. If before the end of the year no notice is given, there may be a presumption that the parties intend to make a fresh lease for the ensuing year, but where a notice is given by the occupancy tenant to his sub-tenant, that he does not intend to renew the sub-lease, the sub-lease comes to an end with the end of the agricultural year, and the sub-tenant is thereafter in the position of a trespasser and can be ejected through a Civil Court. N GOVINDA v. CHINDHOO 948

Circumstantial evidence, conviction based on, when justified.

One of the cardinal principles of cases based upon circumstantial evidence is that in order to justify the inference of guilt, the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other hypothesis other than that of his guilt. P EMPEROR v. JAGAT RAM, 19 Cr. L. J. 987 167

City of Bombay Improvement Act (IV Bom. of 1898), ss. 31, 41, 42, 45—City of Bombay Municipal Act (III Bom. of 1888), ss. 297, 300, 301—Compulsory expropriation and impropriation of owners of land adjoining streets—Owner, whether bound to pay for compulsory impropriation—"Street to be formed," meaning of.

The main object of the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, by which the Bombay Improvement Trust was constituted, was to set up with sufficient powers a street-making authority, and when its function as such was expired, to have the street which had been re-constructed or made by the Trust thereupon handed back to the Corporation.

Section 41 and section 45 of the Act are correlative. They both refer to that site which is used as a street and for the purposes thereof and to no other. The "street to be formed" which vests in the Trust under section 41 of the Act is identical with the formed street which re-vests in the Corporation under section 45.

Where, therefore, the "regular line of a street" was altered and the owner of adjacent land was required to set forward his building on part of the old street:

Held, (1) that the strip of old street which was never formed into the new street had never vested in the Improvement Trust, that it remained the property of the Municipal Corporation; and that when such owner of adjacent land was ordered by the Commissioner to set forward his building upon it, it became his property in virtue of section 301 (3) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act;

(2) that as the Act made no provision for payment by such owner, no price was payable by him for the projection on which he was required or allowed to build. P C RATANLAL GHONILAL PANALAL v. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER, BOMBAY, 17 A. L. J. 1; 36 M. L. J. 1; 29 C. L. J. 138; 9 L. W. 171; 25 M. L. T. 103 404 ss. 297, 299, 301—Preservation of regular line in public street—Commissioner, powers of, exercise of—Acquisition of land—Compensation, calculation of, mode of.

ss. 41, 42, 45 404

City of Bombay Municipal Act (III Bom. of 1888), s. 297 404

There is nothing in the City of Bombay Municipal Act which prescribes the frame of mind in which the Municipal Commissioner is to exercise the powers given by section 297 of the Act, or which restricts the objects for which he is to exercise them to the mere regulation of the street in question or to the creation or preservation of a regular line in it. "Preservation of Regular Line in Public Streets," the heading to the group of sections beginning with section 297, does not limit the exercise of the powers given by the express words of the Act.

For the purpose of building a bridge in order to carry a street over a railway line the Municipal Commissioner wished to acquire additional land on a side of the street, and so he first prescribed a regular line of the street under section 297 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act and then under section 299 acquired a part of the appellant's land which fell within the line:

Held, that the exercise of the powers was within the terms of the Act and that the appellant was entitled to compensation for the land acquired under section 301 of the Act, and not under the Land Acquisition Act. P C ABDUL RAHIM v. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER OF BOMBAY, 24 M. L. T. 297; 20 Bom. L. R. 937; 8 L. W. 548; (1918) M. W. N. 840; 23 C. W. N. 110; 42 B. 462 63

s. 299 63

s. 300 404

s. 301 63, 404

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 320, 325A—Execution of decrees —Transfer of decree affecting immovable property to Collector—Restriction on power of judgment-debtor to mortgage, extent of.

The incompetence to alienate without the Collector's permission, imposed upon a judgment-debtor by section 325A of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is absolute and is not limited to the time during which the property is under the Collector's control. Therefore, a mortgage created by a judgment-debtor in defiance of the prohibition is of no effect even after the property has come back into his hands.

P C GAURISHANKAR BALMUKUND v. CHINNUMIYA, 14 N. L. R. 181; 35 M. L. J. 733; 16 A. L. J. 995; 25 M. L. T. 64 312

s. 325A 312

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2, 47, 96.

An order of Court dismissing an application for a final decree for sale in a mortgage suit is a "decree" within the meaning of section 2, Civil Procedure Code.

Such an order cannot be treated as one under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, in execution of the preliminary decree, but is an order in the suit itself and is appealable as a decree under section 96 of the Civil Procedure Code. M SUBBALAKSHIMI AMMAL v. RAMALINGA CHETTY, 8 L. W. 526; 35 M. L. J. 552; (1918) M. W. N. 792; 24 M. L. T. 486 298 ss. 2, 47—Execution—Sale set aside on ground of fraud—Order setting aside sale, whether "decree".

Civil Procedure Code—1903—contd.

It is not open to a party to impeach an execution sale under section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, and if a Court does, professing to act under section 47, set aside a sale on the objection of the judgment-debtor in a proceeding between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, the order setting aside the sale will not be a decree. PAT MAULA BUX v. RAGHUBAR GANJHU, 3 P. L. J. 645 560

S. 11—Res judicata between co-defendants—Conflict of interests inter se, absence of, effect of—Implied adjudication, whether res judicata.

Actual adjudication on an issue in a suit is not necessary to constitute the decision res judicata in a subsequent suit. If the decision come to in the earlier suit impliedly decides the point which is in issue in a subsequent suit, it would be res judicata.

Where the parties to a suit were co-defendants in an earlier suit and there was nothing to show that there was a conflict of interests inter se between them, the decision in the earlier suit will not operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. M POYYALI NAICKER v. SUBBA NAICKER, 8 L. W. 206; (1918) M. W. N. 567; 24 M. L. T. 205 905

S. 11—Res judicata—Decision of Subordinate Judge, whether res judicata in subsequent suit of Small Cause nature.

The decision of a Subordinate Judge in a previous suit is res judicata in a subsequent Small Cause suit between the same parties inasmuch as the inability of the Subordinate Judge to entertain a claim of a Small Cause nature arises not from incompetence but from the existence of another Court with a preferential jurisdiction. N MADHURAO v. AMRIT RAO, 14 N. L. B. 115 268

S. 11—Res judicata—Finding not necessary for decision of suit, whether res judicata.

Where it appears from the judgment of a Court that the real ground of decision is a particular finding, which alone is sufficient for the disposal of the case, and that it has given other findings as well which are not necessary for the decision of the suit, the former finding is the only finding which operates as res judicata, especially when it is found that the judgment has been appealed from and that the Appellate Court has taken into consideration that finding alone. O PARMESHWAR DIN v. DEBI PRASAD, 5 O. L. J. 647 386

S. 11—Res judicata—Hindu Law—Widow, decree against, whether bars suit of reversioner.

Where the estate of a deceased Hindu has vested in a female heir, a decree fairly and properly obtained against her in regard to the estate is, in the absence of fraud or collusion, binding on the reversionary heir; and where merits are tried and the trial is fair and honest, a Hindu lady otherwise qualified to represent the estate in litigation does not cease to be so qualified merely owing to a personal disability or a disadvantage as a litigant.

A Hindu widow sued for a declaration that she has not validly adopted the defendant as a son to her deceased husband. Both Courts in India dismissed the suit, holding that by her own acts she was personally estopped from denying the validity of the adoption. The Privy Council affirmed that decision and also held that she had authority from her deceased husband to make the adoption in question and that the defendant had been validly adopted. On the death of the widow the next reversioner sued to eject the adopted son, on the ground that inasmuch as the widow had no authority from her deceased husband to make an adoption the defendant had not been validly adopted.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that though the rule of res judicata, as enacted in section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was not strictly applicable to the case, the principle of res judicata applied, and that the decision in the widow's suit on the question whether the defendant had or had not been validly adopted, barred the suit of the reversioner. P C RISAL SINGH v. BALWANT SINGH, 24 M. L. T. 361; 23 C. L. J. 519; 40 A. 593; 9 L. W. 52 553

S. 21—Jurisdiction—Appeal, second, question of jurisdiction, whether can be raised in.

The question that the primary Court had no territorial jurisdiction cannot be gone into in second appeal, unless it was raised at the earliest possible moment in the course of the suit. C CHANDRA MOYI CHOWDHURANI v. GREGSON 465

S. 22—Transfer of case—Application for transfer by defendant objecting to jurisdiction of Court, maintainability of—Inconvenience of defendant's witnesses, whether ground for transfer—Plaintiff's choice of forum, interference with.

A defendant in a suit, who takes objection to the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit has been instituted cannot maintain an application for its transfer to another Court under section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code.

A plaintiff's right to choose his own forum cannot be taken away from him except for very cogent reasons.

The fact that a defendant's witnesses would be very much inconvenienced if the suit continues in the Court chosen by the plaintiff as his forum is not a sufficient ground for taking action under section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code. O ASKARAN BAID v. BHOLA NATH, 21 O. C. 217 105

S. 35—Costs—Practice.

As regards costs of suit the parties are, in the absence of any special reason, entitled to have the ordinary rule observed, namely, that usually costs follow the event. C BIJOY CHAND v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE 972

ss. 47 298, 560

S. 47, O. XXI, rr. 2, 53 (6)—

Attachment of decree—Adjustment after attachment, effect of, on rights of attaching creditor—Notice, absence of, to judgment-debtor, effect of—Application by decree-holder to record adjustment—Attaching creditor brought on record—Order on application, whether appealable—"Either through Court or otherwise" in O. XXI, r. 53, meaning of.

Where a decree, which is under attachment at the instance of the decree-holder's creditor, is adjusted after the attachment, the adjustment does not bind the attaching creditor, whether notice of the attachment has been issued to the judgment-debtor or not under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 53 (6) Civil Procedure Code.

In such a case, if an application is made by the decree-holder to record the adjustment, it would be open to the attaching creditor to come in and object to the entering of satisfaction and any order passed by the Court would be appealable as one covered by section 47, Civil Procedure Code.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

—If the attachment was after the adjustment, the attaching creditor has no locus standi and it would not be open to him to raise any question within the meaning of section 47.

Quære.—Whether the Court could suo motu make the attaching creditor party to the satisfaction or adjustment proceedings.

Per Abdur Rahim, J.—The words "either through Court or otherwise" in Order XXI, rule 53, Civil Procedure Code, refer to "payment or adjustment" and not to "notice" preceding it.

The attachment of a decree is complete without notice to the judgment-debtor and the holder of the decree has no right to deal with it after attachment. M KUPPUSAMI IYER v. KUPPUSAMI IYER, (1918) M. W. N. 874; 24 M. L. T. 497; 9 L. W. 32 ss. 47, 144, 151—Decree, ex parte, set aside—Sale in execution of decree, whether can be set aside—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 181—Limitation for application to set aside sale, commencement of.

109

Plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree against the defendant and caused the latter's house to be sold in execution and purchased it himself. The defendant subsequently got the ex parte decree set aside but on a retrial of the case a decree was again passed against him. He then applied to have the previous sale of the house set aside.

Held, (1) that the ex parte decree having been set aside, the sale which was held in execution of that decree ought itself to be set aside as being no longer based on any solid foundation.

(2) that the application to set aside the sale could be treated as one under section 47, or section 144 or section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code;

(3) that the application was governed by Article 181 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act and that limitation began to run from the date on which the ex parte decree was set aside. B SHIVBAI BABYA SWAMI v. YESU CHEOO NAYAKIN, 20 Bom. L. R. 925

130

ss. 47, 115, O. XXI, r. 96, O.

XLVII, r. 1—Execution of decree—Delivery of possession, proceedings for, nature of—Order directing delivery of possession—Review—Jurisdiction of Court—Revision, whether lies.

Proceedings for delivery of possession are not proceedings in connection with the execution of a decree, and, therefore, no appeal lies against an order passed in such proceedings.

Where, through no fault of the judgment-debtor, the fact that an application for delivery of possession is barred by time is kept from the knowledge of the Court, and an order is passed directing delivery of possession, the Court has, on the fact being brought to its notice, jurisdiction to review its previous order and to bring it in accordance with law, and the High Court has no power to interfere in revision with the order passed on review. PAT DHANINDER DAS v. HARIHAR PRASAD SINGH, 3 P. L. J. 571

129

s. 47, O. XXI, r. 2—Execution of decree—Payment out of Court not certified—Adjustment, whether can be recognised—Sale, whether fraudulent—Mortgage suit—Transfer, pendente lite, validity of.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Plaintiff obtained a mortgage decree on foot of an unregistered mortgage and purchased the mortgaged property in execution of the decree. He obtained formal possession, but not actual possession, which was with the defendant who was a subsequent mortgagee of the property. During the pendency of the suit the mortgagor executed another mortgage in favour of the defendant. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a suit to redeem the earlier mortgage executed in favour of the defendant and the latter set up the plea that the Court sale under which the plaintiff claimed title was fraudulent, inasmuch as the decree had been satisfied before the sale was held:

Held, (1) that under section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code the question as to the satisfaction of the decree was a question arising in execution, which should have been tried by the executing Court under that section or, at the discretion of that Court, by suit;

(2) that in either case the Court would be precluded from recognising an uncertified adjustment;

(3) that under section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgagor who was a party to the plaintiff's mortgage suit could not transfer the property by way of mortgage so as to affect the rights of the plaintiff to bring the property to sale free from such burden;

(4) that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the earlier mortgage held by the defendant and was not affected by the mortgage executed during the pendency of his suit. B MORU NARSU GUJAR v. HASAN FATTEKHAN JUMMAL, 20 Bom. L. R. 929

135

s. 47, O. XXI, r. 21—Execution of decree—Sale, setting aside of—Judgment-debtor, remedy of—Suit, separate, maintainability of.

Where a judgment-debtor impeaches the validity of execution proceedings which preceded and led up to the sale of his property, and thus seeks to have the sale set aside, his remedy lies by application under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and not by means of a separate suit.

Where an auction-purchaser though he be also the decree-holder sues to recover possession on the basis of his purchase, he does so as the representative of the judgment-debtor and therefore the questions that arise in the suit are questions between the judgment-debtor and his own representatives and are not covered by section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The right to bring an application within a certain period is not a vested right but a matter of procedure.

O KANIZ MEHDI BEGAM v. RASUL BEG, 5 O. L. J. 551

39

s. 64, scope of—Award made rule of Court—Attachment, prior, of properties allocated by award to persons other than judgment-debtors, whether avoids award—Purchase subsequent to decree on award, effect of.

Section 64, Civil Procedure Code, avoids only private transfers and not awards which have become merged in a decree of Court.

A dispute between the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 to 3 having been referred to arbitration, the arbitrator passed an award directing the delivery of certain properties to the plaintiffs. The award was filed in Court and a decree was passed in terms thereof. The properties had been attached by defendants Nos 4 and 5 as the properties of their judgment-debtors, defendants Nos. 1 to 3, before the passing of the award, but were purchased by them in Court-auction after the decree. In a suit by the plaintiffs for possession of the properties:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that as the attachment created no title in the defendants Nos. 4 and 5, it could not invalidate the award, but must be taken to be subject to the rights created by it, and that as the sale took place after the decree which was passed in terms of the award, it was subject to that decree. M KASI VISVANATHA CHETTIAR v. RAMASWAMI ATHITHA NADAR, 35 M. L. J. 441; 8 L. W. 582; 24 M. L. T. 477 123

s. 91—Public nuisance, suit for removal of, by private person—Special damage, proof of.

The fact that a person suffers in a special degree the inconvenience felt by the public arising from a public nuisance cannot be said to cause him special damage and does not give him any right to sue for the removal of the nuisance, unless he proves that it causes him damage in a way different from the general public. N RUKHMI v. KISAN 88

s. 92 833

s. 92—Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), s. 14, scope of—Suit to recover trust property from persons claiming as trustees, maintainability of.

Plaintiff, who claimed to be the representative of the original donor of a Hindu temple and to be interested in the property dedicated to the temple and also claimed to be the Muktesar appointed by the Temple Committee in place of the defendants, sued the latter for (a) possession of what should be found to be the trust property on enquiry by the Court; (b) an account of the trust property, both capital and income, come to the hands of the defendants; (c) an account of all expenses properly incurred by the defendants; and (d) damages for breach of trust. The defendants claimed to be trustees entitled to hold the property from generation to generation subject to the due fulfilment of the trust:

Held, that the suit, being one practically for the removal of the defendants from their position as trustees, for the restoration of the trust property to the plaintiff as the Muktesar appointed by the Temple Committee, for taking accounts and for damages for breach of trust, was governed by section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code and could only be brought in conformity with the provisions of that section.

Per Marten, J.—There is much which is in common between section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code and section 14 of the Religious Endowments Act, but the former is substantially the wider section and provides inter alia for settling a scheme which is a jurisdiction of a very wide and beneficial nature. A plaintiff may proceed for appropriate relief under either section, and the opening words of section 92 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code mean only that if he elects to proceed under the Religious Endowments Act he is not to be prevented from so doing by section 92. B HANSRAJ IADDASHE v. ANANT PADMA-NARH BHATT, 20 Bom. L. R. 954 514

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

s. 92, scope of.

Section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code is mandatory, and a suit claiming any of the reliefs specified therein must be brought under, and in conformity with, its provisions or not at all. If a plaintiff sets up a trust, "created for public purposes of a charitable or religious nature," and claims "as a person having an interest in the trust" any of the reliefs specified in section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, he must do so in accordance with the terms of the section. A NAIMUL HAQ v. MOHAMMAD SUBHAN-ULLAH, 16 A. L. J. 841 94

s. 92—Suit in respect of choultry—Person "interested," meaning of.

In a suit for settling the scheme of a public choultry, the residents of the locality where the choultry is situate and who are also members of the community for whose benefit the charity was founded, are persons having an 'interest' in the charity within the meaning of section 92, Civil Procedure Code. M. GARUDA SANYASAYAYA v. NERELLA MUTHEMMA, 35 M. L. J. 661; 9 L. W. 1; 25 M. L. T. 740 86

s. 96 298

s. 96, O. XLI, r. 22—Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 46, 47—Appeal—"In regard to proceedings under this Act", meaning of—Memorandum of objections, whether can be presented—Appeal barred by time, effect of—"Procedure on hearing," meaning of.

A memorandum of objections can be presented in an appeal against a decision under the Provincial Insolvency Act.

Where, however, the appeal is dismissed as presented out of time, the memorandum of objections cannot be heard.

Per Wallis, C. J.—The expression "in regard to proceedings under this Act in Courts subordinate to them" in section 47 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act is wide enough to cover cases in the subordinate Courts which come before the High Court or District Court on appeal or revision as well as applications for transfer, etc. The procedure prescribed in the Civil Procedure Code is the standard procedure and applies not only to insolvency cases in original Courts but also to cases of appeal and revision provided for in the Insolvency Act.

The right of a respondent to proceed by way of memorandum of objections is strictly incidental to the filing of the original appeal in time, and it is open to a party against whom a memorandum of objections has been filed to set up the bar that the original appeal was filed out of time.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—The right to prefer an appeal by way of memorandum of objections is an extension of the right of appeal, which must be given by Statute. Statutory provisions relating to such rights should be strictly construed. Order XLI, rule 22, of the Civil Procedure Code must, if possible, not be extended in favour of the right of a respondent to file a memorandum of objections so as to prejudice parties who have obtained a decree in their favour in the lower Court and who might reasonably entertain the belief that, as the time for preferring an appeal has expired, the rights which have been established in their favour under the decision of the Court of first instance have become finally secure.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The expression "in regard to civil suits" in section 47 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act includes proceedings in appeal in civil suits.

Per Spencer, J.—The word "hearing" in the heading to Order XLI, Civil Procedure Code, means hearing on the merits, and the heading "procedure on hearing" indicates that the respondent's right to take cross-objections, which up to the time of the hearing was an inchoate right, becomes perfected at the hearing of the appeal. The words "upon the hearing" in section 561 of the old Code were probably omitted in the new Code as being redundant. M ALAGAPPA CHETTIAR v. CHOCKALINGAM CHETTY, 35 M. L. J. 236; 8 L. W. 240; 24 M. L. T. 137; (1918) M. W. N. 688; 41 M. 904 203

S. 97—Preliminary decree, appeal against—Decree reversed or modified—Final decree passed before result of appeal, effect of.

If a preliminary decree passed under section 97 of the Civil Procedure Code is reversed or substantially modified in appeal, the final decree passed on the footing of that preliminary decree before the decision in appeal ceases to be operative. M GUNNAH MUDALI v. RANGASWAMI MUDALI, 35 M. L. J. 861 7

S. 100 (1) (c)—Procedure, mistake in, not affecting merits—Appeal, second, whether lies—Custom, evidence of—High Court, whether can go into evidence in second appeal.

In a case where a custom differing from the general law is set up, the High Court is not precluded in second appeal from considering whether the evidence adduced suffices to establish all the elements (antiquity, continuity and certainty) necessary to constitute a valid custom.

During the pendency of a suit, the plaintiff having died, his son, who had been adjudged an insolvent during the lifetime of his father, was admitted to continue the suit. The defendants did not raise any objection in the Court of first instance to his substitution. An objection was raised in the first Appellate Court but was rejected. The objection being repeated in the second Appellate Court:

Held, that even if there was an error, the merits were unaffected thereby and section 100 (1) (c), Civil Procedure Code, precluded a second appeal on that point. N BALIBHADRADAS v. MIRCHILAL 236

S. 104 (e)—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19—Appeal, right of, against order under s. 19 of Arbitration Act.

An appeal lies under section 104 (e), Civil Procedure Code, against an order passed under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, staying or refusing to stay a suit, where there is an agreement to refer to arbitration. S KODUMAL KALUMAL v. VOLKART BROS., 12 S. L. R. 34 434

S. 109—Appeal to Privy Council—Remand by High Court for retrial—Leave, grant of, conditions determining—Final judgment, test of—Judgment on merits on one issue and remand on another—Certificate, grant of, in respect of portion of judgment, propriety of.

Where a High Court, on appeal, remands a case for retrial by the lower Court, there is no final judgment against which the High Court can grant a certificate to appeal to the Privy Council under section 109, Civil Procedure Code.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Where every issue of fact has been found by the Appellate Court and the remand is directed solely with a view to give the consequent reliefs dependent on the conclusions of the Appellate Court, the judgment must be regarded as final within the meaning of that expression in section 109 (a), Civil Procedure Code.

The mere fact that a judgment has not been given on a preliminary point will not render it necessarily a final adjudication. The question in each case will be whether the pronouncement by the Appellate Court has given a final decision upon all the rights litigated.

Where a final decision is given on one of the issues on the merits and a retrial is ordered in respect of the other points or issues, the judgment is not final under section 109 (a), Civil Procedure Code, and leave cannot be granted to appeal to the Privy Council in respect only of the adjudication on the merits. M VADDIPARTHI MANGAYYA v. VADDIPARTHI VENKATARAMANAMURTHI, (1918) M. W. N. 844 132

S. 110—Appeal to Privy Council—Cross-appeals to High Court—High Court affirming part of decree and reversing part—Leave, whether can be granted.

Plaintiff's suit was decreed in part by the trial Court. There were cross-appeals to the High Court and the latter dismissed the plaintiff's appeal and accepted that of the defendant. The plaintiff applied for and obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council against the decree by which the defendant's appeal had been accepted. He then applied for leave to appeal against the decree by which his own appeal had been dismissed and the trial Court's decree had to that extent been confirmed:

Held, that no substantial question of law being involved in the case and the trial Court's decree having been confirmed, leave to appeal to the Privy Council could not be granted. A CHIRANJI LAL v. BEHARI LAL, 16 A. L. J. 864 124

S. 115 129, 499
S. 115, O. XXI, rr. 91, 92, 93—

Execution of decree—Sale, cancellation of, for want of saleable interest in judgment-debtor—Notice, absence of, to persons entitled to rateable distribution, effect of—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

Where an execution sale is cancelled under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 91, Civil Procedure Code, without notice to persons having an order in their favour for rateable distribution of the property, the Court, in passing the order, cannot be said to have failed or declined to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law and the High Court cannot interfere with the order in revision.

A mere error in the interpretation of a section is not a failure to exercise jurisdiction within the meaning of section 115, Civil Procedure Code.

Semble.—Persons who have an order for rateable distribution in their favour are persons affected by an application to set aside the sale within the meaning of Order XXI, rule 92, Civil Procedure Code, and an order made behind their backs cannot bind them for the purposes of Order XXI, rule 93. M KOMANDUR KRISHNAMACHARLU v. B. DANOGI RAO, (1918) M. W. N. 716; 35 M. L. J. 604; 8 L. W. 592; 24 M. L. T. 482 38

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

S. 115—Receiver, appointment of—Court, refusal of, to help Receiver to discharge his duties—Jurisdiction, refusal to exercise—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

A Court is bound to assist the Receiver appointed in a suit in the execution of his duties by issue of all necessary orders to the parties and by enforcing them, if necessary, by contempt proceedings, and its refusal to take action or postponement of it is a refusal to exercise jurisdiction within the meaning of section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Where, therefore, a Receiver was appointed in a suit to have custody of certain jewels and on his representing to the Court that the jewels were with the respondent, the Court directed him to sue the latter and when the Receiver filed the suit, the Court postponed the trial of the suit:

Held, that the Court failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law within the meaning of section 115, Civil Procedure Code. M RAMACHANDRA AYYAR v. RAJU, 8 L. W. 436 139

S. 115, O. IX, r. 9—Restoration of suit dismissed for default—Sufficient cause, absence of—Order restoring suit, whether without jurisdiction—Revision.

On an appeal against an order of the primary Court refusing to restore a suit dismissed for default the Appellate Court restored the suit, although it found that the plaintiff could not show sufficient cause for his non-appearance within the meaning of Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code:

Held, that the order of the Appellate Court was not without jurisdiction. C NALLADAROO v. HARI KISSEN RATHI 961

S. 115—Revision 433

S. 115—Revision—Erroneous decision of law, whether ground for interference—Remedy, other, open to aggrieved party, effect of.

An erroneous decision of law cannot be regarded as an exercise of jurisdiction, with which the Court was not vested by law and does not, therefore, furnish a ground for interference in revision.

It is not the practice of the High Court to interfere in revision when another remedy is open to the aggrieved party, and when no great injustice or inconvenience would follow from the refusal to interfere. N GULAM v. SHEODIN RAM 415

S. 115—Revision—Error of law, whether ground for interference.

An error in a conclusion of law arrived at by the lower Court is no ground for revision under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. N BAFU BALAJEE v. DHANNU 160

S. 115—Revision—High Court, powers of interference of—Error of law or fact.

The High Court will not interfere, in revision, with the finding or decision of a subordinate Court, under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that it erred in law or fact in its appreciation of the merits. To justify the High Court's interference, there must be a want of, or a failure to exercise, jurisdiction by the subordinate Court. M KRISHNASWAMI IYER, In re, 35 M. L. J. 251 128

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

S. 115, O. III, r. 4, O. XXI, r. 89, O. XXXII, r. 5—Revision—High Court, power of interference of—Execution—Application to set aside sale on behalf of minor.

Under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code the High Court is competent to revise a conclusion of law or of fact which bears on a question of jurisdiction.

In execution of a simple money decree passed against a minor, a house belonging to the minor was attached and advertised for sale. An application asking for an adjournment of the sale was put in by a Vakil appointed by the guardian of the minor, but the rakalatnamah did not state that the guardian was executing it as such. An affidavit was filed by the guardian along with the application. The Court adjourned the sale and on the adjourned date the property was sold to a stranger. Thereupon the same Vakil purporting to act on behalf of the minor filed an application under Order XXI, rule 89, of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the sale. The Court rejected the application on the ground that it was not filed by the guardian or by a properly appointed Vakil:

Held, (1) that the application was in order inasmuch as it had been filed by a Vakil appointed by the guardian of the minor;

(2) that the refusal of the Court to entertain the application amounted to a refusal to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it and that, therefore, the High Court was entitled to interfere in revision under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. A BEHARI LAL v. BALDEO NARAIN, 16 A. L. J. 717; 40 A. 674 14

S. 115—Revision—Jurisdiction—Erroneous decision upon point of law, whether ground for interference.

Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply to cases where the law enunciated by the lower Court is wrong with regard to the discretion vested in it or where the evidence adduced was inadmissible or was misunderstood, inasmuch as all those are errors affecting merely the result of the cogitation of the Court upon the facts submitted to it; they are not errors involving any question of jurisdiction. PAT JANKI KVER v. KOKUR DUSADH, (1918) Pat. 347 930

S. 115—Revision—Question of law—High Court, power of interference of.

A High Court cannot interfere under the terms of section 115, Code of Civil Procedure, with a decision at the instance of persons who complain of the decision on a point of law. C BIBHUTI BHUSAN CHAKRAVARTY v. UMESH CHANDRA MUKHERJEE 614

S. 115, O. XXIII, r. 1 (2)—Withdrawal of suit, leave for, grant of, for reasons not covered by sub-rule (2)—Revision—High Court, whether can interfere—Misapplication of law—Jurisdiction, illegal exercise of.

The High Court has power to interfere in revision in a case where withdrawal of a suit has been allowed without reasons which can properly be regarded as covered by Order XXIII, rule 1, sub-rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code.

To apply a provision of law to a case to which it has no application is to act without jurisdiction or at any rate to act illegally in the exercise of jurisdiction within the meaning of section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. N DOMA v. DAYARAM 1005

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

s. 144 130

s. 145, applicability of, to surety bonds executed outside Court.

Section 145, Civil Procedure Code, is confined to cases where the liability of the surety has been entered into in the face of the Court or has been recorded by Court in accordance with the provisions of the Code. It does not extend to surety bonds taken by a judgment-creditor outside the Court. M SUBBARAYA PILLAI v. SATHANATHA PANDARAM, 8 L. W. 507; (1918) N. W. N. 764; 24 M. L. T. 416/ 940

s. 146, O. XXII, r. 10—"Proceeding" and "claiming under" in s. 146, meanings of—Assignment of party's interest pending suit—Appeal, rights to, by Assignee—Omission to be impleaded in suit, effect of—Plaint, return of, for presentation to proper Court—Devolution of interest during pendency of proceedings in first Court, effect of, on proceedings in second Court.

Order XXII, rule 10, Civil Procedure Code, only governs applications made to continue a suit. Applications presented after the termination of the suit are not within the rule.

The "proceeding" contemplated by section 146, Civil Procedure Code, includes an appeal and the expression "claiming under" in the section is wide enough to cover cases of devolution, etc., mentioned in Order XXI, rule 10, of the Code.

The effect of section 146 of the Civil Procedure Code is to grant an assignee of the interest of a party to a suit a right to prefer an appeal against the decrees passed in the suit which his assignor could have preferred, even though the assignee did not make himself a party to the suit.

Obiter.—Where a plaint is returned for presentation to the proper Court, any devolution of interest which takes place while the proceedings are pending in the first Court must be taken to be a devolution in the course of the suit which is subsequently tried in the second Court. M SITARAMASWAMY v. DULLA LAKSHMI NARASANNA, 8 L. W. 21; 41 M. 510 840

s. 151 130

s. 151—Execution of decree of High Court at variance with purport of decree—Inherent power of High Court to interfere.

Where it is brought to the notice of the High Court that a decree passed by it is being executed in a manner manifestly at variance with the purport and intention of that decree, the High Court, under its inherent powers of supervision which are expressly saved by section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code, can take such action for the ends of justice as may be necessary to enforce the proper execution of the decree. PAT KULADA PRASAD TEWARI v. SADHU CHARAN TEWARI, 3 P. L. J. 485 107

s. 151, O. XLI, r. 27—Execution of deed—Additional evidence, admission of—Substantial cause—Appellate Court, power of.

In a suit the plaintiffs had some reason to suppose that the execution of the deeds on which the suit was based would not be seriously challenged. But it was seriously challenged. The plaintiffs then produced formal evidence of the execution of the deeds, by examining a witness to prove the signature of one of the attesting witnesses to the deeds. The trial Court, however, disbelieved this witness and dismissed the suit.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that under these circumstances there was substantial cause to justify the Appellate Court under section 151 and Order XLI, rule 27, Civil Procedure Code, in permitting the plaintiffs to produce additional evidence as to the execution of the deeds. O MANGAL v. INDAR KUAR, 5 O. L. J. 745 1007

s. 151, O. XL, r. 1, O. XLIII, r. 1 (s)—Revision—Inherent power of Court to treat revision as appeal.

The High Court has jurisdiction, in the exercise of its inherent powers under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code, to condone in special cases the misapplication of the provisions of the Code, if the provisions of the law as regards limitation and Court-fees are complied with.

The High Court has authority to convert an application for revision into a memorandum of appeal. PAT DULHIN SONA KUER v. JAMIL AHMAD 779

s. 152, O. XLI, r. 33—Appellate Court, power of, to correct accidental slips in judgment and decree of lower Court.

An Appellate Court has, under Order XLI, rule 33 of the Civil Procedure Code, power to correct accidental slips in the judgment and decree of the lower Court, although no application has been made to it under section 152 of the Code. N DILESHVAR RAM BRAHMAN v. NOHAR SINGH 193

O. I, r. 3—Joinder of causes of action—

Suit for rent by co-sharer landlord—Prayer for recovery of share of rent against tenants, whether can be joined with prayer for relief in alternative against co-sharer landlords.

The plaintiff as purchaser of an eight-annas share of an estate brought a suit against the tenants making his co-sharers pro forma defendants, with a prayer to recover his share of the rent from the tenant defendants or in the alternative from the pro forma defendants, if it was found that the latter had realized the share of the rent due to the plaintiff.

Held, (1) that the prayer for the relief against the pro forma defendants could be joined with the prayer for the recovery of rent against the principal defendants inasmuch as Order I, rule 3, of the Civil Procedure Code provides for the joinder of such claims, and it is a well-established practice to join such claims;

(2) that the pro forma defendants having recovered the whole rent, asserting only an eight-annas interest in the superior right, they were bound to make over half of the rent collected to the owner of the other half of the proprietary right. C ISWAR DALIN v. GIRINDRA KUMAR NAG 726

O. I, r. 9, Sch. II, para. 21—

Arbitration—Reference to arbitration by some members of joint family for partition—Award, validity of
Where the question of the partition of the family properties of a joint Hindu family is referred to arbitration and some of the members of the joint family are not party to the reference, the award given in pursuance of such reference partitioning the family property is invalid and cannot be filed under paragraph 21 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code. Pat. CHOTTEY LAL v. MADHO BIBI 953

Civil Procedure Code—1903—contd.

O. I, r. 10—Appeal—Misjoinder of parties—Procedure, proper.

The appellant was the first defendant in a suit brought by the plaintiff. The primary Court decreed the suit with costs against the appellant. On appeal the lower Appellate Court, finding that the appellant was not a necessary party to the suit and was wrongly joined as a defendant, struck off the appellant's name from the record as a defendant and dismissed his appeal, making no order as to costs:

Held, that the proper order, which should have been made by the lower Appellate Court was to set aside the order of the primary Court and to dismiss the suit against the appellant with costs. C SECRETARY OF STATE v. CHATURBHUI NANDA 963

O. II, r. 2—Mortgage—Suit claiming that mortgage has been satisfied and for recovery of excess balance realised by mortgagee, dismissal of—Redemption, suit for, maintainability of.

Plaintiff mortgagor brought a suit against the defendant mortgagee, claiming that the latter had realised more than was due to him under the mortgage and asking for a decree for Rs. 100. The Court held that the mortgage had not been paid off and dismissed the suit. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a suit to redeem the mortgage:

Held, that the suit for redemption was barred by Order II, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. P BARKHURDAR v. CHATTA MAL, 119 P. R. 1918 798

O. II, r. 2—Specific performance of agreement to lease, decree for—Possession, subsequent, suit for, maintainability of—Abandonment of claim—Cause of action—Lease granted to third person after decree, validity of.

The relief for possession is not a part of the claim which a plaintiff suing for the specific performance of an agreement to lease is entitled to make in respect of the breach of the defendant's agreement to demise the land.

Therefore, where a plaintiff obtained a decree for the specific performance of an agreement to lease and after the execution of the lease by the defendant brought a suit for possession of the land demised:

Held, that the suit for possession was not barred by the provisions of Order II, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. N PANDU v. SITAL PRASAD, 14 N. L. R. 176 188

O. III, r. 4 14

O. V, r. 17—Summons, service of, modes of—Copy of summons delivered to defendant—Refusal to sign acknowledgment—Failure to affirm copy to door—Service, whether effected.

The object of serving a summons is that the defendant may be informed of the institution of the suit in sufficient time before the date fixed for the hearing, and the procedure laid down for the service of summonses is intended to guard against fraud and ensure that the proper person has been served.

There are three modes of serving a summons on a defendant: (1) by delivery of a copy of the summons to the defendant personally or to an agent or some one on his behalf and by obtaining the signature of the person to whom the said copy is delivered to an acknowledgment of service endorsed on the original summons;

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

(2) by affixing a copy of the summons on the door of the defendant's residence or place of business;

(3) by effecting substituted service as laid down in rule 20 of Order V of the Civil Procedure Code.

Where a copy of the summons was delivered to the defendant who refused to sign the required acknowledgment, but no copy of the summons was affixed to the door of his house:

Held, that the summons was not duly served. P DIWAN CHAND v. PARBATI, 99 P. R. 1918; 184 P. W. R. 1918 28

O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings—Party, whether can resile from statement of Plead—Discretion of Court.

Where in a case, after the evidence had been recorded and the case had become ripe for judgment, the Court found that the plaintiff's Plead had, in the beginning of the trial and as a result of misinformation, made a wrong statement, and allowed the plaintiff to resile from it:

Held, that the Court was justified in exercising the wide discretion conferred upon it under Order VI, rule 17, of the Civil Procedure Code. P CHUHAR BAI v. RAMA NAND, 113 P. W. R. 1918 114

O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings—Written statement—Plea, new, whether can be allowed to be taken at late stage.

Where more than a year after the settling of issues in a suit, when the case was completely ready for hearing, the defendant sought to be allowed to put in a fresh written statement raising a completely new point about which the defendant had no real information:

Held, that he could not be allowed to do so. Pat BISHENDAYAL v. JAISERI KUER, (1918) PAT. 323 746

O. IX, r. 8, O. XIV, r. 1, cl. (5)—Date fixed for settlement of issues, whether date fixed for hearing.

The date fixed for the settlement of issues is a date fixed for the hearing of the suit within the meaning of Order IX, rule 8 of the Civil Procedure Code. Pat FIRM OF HAR CHAND RAI-ANAND RAM v. RAM BAHADUR SINGH, (1919) PAT. 32 192

O. IX, r. 9 961

O. IX, r. 13, scope of—Mortgage decree—Final decree passed ex parte, application to set aside, maintainability of.

A final decree passed ex parte in a mortgage suit is a 'decree' within the meaning of Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, and an application to set it aside is, therefore, maintainable under the rule. M KANAKASUNDARAM PILLAI v. SOMASUNDARAM PILLAI, 35 M. L. J. 375 71

O. X, r. 4—Personal attendance of parties, when to be ordered.

Before a legal order can be passed against a party directing him to appear in Court under the provisions of Order X, rule 4 of the Civil Procedure Code, it is necessary that the Court should find, in the first place, that there are material questions relating to the suit which must be answered either by such party or by his Plead, and when such party has a Plead, it is only when the Plead is unable or refuses to answer those questions that the Court may direct the party to appear in person. O NUR-UL-ISLAM v. QADIR BAKHSI, 21 O. C. 252 269

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XI, r. 21—Discovery of documents, order for—Failure to obey order, effect of.

Where a party fails to comply with an order for discovery, the proper remedy is for the party seeking discovery to apply to have the proceedings stayed or the suit dismissed. Pat KUNJ LAL v. BANWARI LALL 711

O. XIV, r. 1, cl. (5) 192

O. XX, r. 1, O. XXII, r. 6—Death of party before conclusion of arguments—Judgment, delivery of, after death, effect of.

Where a party to a suit died after arguments were partly heard and judgment was pronounced on a subsequent day when the arguments were closed without the legal representative of the deceased being brought on the record:

Held, that the judgment was a nullity and was not binding on the deceased's representative.

Order XX, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, contemplates that all arguments should be heard before the case can be regarded as ripe for judgment. M AMMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAMAYYA 859

O. XX, r. 4—Judgment of Court of Small Causes, contents of.

Where in accordance with the provisions of Order XX, rule 4 of the Civil Procedure Code, the judgment of a Court of Small Causes contains the points for determination and the Judge's decision thereon, but omits to give reasons for the decision, the High Court will not interfere with it. C PROTAP CHUNDRA DUTT v. ABHIMANINI SURINI 752

O. XX, r. 14 470

O. XXI, r. 2 109, 135

O. XXI, r. 2—Execution of decree—Payment out of Court—Satisfaction not certified—Execution, application for—Suit by judgment-debtor for damages—Cause of action—Damages, measure of—Limitation.

Where a decree-holder does not certify a payment made to him out of Court by the judgment-debtor towards the satisfaction of the decree under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, and takes out execution without giving credit for such payment, the judgment-debtor has a right to sue the decree-holder for any damage he may have suffered by the latter's neglect to certify and by the proceedings in execution.

Such a suit is one for breach of the implied promise to certify payment to the Court and to make it effectual in execution.

In such a case the filing of the execution petition in itself gives a cause of action though no money may have been realized, and successive applications may give rise to successive breaches and fresh causes of action. If money is subsequently realized, that will give a fresh cause of action as a further breach of the covenant and the amount recovered will form the main portion of the damages; but where money is not realized, the damages awarded can only be by way of compensation for any injury caused to the judgment-debtor and for any loss he may have been put to by the attempted execution of a satisfied decree.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Such a suit is governed by Article 115 and not by Article 120 of the Limitation Act. M GOPALASAMI NAICK v. NAMMALWAR NAICK, (1919) M. W. N. 3; 36 M. L. J. 175 810

O. XXI, r. 2, O. XXXIV, rr. 2, 5

—Mortgage decree for sale—Payment out of Court of amount of preliminary decree, plea of, maintainability of—Certificate under O. XXI, r. 2, production of, effect of.

Under Order XXXIV, rules 2 and 5, Civil Procedure Code, a final decree for sale should be passed if the amount specified in the preliminary decree has not been paid into Court within the time specified. The Court will not recognise any plea, at the time of passing the decree for sale, to the effect that the amount has been paid out of Court to the decree-holder. In this respect, the scheme of the Code differs from the provisions laid down in section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act.

If, however, between the passing of the preliminary decree and the passing of the decree for sale the defendant obtains a certificate under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, he can take advantage of it to reduce the amount for which the property is to be sold and the decision will be the same as if, at the time when the decree for sale was being made, he came forward and paid the amount into Court. M SINGA RAJA v. PETHU RAJA, 8 L. W. 497; 35 M. L. J. 579; (19'8) M. W. N. 809; 24 M. L. T. 501; 42 M. 61 196

O. XXI, r. 2 (3)—Execution of decree

—Payment out of Court not certified, effect of.

Where a judgment-debtor makes a payment out of Court to the decree-holder towards the satisfaction of the decree, he is nevertheless not entitled in execution proceedings under the decree to claim the benefit of the payment unless he has complied with the provisions of Order XXI, rule 2, sub-rule (3) of the Civil Procedure Code. Pat SUKHEE KUMRI v. MAHAMAYA PRASAD SINGH 765

O. XXI, r. 16—Commissioner, examination of witnesses by—Demeanour of witness, note of.

Per Woodroffe, J.—A Commissioner for the examination of witnesses is entitled by law to note his observations as to the demeanour of the witnesses examined by him. C MARIAM BIBI v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, 28 O. L. J. 306 561

O. XXI, r. 21 39

O. XXI, r. 32—Injunction, decree for, mode of execution of—Execution, whether can be effected through Police—Hereditary office, decree passed with regard to, whether binds legal representatives of parties—Civil Court, power of—Procedure.

A decree for a perpetual injunction was passed in favour of the plaintiffs and the defendants third party, restraining the defendants second party from interfering with the right of the plaintiffs and of the defendants third party to perform the "Singas Arti" ceremony in a temple. The legal representatives of the defendants second party caused an obstruction to the performance of the ceremony by the defendants third party, and the latter applied for execution of the decree through the Police:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, (1) that the decree having been passed both in favour of the plaintiffs and of the defendants third party, the latter were entitled to execute it;

(2) that if the defendants second party disobeyed the order of the Court, they were liable to the penalties mentioned in Order XXI, rule 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, which prescribed the manner for the execution of a decree for injunction and that the Court had no power to order the Police to see that the decree-holders performed the ceremony without obstruction by the defendants second party;

(3) that as the suit was brought by the plaintiffs on the basis of a right which they claimed as the descendants of the founder of the temple, the injunction was granted against the defendants not as individuals but as persons claiming a right as descendants of the original founder and that therefore the decree could be enforced against their legal representatives also. A GORDHANLALJI v. MAKSUDAN BALLABH, 16 A. L. J. 700; 40 A. 648. 26

O. XXI, r. 34.

Action taken by the Court under Order XXI, rule 34 of the Civil Procedure Code, in execution of a decree for specific performance of a contract of lease is a proceeding in the suit itself.

Therefore, a transfer of the property in dispute by the judgment-debtor effected after the passing of the decree but before action is taken under Order XXI, rule 34 of the Civil Procedure Code, would be affected by the doctrine of lis pendens. N PANDU v. SITAL PRASAD, 14 N. L. R. 176. 188

O. XXI, r. 53—Decree for mesne profits and costs, whether immoveable property—Attachment of decree—Decree, whether can be sold—Procedure.

In a suit by a mortgagee the Court passed a decree in favour of the mortgagee for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property, unless the persons in possession of the property redeemed the mortgage by a certain date. There was also a decree for costs and mesne profits in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants redeemed the mortgage, so that the only decree which remained subsisting was for mesne profits and costs. This decree was attached and sought to be sold by a creditor of the mortgagee in execution of a decree obtained by him against the mortgagee:

Held, that the decree as attached was a decree for money within the meaning of Order XXI of the Civil Procedure Code and that the only procedure which the attaching decree-holder could adopt was to execute the decree under Order XXI, rule 53. PAT LACHMAN OJHA v. CHARITER OJHA, (1918) PAT. 257; 5 P. L. W. 191. 183

O. XXI, r. 53 (6)

O. XXI, rr. 54, 57, O. XXXVIII, rr. 5, 6, 7, 11—Attachment ordered before but effected after judgment, effect of—Execution application, dismissal of, effect of, on attachment.

An attachment which is ordered in a suit before judgment cannot be treated as a nullity merely because, as a matter of fact, the attachment is not actually completed until after judgment.

Order XXI, rule 57, Civil Procedure Code, has no application to attachments ordered under Order XXXVIII, rule 5.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Per Phillips, J.—When a Court makes an order under Order XXXVIII, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code, that order cannot be deprived of all force by the mere failure of the executive officers of the Court to carry it out before the decree is passed.

Per Kumarasawmi Sastri, J.—There is nothing in Order XXXVIII, rules 5 to 12, Civil Procedure Code, requiring that the actual attachment in pursuance of the order directing conditional attachment should be made before the passing of the decree. Attachment of the property in the manner prescribed by Order XXI, rule 54, is a purely ministerial act. Any delay of the officers of Court in effecting the attachment should not prejudice the decree-holder and the validity of the order of attachment under Order XXXVIII, rule 5, should not depend on the date when it is actually effected. An attachment ordered before judgment invalidates an alienation made after the property is actually attached in pursuance of the order, even though the actual attachment was made after the passing of the decree. M RUDRAVARAM VENKATASUBBIAH v. RUDRAVARAM VENKATA SESHAIYA, (1918) M. W. N. 806; 35 M. L. J. 37; 8 L. W. 36; 24 M. L. T. 343; 43 M. 1. 232

O. XXI, rr. 54 (2), 57, 63, 90—

Execution of decree—Sale—Proclamation, formalities necessary for—Omission to comply with necessary formalities, effect of.

A copy of the proclamation of sale must, under rule 67 read with rule 54 (2) of Order XXI of the Civil Procedure Code, be affixed upon a conspicuous part of the Court house, and under rule 63 of the Order the sale must take place after the expiration of at least 30 days from the day on which the copy of the proclamation is so affixed. An omission to comply with any of those formalities is a material irregularity in the publication of the sale within the meaning of Order XXI, rule 90, of the Civil Procedure Code and vitiates the sale. N LAXMINARAYAN v. PURNABAI. 611

O. XXI, rr. 55, 58, 60, 63—

Execution of decree—Attachment, withdrawal and revival of—Objection allowed—Declaration, suit for, by decree-holder, decree in, effect of—Decree reversed in appeal but restored in second appeal—Attachment, whether revived.

Where an execution Court allowed an objection under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, and referred the unsuccessful decree-holder to a regular suit, but did not pass any order under Order XXI, rule 60, of the Code raising the attachment, and the decree-holder thereafter filed a declaratory suit and obtained a decree in his favour:

Held, that in view of the provisions of Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code, the result of the decree passed in the declaratory suit was to revive the attachment which had been previously carried out, even if it be assumed that the legal effect of allowing the objection had been to raise the attachment.

Where the decree of a Court of first instance is reversed in first appeal but restored in second appeal, the result of the decision in second appeal is to revive the attachment which, under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 55, Civil Procedure Code, is deemed to have been withdrawn in consequence of the decision in first appeal. O. PARMESHA DIN v. DEBI PRASAD, 5 O. L. J. 647 386

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XXI, r. 57 232

O. XXI, r. 57—Execution of decree—

Attachment of decree—Execution case dismissed for default, effect of—Attachment, whether raised—Purchaser of attached decree, position of.

A decree-holder applied for the attachment of a decree belonging to his judgment-debtor. The executing Court ordered the decree to be attached, but on the date fixed for orders dismissed the execution case for default. After the order for dismissal the judgment-debtor sold the attached decree to one A:

Held, (1) that until the attached decree had been realised by the decree-holder there was nothing further to be done by him in the execution case, so that the executing Court had no jurisdiction to dismiss the case for default;

(2) that notwithstanding the order for dismissal of the case, the attachment of the decree continued to subsist;

(3) that, therefore, A acquired no title to the decree by his purchase as against the attaching decree-holder, and had no right to execute it.

So long as an attachment of a decree, remains in force, any dealings by the original decree-holder or any transfer or delivery of property comprised in the decree is void as against the claims enforceable under the attachment. PAT MUHAMMAD AMIRUL HASAN v. WAZIR BIBI, (1918) PAT. 353 786

O. XXI, r. 58 386

O. XXI, rr. 53, 63—Limitation Act

(IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 11—Refusal to investigate claim, whether order under r. 63—Order that claim be notified to bidders—Suit by claimant to establish title—Limitation applicable.

Where a Court purports to make an order under the proviso to Order XXI, rule 54, Civil Procedure Code, i.e., an order refusing to investigate, the order comes within the mischief of Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code, and Article 11 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

An order on a claim petition which expresses no final judgment upon the right put forward but simply directs the sale after notifying the claim, is an order against the claimant and his suit to establish his title is governed by Article 11 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The practice of notifying claims to intending bidders is not warranted by anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure. It often leads to the depreciation in value of the property to be sold and is not calculated to advance the right of the claimant in any way. M. MACHI RAJU VENKATARAMAN v. VADREYU RANGANAYAKANNA, 8 L. W. 292; 35 M. L. J. 315; (1918) M. W. N. 599; 240

O. XXI, r. 60 386

O. XXI, rr. 60, 61—Claim proceedings

Investigation of claims—Court, duty of.

Order XXI, rules 60 and 61, Civil Procedure Code, lay down the lines on which the investigation of claims preferred to properties under attachment should proceed. The Court should consider whether at the time of attachment the property was in the possession of the judgment-debtor as his own property, and not on account of any other person or in trust for him. If this entails a consideration of the bona fides of a sale in his favour set up by the objector or the legal effect of the deed of conveyance including the circumstances of its registration, such matters should be gone into. L. B. CHETTY, E. N. M. K. v. CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA AND CHINA, 11 BUR. L. T. 118 182

Civil Procedure Code—1903—contd.

O. XXI, r. 63 270, 386

O. XXI, r. 66—Execution of decree—

Sale proclamation—Valuation of property to be sold, method of.

Where an executing Court directed that the value of the property to be sold should be reckoned at twenty times the Government Revenue:

Held, that this was only a colourable pretence of exercising the jurisdiction vested in the Court by law to ascertain the actual value of the property and record it in the sale proclamation and that the Court should ascertain the value of the property by a reference to the rent-roll and to the Record of Rights showing the extent of the zirāits and bakāsh lands of the village. PAT JAGGARNATH PERSHAD v. CHITRAGUPTA NARAIN SINGH, 3 P. L. J. 590 141

O. XXI, rr. 67, 68 611

O. XXI, r. 89 14

O. XXI, r. 90 611, 970

O. XXI, r. 90.

The language of Order XXI, rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code, which gives a Court power to set aside sales on the ground of fraud in publishing and conducting the sale, is wide enough to include cases where fraud is committed after the publication of the sale proclamation.

Where a decree-holder agreed not to proceed with an execution sale on a promise by the judgment-debtor to pay up the whole of the decretal money within two months, but nevertheless proceeded to sell the property in contravention of his agreement:

Held, (1) that the conduct of the decree-holder amounted to fraud in the matter of conducting the sale and that the proper provision under which the judgment-debtor could come and impeach the sale was Order XXI, rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code;

(2) that no second appeal lay against the order setting aside the sale. PAT MAULA BUX v. RAGHUBAR GANJHU, 3 P. L. J. 615 560

O. XXI, rr. 91, 92, 93 33

O. XXI, r. 96 129

O. XXII, r. 4, O. XXX, r. 4—Suit by persons described as proprietors of firm, decree in—Appeal—Respondent, death of—Representative not brought on record, effect of.

Order XXX, rule 4, of the Civil Procedure Code applies only to a case where the suit is brought in the name of the firm.

In a suit where the description of the plaintiffs as given in the plaint was "the proprietors and maliks" of a firm and then the names of the plaintiffs were mentioned, the Court below gave a decree to the plaintiffs and in the decree one B. and other persons were described as the plaintiffs without the addition of the words that they were maliks of the firm. After an appeal from the decree had been filed by the defendant one of the plaintiffs-respondents died, but his legal representatives were not brought on the record within the time allowed by law:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that the decree being in favour of the plaintiffs jointly the appeal could not proceed in the absence of the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff-respondent. C MONMOHAN PANDAY v. BIDHU BHUSAN RAY CHOWDHURY, 28 O' L. J. 268 309

— O. XXII, r. 6 859

— O. XXII, r. 10 840

— O. XXIII, r. 1, applicability of—Withdrawal of suit—Sufficient ground.

Under Order XXIII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, a suit can only be withdrawn with permission to bring a fresh suit when the Court is satisfied that the suit must fail for reason of some formal defect or that there are other sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. The sufficient grounds contemplated in the second clause of the rule must be grounds closely analogous to the grounds given in the first clause.

The provisions of Order XXIII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, must be strictly applied. PAT MAHENDRA RAM v. SINGI LAL, 3 P. L. J. 651 197

— O. XXIII, r. 1 (2).

The main object of sub-rule 2, rule 1, Order XXIII of the Civil Procedure Code, is to prevent a defect of justice on technical grounds. Where no formal defect necessitating failure of the suit is shown to exist, there must still be a defect which has the effect of shutting out a fair trial on the merits and arises out of some error made in good faith by the plaintiff which can only be effectively set right by a trial de novo. N DOMA v. DAYARAM 1005

— O. XXV—Security for costs—Insolvent, undischarged, suit by—Cause of action accruing after adjudication—Security, whether can be demanded—Principles applicable.

An undischarged insolvent suing to recover a sum due to him from the defendant and earned by him subsequent to the adjudication cannot be compelled to give security for costs merely because he is an insolvent, unless he is a nominal plaintiff acting on behalf of the trustee or for the benefit of others.

An application for an order that the plaintiff, who is an undischarged insolvent, be directed to give security for costs of the suit is not covered by any provision of the Civil Procedure Code and should be dealt with under the general law.

It is well settled in English Law that a bankrupt is the proper plaintiff to sue in respect of property acquired by him after adjudication and that anything recovered by him remains in the bankrupt until the trustee intervenes, and the same principles are applicable in this country under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. C MURRAY v. EAST BENGAL MAHAJAN FLOTILLA CO., 22 C. W. N. 1018 622

— O. XXX, r. 4 309

— O. XXXII, r. 3—Minor judgment-debtor—Guardian, appointment of—Formal order, absence of, effect of.

Where in an execution proceeding the Court by its action has given its sanction to the appearance of a person as guardian of a minor judgment-debtor and that person has so appeared and acted on behalf of the minor, the absence of a formal order of appointment under Order XXXII, rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, is not fatal to the proceedings and the minor is bound by them. PAT KESHAWESAR-INDRA SAHI v. DEBENDRA BALA DASSI 245

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— O. XXXII, r. 5 14

— O. XXXII, r. 7, applicability of, to revenue proceedings—Compromise in mutation proceedings on behalf of minor without leave of Court, validity of.

The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure do not apply en bloc to proceedings in Courts constituted under the Land Revenue Act.

A minor was represented in certain mutation proceedings by his elder brother, who bona fide entered into a compromise with the other party. The leave of the Court as required by Order XXXII, rule 7, of the Civil Procedure Code was, however, not obtained for this settlement:

Held, that the compromise was not bad merely for want of such leave. O HARPAL SINGH v. SUKHRANI, 21 O. C. 220 119

— O. XXXII, r. 7, Sch. II, cl. 20—

Minor, party to dispute—Reference to arbitration by next friend—Award filed and decree passed without opposition—O. XXXII, r. 7, applicability of—Decree, whether binding on minor.

When a dispute, to which a minor is a party, is submitted to arbitration out of Court by the next friend of the minor and the award made upon such submission is brought into Court by the next friend under clause 20 of the Second Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code, and the Court is asked to file it and thereafter pass a decree upon it, the opposite party not objecting, the Court is not bound to sanction the agreement to have the award filed and a decree passed upon it, as for the benefit of the minor, or to certify the decree, nor is the minor entitled to the protection of Order XXXII, rule 7 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Where a minor through his next friend applies that an award be filed and a decree passed upon it, and the other party to the reference raises no objection to the application, and the award is filed and a decree passed in accordance with it, it cannot be said that there has been any agreement on behalf of the minor with reference to the suit in which the next friend is acting, although were the minor the defendant in such a suit as is numbered under clause 20 of the Second Schedule, it might be that a promise given on behalf of the minor to allow the award to be filed without opposition and a decree passed in accordance with it would be an agreement on behalf of the minor with reference to the suit within the meaning of Order XXXII, rule 7 of the Civil Procedure Code. B HANMANTRAM RADHAKISAN v. SRIVINARAYAN ASURAM, 20 BOM. L. R. 970 238

— O. XXXIV, r. 2 196

— O. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5, 10—Mortgage suit—Costs in appeal, whether part of decretal amount—Practice.

Costs awarded in mortgage suits, including costs of appeal, form part of the decretal amount and are realisable in the first instance by sale of the mortgaged property and not otherwise. O SADIQ HUSSAIN KHAN v. UMMAT UL FATIMA BEGUM 329

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd. :

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XXXIV, r. 5 196, 245

O. XXXIV, r. 5—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 93—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 6 (c)—Limitation Act (IX of 1903), Sch. I, Arts. 18, 18¹, 18²—Mortgage suit—Decree under Transfer of Property Act—Final decree under Civil Procedure Code, application for, maintainability of—Order absolute—Limitation.

A preliminary decree for sale was passed in a mortgage suit under the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. The new Civil Procedure Code, Act V of 1908, having come into force before the expiry of the time fixed in the preliminary decree for payment of the mortgage amount, the mortgagee applied for a final decree under Order XXXIV, rule 5, Civil Procedure Code:

Held, (1) that a final and executable decree was passed in the case under the Transfer of Property Act, notwithstanding that the direction in the decree for the sale of the property was made conditional on default of payment of the amount found due to the plaintiff by a certain date;

(2) that the decree-holder's remedy was to apply for an order absolute;

(3) that the matter was governed by Article 182 and not by Article 181 of the Limitation Act.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—The repeal of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act regarding mortgage decrees could not, having regard to section 6, clause (c) of the General Clauses Act, deprive the holder of a mortgage decree passed under it of his remedy by way of getting an order absolute in respect of his right under the decree so as to make it executable in the strict sense. M RAMASAMI REDDI v. SOKKAPPA REDDI, 35 M. L. J. 194 732

O. XXXIV, r. 5 (2) 185, 934

O. XXXIV, r. 6—Mortgage decree—Compromise providing for sale of properties not subject to mortgage—Order of Court, whether necessary—Procedure.

A compromise in a mortgage suit provided that if the amount due under the mortgage was not realised by sale of the mortgaged properties, the other properties of the judgment-debtor should be pursued in due course. A decree was passed in accordance with the compromise and the mortgaged properties having been sold, the decree-holders sought to proceed against the other properties of the judgment-debtor:

Held, that a formal order under Order XXXIV, rule 6, of the Civil Procedure Code was a necessary preliminary before proceeding against the properties not covered by the mortgage. PAT KARIMULLA SHAH v. MUHAMMAD RAZA, 3 P. L. J. 149 608

O. XXXIV, r. 6—Mortgage decree—Mortgaged properties not exhausted—Mortgagee, whether entitled to personal decree.

Order XXXIV, rule 6, of the Civil Procedure Code does not mean that a personal decree against the mortgagor cannot be obtained in any case where the whole of the mortgaged properties directed to be sold have not been sold for whatever cause it may be.

Where there is a deficiency after the sale of all the mortgaged properties which were available for sale at the date of sale under the mortgage decree, the mortgagee-decree-holder is entitled to enforce the liability of the mortgagor under Order XXXIV, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code.

If it can be shown that the properties which were included in the mortgage and which could be sold in pursuance of the mortgage decree were in fact not sold owing to some action or default of the mortgagee, then the mortgagee would be debarred from obtaining a decree for personal liability under Order XXXIV, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code.

But the fact that some of the properties included in the mortgage decree have, since the date of the decree and by reason of the prosecution of his rights by a prior mortgagee and through no act or default of the decree-holder-mortgagee, ceased to be available for sale, is not sufficient to debar the claim of the mortgagee-decree-holder for a personal decree under Order XXXIV, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code.

After the plaintiff, a second mortgagee, had obtained a mortgage decree, the mortgagor was adjudicated an insolvent. On an application made by a prior mortgagee to the Insolvency Court most of the mortgaged properties were sold by the Official Assignee free from all incumbrances. This sale, which was not objected to by the plaintiff, was not sufficient to pay off even the claim of the prior mortgagee. The remaining items of the mortgaged properties were then sold by the plaintiff under his mortgage decree but the price realised by the sale was very small. The plaintiff thereupon applied for a personal decree against the mortgagor and his sureties:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a personal decree under Order XXXIV, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code, although all the properties included in the mortgage decree obtained by him had not been sold under that decree. C SATISH RANJAN DAS v. MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LTD., 45 C. 702 322

O. XXXIV, r. 6 (2) 298

O. XXXIV, r. 10 329

O. XXXIV, r. 14 794

O. XXXVIII, r. 11 232

O. XL, r. 1—Administrator, insolvency of—Receiver, appointment of

Where a person, who holds certain property partly in his personal and partly in a representative capacity as an administrator, becomes an insolvent, his personal share in the property vests in the Official Assignee and the latter, as trustee for the creditors of the insolvent, is entitled to have a Receiver appointed of the whole of the property till the share of the creditors is determined. It is immaterial that the bodies for whom the insolvent holds the property as administrator are content to leave their shares in his hands. L B OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE v. MAHOMED HADI, 11 BUR. L. T. 127 152

O. XL, r. 1, O. XLIII, r. 1 (s)—Receiver, appointment of—Objection by person in possession, dismissal of—Appeal, whether lies.

The applicant advanced money to one T, and in consideration of that was appointed manager of T's estate and was put in possession of it. Subsequently certain creditors of T obtained a decree against him and in execution of that decree a Receiver was appointed and put in possession of T's estate. Thereupon the applicant preferred an objection to the appointment of the Receiver and to the delivery of possession of the estate, which was dismissed:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that the order dismissing the applicant's objection came within Order XL, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, and was appealable under Order XLIII, rule 1 (s), of the Code. PAT AGABEG v. SUNDARI, 3 P. L. J. 573 133

O. XLI, r. 1, O. XLIII, r. 1 (s)—

Receiver, appointment of—Possession, resistance to—Court, order by—Appeal, whether lies

The powers of a Receiver are regulated by Order XL of the Civil Procedure Code and the only ground upon which his possession can be resisted is sub-clause (2) of rule 1 of Order XL of the Code.

Where a person who refuses to deliver possession to a Receiver is ordered by the Court to do so, his remedy is by appeal under Order XLIII, rule 1 (s), of the Civil Procedure Code. PAT DULHIN SONA KUER v. JAMIL AHMAD 779

O. XLI, r. 1—Appeal, presentation of—

Decree of lower Appellate Court, copy of, not containing grounds of appeal to that Court, whether proper copy.

Along with his memorandum of appeal to the Chief Court appellant filed a copy of the lower Appellate Court's decree which did not contain the grounds of appeal to that Court:

Held, that the copy filed by the appellant was a proper copy of the decree within the meaning of Order XLI, rule 1, of the Civil Procedure Code and that the appeal to the Chief Court had been properly presented. P. RAM PEARA v. RUP LAL, 80 P. R. 1948; 181 P. W. R. 198 102

O. XLI, r. 10—Appeal in forma pauperis —Security for costs, whether can be demanded.

A plaintiff preferring an appeal in forma pauperis cannot be required to give security for costs of the original suit or of the appeal. C KANCHANI BEWA v. JADUB PRAMANIK 971

O. XLI, r. 22 203, 1003O. XLI, rr. 22, 33, scope of—Cross- objection by respondent against co-respondent, whether entertainable—Hindu Law—Reversionary heirs joining in mortgage by female, whether bound by mortgage.

Order XLI, rule 22, of the Civil Procedure Code is wide enough to cover a cross-objection by one respondent against another. But a cross-objection by a respondent as against his co-respondent should not be allowed under this rule where the matters sought to be raised by the cross-objection have no relation to or connection with the question raised by the appeal.

A Hindu female in possession of property inherited from her deceased father or mother mortgaged it by a deed which recited legal necessity. Some of her sons joined in the mortgage:

Held, that the sons who joined in the mortgage were estopped from denying that there was legal necessity for the mortgage and that the mortgage and the execution sale consequent thereon were binding on the property in their hands after the death of their mother.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Per Sanderson, C. J.—Order XLI, rule 33, Civil Procedure Code, gives important and useful powers to a Court of Appeal, which a Court of Appeal would not hesitate to make use of on a proper occasion.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Order XLI, rule 33, Civil Procedure Code, must be cautiously applied, for instance, applied generally in cases where but for recourse to it the ends of justice would be defeated. Thus the rule should not be allowed to be invoked in favour of a litigant so as to enable him to evade the provisions of other Statutes such as the Limitation Act or the Court Fees Act. C SHIB CHANDRA KAR v. DULCKEN, 28 C. L. J. 123 78

O. XLI, r. 23, O. XLIII, r. 1 (u)

—Remand, order of—Appeal—Finding of fact, whether can be disturbed.

In an appeal from an order remanding a case under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Chief Court can no more go into questions of fact than it can in the case of second appeals. P WARYAM SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH, 109 P. R. 1918 379

O. XLI, rr. 25, 27—Appeal—Appellate

Court, whether can order retrial of issues tried by trial Court.

Order XLI, rule 25, of the Civil Procedure Code does not contemplate an order by the Appellate Court directing a retrial by the primary Court of the issues tried and determined by that Court.

If an Appellate Court considers that any question of fact essential to the right decision of the suit has not been tried and determined by the trial Court, it may frame issues and direct the trial of such issues in the manner provided by Order XLI, rule 25, or it may proceed in the manner provided in Order XLI, rule 27. C CHANDRA KUMAR BISWAS v. NABI BUX 959

O. XLI, r. 27 959, 1007O. XLI, r. 27 cl. (2), O. XLVII,

r. 1—Appeal—Additional evidence, admission of—Review—Decree, whether can be set aside on happening of subsequent event—Procedure.

A mere omission to comply with Order XLI, rule 27, clause 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not render the additional evidence taken in second appeal inadmissible especially when no objection is taken by the opposite party.

Section 628, Civil Procedure Code of 1882, does not authorize a review of a decree which was right when it was made on the ground of the happening of some subsequent event. The proper course in such cases is to request the Court to accept additional evidence regarding the subsequent event and the Court is justified in taking such evidence into consideration. P NEKI v. CHAJJU RAM, 111 P. W. R. 1918 137

O. XLI, r. 33 78, 193, 1000,

1003

O. XLIII, r. 1 (s) 133, 779O. XLIII, r. 1 (u) 379*O. XLVII, r. 1 129, 137

O. XLVII, r. 1—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 120 A, 125—Review—Rent appeal—Judicial Commissioner, whether can review decision.

The Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh has power under the Code of Civil Procedure to review its own decision given in a rent appeal. This power is not affected by the provisions of section 110A of Act XXII of 1886 which gives authority to the Board of Revenue to review its decisions. O PARTAB BHADUR (SINGH v BADLU, 21 O. C. 254 276

Civil Procedure Code—1908—conold.

Sch. II, paras. 2, 5—Arbitrator refusing to act—Appointment of new arbitrator—Procedure—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 8.

The provisions of paragraph 5 of the Second Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code relating to the appointment of an arbitrator by a party in the event of the arbitrator previously appointed refusing to act must be read with the provisions embodied in paragraph 2 of the same Schedule, so that both parties must concur in appointing an arbitrator in place of the one who has refused to act, and the appointment does not rest solely with the party who has been served with a written notice by his opponent. P CHARTA RAM v. SAJAN MAL, 112 P. R. 1918 395

Sch. II, para. 5 395
Sch. II, paras. 14, 21—Arbitration out of Court—Revocation of submission, grounds for—Delay caused by voluntary absence of party, effect of—Award failing to determine question submitted, effect of—Procedure.

Where parties submit their differences to arbitration, they cannot be allowed to revoke or withdraw from the submission except for very good cause.

Where delay in making an award by the arbitrators was caused by the voluntary absence of one of the parties, that party cannot impugn the award on the ground of delay. Nor is such delay a sufficient ground for revocation of the submission by the party in default.

In cases where a reference to arbitration is made by the order of the Court, the Court may remit the award for the determination of matters left undetermined under paragraph 14 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code, but in the case of arbitration without the intervention of the Court paragraph 21 of the Schedule confers no such power on the Court and if any of the matters referred to in paragraph 14 of the Schedule is proved, the Court has no option but to refuse to file the award. PAT KUNJ LAL v. BANWARI LALL 711

Sch. II, para. 20 238
Sch. II, para. 21 711, 953

Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 169
—Appeal—Service of notice after expiry of 3 months—Delay beyond appellant's control—Extension of time—Reasonable cause.

Where a notice of appeal in the matter of the liquidation of a company was served upon the respondents after the expiry of the period of 3 weeks prescribed by Statute and it appeared that the delay was due to a blunder on the part of the copying department and beyond the control of the appellant:

Held, that the time for the service of notice of appeal was rightly extended. P KUNDAN LAL v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, DIAMOND JUBILEE FLOUR MILLS COMPANY, LTD 919

Confession, extra-judicial, value of.

Evidence as to extra-judicial confessions of his guilt by an accused person is by itself of very little importance, as such evidence is easy to adduce and Confession—conold.

difficult to rebut. M MELLOR v. MUTHIAH CHETTY, 35 M. L. J. 518; 9 L. W. 113; 20 Cr. L. J. 101 981

Construction of document 18, 39, 76, 396

—Bond—Time fixed for payment—Limitation, commencement of.

A registered bond provided that the money lent thereunder would be repaid at the end of Jeth 1317 Fasli corresponding to the end of June 1910. The bond was sued upon on the 29th of June 1916:

Held, that for the purpose of this agreement the parties must be taken to have settled between themselves that the last day of Jeth 1317 Fasli was to be the same as the last day of June 1910, and that, therefore, the suit was within time. O BADSHAH KHANUM v. BISHUNATH SINGH 332

—Mortgage or sale—Intention of parties.

Where the parties to a document use words that indicate a mortgage by way of conditional sale and all the terms contained in the document are consistent with the terms of a mortgage by way of conditional sale, the proper construction is that the document is a mortgage by way of conditional sale, and it cannot be contended that the intention of the parties as gathered from the instrument was to make an out-and-out sale subject to the right of re-purchase on re-payment of the money within the stipulated time. C CHANDRA MOYI OHOWDHURANI v. GREGSON 465

—Taluka, succession to, settled by agreement—Agreement, deed of, interpretation of—Transferable interest, whether acquired.

A dispute regarding succession to a taluka belonging to a Muhammadan gentleman A in respect of which proceedings under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, had been taken against its three claimants, B, C and D, was settled by mutual agreement, the relevant terms of which were as follows:—

1. The taluka will not for the present be divided.
2. The taluka will be released in favour of all the three claimants and the evidence adduced in the proceedings under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, will be regarded as proof of possession of all of them.
3. Mutation of names in respect of the taluka will be made in favour of all the three claimants subject to the conditions laid down in the agreement.
4. Each of the three claimants will take a few villages for his personal expenses.
5. Each of the three claimants will in succession hold the office of the taluqdar of the entire taluka without the power of alienation.
6. All the debts due from A will be a charge on the taluka and the taluqdar for the time being will utilize the net income of the taluka in payment of those debts.

7. After payment of the entire debts the net profits will be divided equally between the three claimants.

8. If the taluqdar for the time being neglects the payment of debts or commits any breach of trust, the man next after him may get him ousted and may himself assume that office.

9. In case of urgent necessity, prior to the payment of the debts due by A, if the writing of a deed of alienation or hypothecation becomes necessary, then the deed will be valid only when it is signed and executed by all the three claimants.

Construction of document—concl'd.

10. The male children of B by non-biradari wife will get maintenance, and if J and D happen to have no male children by biradari wives, the former will have such heritable interest as may be permitted to them under the Muhammadan Law:

Held, that under the above agreement C and D took a transferable interest in the villages assigned to them as well as in their shares in the taluqa, which they were competent to transfer even during the time when B was the taluqdar. O BISHESHWAR NATH v. HAMID MIRZA Brg, 5 O. L. J. 583 20 — Transaction evidenced by deed, nature of—Lease or mortgage.

Where a document, which was described as a "patta gaul qarar birt rahni", recited that the taluqdar had received a certain sum from the grantee and that the latter had been put in possession of the lands described in the document, for which he had to pay a certain annual rent:

Held, that the document was nothing more than a lease and did not create any relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee between the parties. O INDER BAHADUR SINGH v. BECHAN SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 544 151 — Will, interpretation of—Legatees, several, named in succession—Estate bequeathed, nature of.

Where a Will, after stating that the testator would remain in proprietary possession of his property till his death, provided that if he left a son that son would be "the owner and possessor" of the said property, that if he left no son his widow and the widow of his predeceased son would be "the owners and possessors" thereof, and that in the event of none of them existing his daughter would be "the owner and possessor" of the same:

Held, that the Will did not confer life-estates on any of the legatees or even successive estates on the several legatees, but conferred an absolute estate on the eventual legatee, whoever such legatee might be at the time of the testator's death. O SHEO SHANKAR BAKSHI v. MITHANA KUMAR, 5 O. L. J. 604 177

Contract—Person not privy to contract, whether can take advantage of it.

A person who is not a party to a contract and with whom there is no privity, cannot gain any advantage by it whether as a plaintiff or as a defendant unless he is in the position of a cestui que trust. N SOGAI v. WARLOO 549 — to supply labour, construction of—Covenant, implied—Maps and specifications.

Plaintiffs agreed to supply labour to the defendants by loading and unloading waggons of sand for purposes of reclamation on the foreshore. The agreement was accompanied by maps and specifications. The plan showed a low rubble construction shown in section which was designated "temporary rubble toe to protect filling during reclamation." Plaintiffs sought to import into the contract an implied term that the defendants were to provide adequate protection to the filling up by sand by a temporary rubble during reclamation:

Held, that assuming that the contract had an implied condition, the condition was only to execute the protection as shown in the plan and that it was impossible to spell out of the plans and sections an obligation to do more than what was there shown.

Contract—concl'd.

P C KARACHI PORT TRUST v. DAVIDSON, 22 C. W. N. 961; 8 L. W. 324; (1918) M. W. N. 61 319

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—

Mortgage—Interest, high rate of—Transaction improvident—Hardship—Relief, whether can be given

Even where a transaction appears to be undoubtedly improvident, in the absence of any evidence to show that the mortgagee has taken undue advantage of his position, a Court of Justice cannot give relief to the mortgagor on grounds of simple hardship.

P C AZIZ KHAN v. DUNI CHAND, 101 P. R. 1918; 23 C. W. N. 130; 165 P. W. R. 1918 933

s. 16—Undue influence—Borrower in need of money—Lender, whether dominates his will.

Urgent need of money on the part of a borrower does not of itself place the lender in a position to dominate his will. O MUHAMMAD SHER KHAN v. SWAMI DAYAL, 5 O. L. J. 572 32

s. 16—Undue influence—Interest, high rate of—Court, power of, to reduce rate.

Apart from the Usurious Loans Act the mere fact that a bargain is unconscionable in the sense that the rate of interest charged is excessive, is not in itself a sufficient ground for interference by the Court. O DALPAT SINGH v. AHMAD SHAH, 5 O. L. J. 579 17

s. 16—Undue influence—Unconscionable bargain—Expectant heir, bargain with, validity of—English equitable rules, applicability of, to India—Interest, compounding of, whether oppressive.

Questions as to undue influence, unconscionable bargains and dealings with expectant heirs must be decided on the provisions of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, as amended by the Indian Contract Amendment Act, 1899, and these alone. The principles on which English Courts of Equity deal with similar questions are entirely inapplicable to India.

In money-lending transactions the mere fact that the sum ultimately claimed exceeds enormously the amount originally advanced is no ground for holding the transaction to be unconscionable. It must also appear that there is something unconscionable either in the original dealings or in the subsequent stages of the transaction.

By making short term loans and insisting on capitalising the interest immediately it falls due, a money-lender may pile up compound interest at an oppressive and unconscionable rate. But there is nothing inherently wrong or oppressive in his securing interest upon interest after the interest has been due and unpaid for a considerable time.

The Indian Contract Act throws upon the person dealing with an expectant heir and in a position to dominate the latter's will the burden of showing that he has not used his position to obtain an unfair advantage. P C BALLA MAL v. AHAD SHAH, 35 M. L. J. 614; 16 A. L. J. 905; 121 P. R. 1918; 23 C. W. N. 233; 5 M. L. T. 55; 183 P. W. R. 1918 1

s. 25—Pro-note, suit on—Consideration, release from supposed obligation, whether amounts to.

Where the Manager of an indigo factory on the one hand and the tenants of the factory on the other believed in good faith in the existence of an obligation on the part of the tenants to grow indigo on a certain proportion of their holdings and the latter, in order to obtain a release from the obligation, executed pro-notes in favour of the Manager:

Contract Act—contd.

Held, that the pro-notes were supported by valid consideration. Pat AJODHYA JHA v. E. COX 701

ss. 46, 55 550

S. 64—Guardian and ward—Sale of minor's property by guardian—Consideration, application of, in purchase of other properties for minor—Sale declared not binding on minor—Right of vendee to properties purchased—'Benefit', return of, scope of, doctrine of.

Where a sale of a minor's properties by his guardian is declared to be not binding on the minor, the vendee is not entitled to claim other properties which were purchased for the minor with the sale consideration, as a 'benefit' which the minor is bound to restore under section 64 of the Contract Act when he elects to avoid the sale, if the latter purchase was not contemplated at the time of the original sale.

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—Ordinarily, the benefit which a party receives when he sells the property is the price which the vendee pays. Any profits which the vendor might make with the moneys would be too remote in estimating what he has to return, in case he is entitled to avoid the sale and elects to do so. Where, however, for the protection of a purchaser contracting with a guardian or a qualified owner, a particular dealing with the money was in the direct contemplation of the parties, such as the purchase of other lands with the consideration, and the money is so applied, the benefit which the other party obtains will be the land or other property acquired with the consideration. There must be something more than a mere application of the consideration in a particular way in order to entitle the purchaser to claim restoration of the properties acquired with the consideration paid by him. M CHINNASWAMI REDDI v. KRISHNASWAMI REDDI, 35 M. L. J. 652; 42 M. 36 856

S. 65—Contract by minor—Mortgage—Fraudulent representation, absence of—Minor, whether liable to repay money borrowed.

A minor cannot be made to repay money which he has spent merely because he received it under a contract induced by his fraud.

In a suit for sale on a mortgage bond, the defendant pleaded that at the time of the execution of the bond he was a minor and no fraudulent representation on the part of the defendant inducing the plaintiff to enter into a contract was either alleged or found:

Held, that the defendant was not liable to repay the money borrowed by him. A RADHEY SHIAM v. BHARI LAL, 16 A. L. J. 592; 40 A. 558 478

S. 69 69

ss. 108, Excep. (1), 109—"Goods," meaning of—Transfer; fraudulent—Transferee, whether gets good title—Share certificates accompanied by blank transfer deeds, whether negotiable—Negotiability, conditions of—Usage, effect of.

One S. was the owner of certain jute shares. One U. obtained the shares from S. by fraudulent representations and sold them to L. who sold them to the plaintiff firm, the latter being bona fide purchasers. At the time of sale L., made over to the plaintiffs the share certificates and a blank transfer deed signed by J., the person then registered as owner of the shares:

Contract Act—contd.

Held, (1) that the transaction was covered by section 108 of the Contract Act and L., who bought the shares from U., did not acquire a good title to them and, therefore, could not pass a good title to the plaintiffs;

(2) that although U. was in possession of the shares, he could not give a good title under section 108, exception (1) of the Contract Act, which requires possession with the consent of the owner and which does not apply where that consent is obtained by deceit;

(3) that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from L. the price they had paid for the shares with interest.

The expression "goods" in section 108 of the Contract Act includes all moveable property.

Share certificates with blank transfer deeds endorsed by the last registered owner are not negotiable instruments.

Mere proof of usage that sales of shares are effected by delivery of the certificate accompanied by transfer deeds endorsed in blank by the last registered owner is not sufficient to make the share certificates negotiable.

Certain requirements have to be fulfilled before a document can be considered negotiable. It must be in a form which renders it capable of being sued on by the holder of it pro tempore in his own name and it must be by the custom of trade transferable like cash by delivery. Failure of these requirements prevents a document from being considered negotiable. C HAZARIMUL-SHOHANLAL v. SATISH CHANDRA GHOSH, 22 C. W. N. 1036 966

ss. 108, Exception (1), 178

—"Possession," meaning of—Juridical possession—Transfer, fraudulent, of shares by person in possession, whether confers good title on bona fide transferee—Share certificate accompanied by transfer deed, whether negotiable.

The word "possession" in Exception (1) to section 108 of the Contract Act does not apply in the case of qualified possession, such as that of a hirer of goods or where the possession is for a specific purpose. Juridical possession is different from mere possession.

A pledgee's possession is not such possession as entitles him to deal with the goods in fraud of the rights of the owner.

Share certificates accompanied by transfer deeds endorsed in blank by the last registered owner cannot be considered as negotiable instruments.

Defendant Bank purchased certain jute shares for one of their constituents and deposited them with the officer in charge of their safe custody department. The latter handed over the shares to A., the head clerk of the department, for the purpose of getting them registered in the name of the constituent for whom they had been purchased. A. fraudulently disposed of the shares to S., who sold them to M., who sold them to B., from whom the plaintiff purchased them in good faith:

Held, that inasmuch as the possession of A. did not come within the purview of section 108, Exception (1)

Contract Act—conold.

of the Contract Act, he could not transfer a good title to S. and that the subsequent sellers did not pass a good title to their respective purchasers. C ROOPCHAND JANKIDAS v. NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD., 22 G. W. N. 1042 975

s. 176—Bailment—Pledge—Notice, whether necessary before suit.

Section 176 of the Contract Act requires a notice only when the pawnee wishes to exercise his option of selling the pledged goods. If he chooses to bring a suit upon the debt, no notice is required by that section. N JWALA PRASAD v. PUNDLIK PANDURANG 970

s. 178

s. 197—Ratification, proof of.

Section 197 of the Contract Act lays down that a ratification may be express or implied from the conduct of the person on whose behalf the act is done. The acts relied upon as proving ratification, however, must be clearly inconsistent with a denial of liability.

N NARAYAN DAS v. CHANDRABHAN 959

Co-sharers—Joint property, rule of enjoyment of, by co-sharers—Exclusive possession by one co-sharer for long time, effect of.

The general rule as regards the enjoyment of joint property by co-sharers is that one co-sharer has no right to appropriate to himself a specific portion of the common land and to exclude his co-sharers from all use and enjoyment of the same without a lawful partition. But where a person has been in possession of a piece of joint land for a long time without any let or hindrance by the other co-sharers, the latter have no right to eject him or his transferee or to disturb his possession or enjoyment otherwise than by seeking partition, and he is entitled to continue in such possession so long as such user does not interfere with the use by other co-sharers of what is in their possession. O RAM PIYARE LAL v. NAGESHWAR, 21 O. C. 214; 5 O. L. J. 618 91

Costs, award of—Successful party, whether can be deprived of costs—Discretion of Court—Appeal—Appellate Court, interference by.

Where a trial Judge has given his reasons for depriving a successful party of costs and all the circumstances are before the Court of Appeal, the latter can, if satisfied that the trial Judge has not exercised his discretion judicially, interfere with it and make the order which the lower Court ought to have made.

The mere fact that a defendant relies upon a right which a Statute gives him is not a sufficient ground for depriving him of his costs. A RADHEY SHIAM v. BIHARI LAL, 13 A. L. J. 592; 40 A. 558 478

Court-fee—Appeals, separate, by several defendants—Court-fee payable—Principal and surety—Suit against surety, whether maintainable without principal being sued.

Plaintiff Bank sued to recover the sum of Rs. 18,852-12-0 from the defendants, alleging that defendant No. 3, a Company, opened a current account with the plaintiff on the 6th July 1908, agreeing to pay interest at the rate of Rs. 7-8-0 per cent per annum from the date of the account up to the 14th October 1909 and thereafter at the rate of Rs. 8-4-0 per cent per annum, that defendant No. 2 executed two promissory notes for Rs. 30,000 and Court-fee—conold.

Rs. 20,000 respectively in favour of the plaintiff by way of security for the overdraft allowed to defendant No. 3, and that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in conjunction with one G. executed a surety bond in favour of the plaintiff by which they agreed to act as sureties for the amount found due to the plaintiff from defendant No. 3 from time to time. The suit having been decreed, defendants Nos. 1 and 2 filed separate appeals in the Chief Court. Defendant No. 2 paid full ad valorem Court-fee and presented his appeal first, while defendant No. 1 stamped his memorandum of appeal with a Court-fee of Rs. 2 only on the ground that the full Court-fee had already been paid by defendant No. 2. It was contended, inter alia, that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had executed the pro notes as officers of defendant No. 3 and were not, therefore, personally liable on these documents and that in any event the pro-note jointly executed by defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was merely a contract of indemnity and that consequently until plaintiff had exhausted his remedies against the principal debtor, defendant No. 3, the suit against defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was premature:

Held, (1) that the defendants were entitled to file a joint appeal but as they had elected to present two entirely distinct and separate appeals, each must pay the full amount of Court-fee;

(2) that the creditor was not bound to exhaust his remedies against the principal before suing the surety.

A suit may be maintained against the surety though the principal has not been sued. P PANNA LAL v. MARWAR BANK, LTD., 91 P. R. 1918 424

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv)

(c)—Mortgage suit—Exemption of property from liability—Appeal—Court-fee payable.

The plea raised by one of the defendants to a mortgage suit was that certain property, which was alleged to be covered by the mortgage-deed, was not liable to be sold in execution of the mortgage decree by reason of certain transfers which had been made in his favour before the mortgage-deed in suit was executed. The trial Court held a part of this property to be liable for the mortgage debt. The defendant appealed:

Held, that the appellant was bound to pay ad valorem Court-fee on the memorandum of appeal. O SHEORAJA v. DEBI DIN, 5 O. L. J. 663 535

Sch. II, Art. 17, cl. 3 552
Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 15, 16, 350—Rules framed by U.

P. Government under s. 16, validity of—Trial before Bench of Magistrates—Judgment by Bench other than Bench which heard evidence, legality of. The rules framed by the United Provinces Government under section 16 of the Criminal Procedure Code provided that in the case of Benches consisting of not more than three members, any two of the members shall form a quorum. It was also provided that if a Bench held an adjourned sitting for the disposal of a part-heard case, and the members at the adjourned sessions were not the same as sat at the first hearing of the case, the provisions of section 350 of the Code of Criminal Procedure would be held to apply to the case:

Held, (1) that the rules were intra vires the Government;

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

(2) that the effect of the rules was that any trial commenced before any two members of a Bench could lawfully be continued before any other two members, provided that if exception was taken by the accused to the proceeding before a differently constituted Bench, the trial must either be recommenced de novo or adjourned to a subsequent date on which the same Magistrates who commenced the trial might find it convenient to sit together.

At the first hearing of a case before a Bench of Magistrates the evidence for the prosecution was recorded. At the second hearing one of the Magistrates was replaced by another, who was not present at the first hearing, but the accused having stated that they had no objection to the trial being proceeded with, the trial was concluded and on a subsequent date judgment was pronounced by the Bench before which the trial had commenced:

Held, that one of the Magistrates who delivered the judgment being absent on the date of the second hearing it could not be said that the accused were not prejudiced, and that, therefore, the proceedings at the last hearing, when judgment was pronounced, were illegal and must be set aside. A MATHURA v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 884; 19 Cr. L. J. 1004 344

ss. 30, 207, 254, 347—Offence exclusively triable by Sessions Court, committal for, by Magistrate empowered under s. 30—Commitment, legality of.

The committal of a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session is not illegal merely, because the Committing Magistrate is himself empowered under section 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code to try the case.

The words "ought to be tried" in sections 207 and 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code must be read with section 254 of the Code. N EMPEROR v. HANUMAN, 20 Cr. L. J. 97 977

ss. 96, 100—Warrant under s. 100—

Using form of warrant under s. 96, legality of.

If the substance of a warrant issued under section 100, Criminal Procedure Code, complies with the requirements of that section, the warrant is perfectly legal, no matter what prescribed form is used for the warrant.

There being no prescribed form of warrant under section 100, Criminal Procedure Code, a Magistrate issuing such a warrant adapted a form under section 96, Criminal Procedure Code, to the provisions of section 100 by altering the figures and also by drawing up the warrant in terms required by section 100:

Held, that the warrant was perfectly legal. C SUPERINTENDENT AND REMEMBRANCE OF LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL v. MOZAM MOLLA, 23 C. L. J. 304; 45 C. 905; 20 Cr. L. J. 47 687

s. 100 687

ss. 107, 112, 537—Security for breach of peace—Accused agreeing to give security—Breach of peace, proof of, absence of—Order, legality of.

A Magistrate called upon the accused under section 112 of the Criminal Procedure Code to show cause why they should not furnish security to keep the peace under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, on the ground that they were members of an unlawful assembly which passed a mosque with loud music and which intended to cause a breach of the peace by repeating this procedure. The accused denied these allegations but expressed their willingness to execute bonds to keep the peace. Thereupon the Magistrate directed them to execute bonds for Rs. 100 to keep the peace for one year:

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Held, that the order was illegal, inasmuch as the accused denied every allegation on the basis of which they were considered liable to furnish security and no evidence was taken to prove those allegations. N EMPEROR v. RAI SINGH, 20 Cr. L. J. 105 985

s. 110—Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911), s. 4—Security for good behaviour—Proceedings against person registered under Criminal Tribes Act, legality of—Magistrate, discretion of, exercise of—Proceeding, pending—High Court, power of interference of.

Proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, against persons who have been registered under section 4 and the following sections of the Criminal Tribes Act, are not illegal.

Per Huda, J—Such proceedings, though not illegal, are inexpedient.

Per Richardson, J.—In every case under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, there is a question of discretion whether the person proceeded against should or should not be bound down to be of good behaviour. The fact that the persons proceeded against are already registered under the Criminal Tribes Act, may be a factor and an important factor which the Magistrate should take into consideration before he makes any order against them under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code.

The High Court does not, as a rule, interfere in any pending proceeding unless there is some strong ground for intervening. C GHULAM RASUL v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 30 510

s. 112 510
ss. 144, 195—Disobedience of order under s. 144—Sanction for prosecution granted by District Magistrate—Order, whether administrative or judicial—Appeal, whether lies.

An order passed by a Magistrate under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code is a judicial order and the authority issuing the order cannot be separated from the authority-granting sanction for prosecution for disobedience of it.

Where, therefore, a Magistrate grants sanction for prosecution for disobedience of an order issued by him under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code, he acts as a "Court" within the meaning of section 195, sub-section 7 of the Code.

A public servant qua public servant is not subordinate to the authority of the High Court as required by section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code.

A Sub-Magistrate having refused to accord sanction for prosecution of the petitioner for disobedience of his order passed under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, the opposite party appealed to the District Magistrate, who granted the sanction applied for. Against this latter order the petitioner appealed to the Sessions Judge, who refused to interfere with the District Magistrate's order on the ground that it was passed administratively:

Held, that the order of the District Magistrate was a judicial order, against which an appeal lay to

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

the Sessions Judge. M ARUNACHALAM PILLAI v. PONNUSWAMI PILLAI, 35 M. L. J. 454; 8 L. W. 422; 24 M. L. T. 396; (1918) M. W. N. 824; 42 M. 64; 20 Cr. L. J. 78 878

ss. 144, 145—Dispute as to land—Section applicable.

Section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, is applicable only to temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger. It is not applicable in cases where there is a dispute as to land for the settlement of which section 145 provides the appropriate remedy. Pat LACHMAN RAM v. DHIRU DUSADH, 19 Cr. L. J. 1002 342

ss. 145, 147—Enquiry under s. 147—Procedure—Order passed without giving parties opportunity to produce evidence, legality of—Jurisdiction—Order affecting persons not parties to proceedings.

An enquiry under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, has to be made in the manner provided by section 145 of the Code and the Magistrate conducting such enquiry must receive the evidence of the parties. Failure to give an opportunity to the parties of calling evidence affects the jurisdiction of the Magistrate.

Section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, contemplates an order to be passed between parties to the proceedings only. An order affecting persons who are not parties to the proceedings is not within the purview of the section and is, therefore, liable to be set aside as affecting jurisdiction. N PILLAI v. DARTA, 20 Cr. L. J. 110 990

ss. 145, 146—Possession of fishery extending over several miles, dispute as to—Magistrate unable to satisfy himself as to possession of whole fishery—Procedure—Local investigation, whether necessary in every case.

In a proceeding under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, regarding the possession of a fishery extending over several miles in length, if on the evidence the Magistrate is unable to satisfy himself as to the possession of the whole length in question, he should ascertain, so far as he can, the possession of some portion or portions thereof. As to the portion of which he is able to say "so and so is in possession" he should proceed under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, and only as to the remainder should he proceed under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code.

There is no hard and fast rule of law that in every case under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, a local investigation must be held, whether the parties desire it or not.

A Magistrate who attaches the property in dispute under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, without holding a local investigation, cannot be said to have exercised his jurisdiction erroneously.

In a proceeding under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate attached the property in dispute under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, on a finding arrived at by him which was expressed in these terms: "It is very difficult to come to a decision about the possession of the whole jaltar in dispute from the evidence adduced".

Held, that although "difficulty" was not synonymous with "impossibility" as contemplated by the second part of section 146 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, yet the judgment of the Magistrate might be read as meaning that on the evidence adduced, he was unable to satisfy himself as to which of the contending parties was in possession of the property in question. C UPENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE v. PRASANNA KUMAR GHOSH, 20 Cr. L. J. 17 497

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

s. 145 (4).

Where in a proceeding under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a local enquiry is directed to be made, the result of the local enquiry becomes a part of the proceeding and the party affected by it is entitled to be made acquainted with the result thereof and should be given an opportunity of rebutting the report. N JAIWANTI v. RAMRAO, 20 Cr. L. J. 107 987

s. 147

s. 148.

A Magistrate deputed to hold a local enquiry under the provisions of section 148 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, should hold the enquiry himself and should not delegate it to somebody else. N JAIWANTI v. RAMRAO, 20 Cr. L. J. 107 987

s. 160

s. 190 (1) (c)—Magistrate taking cognizance of offence, whether can hold inquiry preliminary to commitment.

The fact that a Magistrate took cognizance of an offence under section 190 (1) (c), Criminal Procedure Code, is no bar to his holding an inquiry preliminary to commitment. C AZAM ALI v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 47 687

s. 191

s. 195

s. 195—"Court" in s. 195 (7), meaning of—Public servant passing orders under s. 195 (1), whether acts judicially.

The summonses and orders referred to in the group of offences mentioned in clause (a) of sub-section 1 of section 195, when issued by a Magistrate or Judge, are issued judicially and where sanction is given to prosecute for disobedience of such summonses or orders, such sanction is issued by the same authority, namely, the Court.

The word 'Court' in sub-section 7 of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, is not confined to clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section 1 of the section. Sub-section 7 is enacted for the purpose of explaining what is subordination within the meaning of sub-section 6, where the authority giving or refusing is a Court, and does not purport to confine its operation to clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section 1.

Where, therefore, sanction is given with reference to an offence against a Court, the appeal is governed by sub-section 7. M ARUNACHALAM PILLAI v. PONNUSWAMI PILLAI, 35 M. L. J. 454; 8 L. W. 422; 24 M. L. T. 396; (1918) M. W. N. 824; 42 M. 64; 20 Cr. L. J. 78 878

ss. 195, 476—Order under s. 476 made without taking evidence, legality of—Jurisdiction—Court, power of, to order prosecution of person not party to proceedings—S. 476, scope of.

A Court, while proceeding under section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is required to arrive at findings upon some evidence before it. If there is no evidence on the record and the Court proceeds to order the prosecution of a person for forgery in relation to a proceeding before it, the discretion vested in the Court under the section is illegally exercised and the order is liable to be set aside.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code is a self-contained section and the reference to section 195 in that section is only made for the sake of brevity and refers not to the conditions enumerated in section 195 but merely to the offences enumerated in that section.

Section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code confers jurisdiction upon an executing Court to order the prosecution of a person for forgery, even though not a party to the execution proceedings, if the offence is brought to the notice of the Court in the course of the proceedings. PAT ABUL SATTAR v. EMPEROR, (1918) PAT. 352; 20 CR. L. J. 94 894

s. 195—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211—Making false charges against several persons—Separate offences—Sanction to prosecute in respect of each offence, whether should be granted.

A person who falsely charges several persons, with having committed an offence is guilty of as many separate offences and there is no impropriety in his being called to account under section 211 of the Penal Code in respect of each of such false charges. L B GNANAKANNU v. VEERAVAGU, 11 BUR. L. T. 136; 19 CR. L. J. 1002 342

ss. 195, 476—Perjury committed in summary trial—Sanction, whether ought to be granted.

Where during the course of a summary trial the Court is of opinion that perjury has been committed, it should take action itself instead of placing in the hands of a private person the right of vindicating the law. A THAKUR DAS v. ABDULLA, 16 A. L. J. 992; 20 CR. L. J. 48 686

s. 195—Sanction for prosecution—Petty theft committed thirty-eight years previously, denial of—Sanction, whether should be granted.

Sanction was granted for the prosecution of the accused for perjury in respect of a statement made by him in which he had denied the fact of his having been convicted of petty theft thirty-eight years previously at the age of fourteen:

Held, that the fact which the accused had denied was not relevant to the trial before the Magistrate, and that, therefore, this was not a fit case in which sanction should have been granted. A GAJADHAR v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 923; 20 CR. L. J. 2 493

s. 195 (1) (a), (6), (7)—Arms Act (XI of 1878), s. 25—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 182—Information given to District Magistrate of person being in possession of fire-arms without license—Issue of search-warrant by Magistrate—Act, whether judicial or executive—Information found to be false—Sanction for prosecution for giving false information to public servant—Appeal to Sessions Judge, whether maintainable.

A Magistrate directing the issue of a warrant to search premises, on information received that the owner or occupant thereof is in possession of fire-arms without a license, acts as a Court and not merely as a public servant, whether he purports to act under the Criminal Procedure Code or under section 25 of the Arms Act.

Where a District Magistrate accords sanction for the prosecution of an informant on the ground that his information proved to be false, he acts judicially and his order is appealable to the Sessions Judge under section 195 (7).

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Every Magistrate acting judicially is a Criminal Court. A Magistrate to whom, as a Criminal Court, a report is made in order that he might take action as a Criminal Court, receives that report as a Court. The terms 'Court' and 'Magistrate,' wherever used in the Criminal Procedure Code, are generally used as convertible terms. M GADDAM PENCHULU REDDI, In re, 35 M. L. J. 686; (1918) M. W. N. 908; 42 M. 96; 20 CR. L. J. 90 890

s. 197—Sanction to prosecute public servant—Offence, designation of, whether necessary. Where a Collector sanctioned the prosecution of a Kulkarni and a Patil "for cheating or for such other offence with which it may be necessary to prosecute them in connection with obtaining money from ryots:"

Held, that the offence or offences which might be established in connection with obtaining money from ryots were sufficiently designated in the sanction, and that the sanction was not invalid on account of vagueness. B EMPEROR v. MADHAV LAXMAN, 20 BOM. L. R. 607; 20 CR. L. J. 71 871

ss. 198, 204—Complaint at suggestion of Police—Issue of process to accused, whether necessary.

The fact that the complaint in respect of an offence under section 494, Indian Penal Code, is written at the suggestion of the Police does not contravene the provisions of section 198 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Where on a case being called the accused present themselves before the Magistrate, there is no necessity of issuing process to them under section 204 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the mere omission to issue process in such a case does not render the commitment of the accused to the Court of Session illegal. P EMPEROR v. RURI, 5 P. R. 1919 CR.; 20 CR. L. J. 3 493

s. 200 483

ss. 200, 537 (a)—Complaint by District Judge to District Magistrate—Failure to examine complainant—Irregularity.

A District Judge, believing that a certain Will which had come before him in probate proceedings was a forgery, wrote a letter to the District Magistrate suggesting that in the interests of justice there should be a prompt investigation. On receipt of the letter the District Magistrate, without sending for the District Judge and examining him on oath, ordered a Police investigation and thereafter sent the case for inquiry and trial before a competent Magistrate:

Held, (1) that the letter amounted to a "complaint" within the meaning of the definition contained in section 4 of the Criminal Procedure Code;

(2) that the failure to examine the District Judge on oath was an irregularity of a kind which came within those enumerated in clause (c) of section 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that there having been no failure of justice the trial was not vitiated by the irregularity. B APARAO JHAVERILAL, In re, 20 BOM. L. R. 114; 20 CR. L. J. 42 682 ss. 207, 254, 346, 347—Commitment to Sessions, by Magistrate having power to sentence adequately, legality of—Grounds of commitment—Warrant cases, powers of Magistrates in trial of.

s. 204 493

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Section 254 of the Criminal Procedure Code makes it imperative on a Magistrate only to frame a charge and not to complete the trial to conviction or acquittal. That section simply lays down the procedure for the trial of warrant cases where the Magistrate considers it right and proper for himself to go on with the trial and is in no way a limitation of the right of a Magistrate given to him under section 347 to commit a case for trial if he thinks that he should do so.

Section 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not restrict the grounds on which a Magistrate should arrive at his opinion to commit a case to want of jurisdiction in himself or to his inability, in his own opinion, to sentence the accused adequately. Even where he can inflict the maximum sentence for the offence, he may still commit the accused for trial to the Court of Session or the High Court on such grounds as complicated questions of law arising or the case being a fit one to be tried by a Jury or with the aid of Assessors.

Per Napier, J.—The powers of a Magistrate, who has taken a warrant case on his file for trial, are as follows:—He may try it through himself if he has jurisdiction; he may, if he thinks he cannot inflict a proper sentence, act under section 364 or 349 and send it to a higher Magistrate, or he may, if he thinks that it is a proper case for Sessions, commit the accused under section 347 or if he has not power to commit, send it to another Magistrate to commit under section 346. M CROWN PROSECUTOR v. BHAGAVATHI, 35 M. L. J. 559; (1918) M. W. N. 870; 9 L. W. 14; 42 M. 83; 19 Cr. L. J. 997 337

s. 207.

Under section 207 of the Criminal Procedure Code a Magistrate who is competent to commit to the Court of Session can commit to that Court cases triable exclusively by that Court and cases which in his opinion ought to be tried by that Court.

A commitment, however, made on the sole ground that the accused has been committed in another case is bad in law. N EMPEROR v. HANUMAN, 20 Cr. L. J. 97 977

s. 215—Commitment to Sessions, whether can be quashed by Sessions Court.

A commitment once made can only be quashed by the High Court under section 215 of the Criminal Procedure Code. P EMPEROR v. RURI, 5 P. R. 1919 Cr.; 20 Cr. L. J. 3 493 ss. 215, 532—Commitment, whether can be quashed by Sessions Judge.

Under section 215 of the Criminal Procedure Code a commitment can be quashed by the High Court only and only on a point of law. Section 532 of the Code applies only to a case where a Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which are not so conferred, commits an accused person to a Court of Session. It has no application to a case where the Court of Session considers that a commitment made by a competent Court is illegal. B EMPEROR v. MADHAV LAXMAN, 20 Bom. L. R. 607; 20 Cr. L. J. 71 871

ss. 222, 234, 235—Joint trial for criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts, when permissible—Trial for criminal breach of trust during period exceeding one year, legality of—Court, duty of—Procedure—Appeal from acquittal

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

—Retrial, whether can be ordered on technical ground.

A charge of criminal breach of trust of a sum of money can be tried under section 235 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, at the same time with one of falsification of accounts made to conceal the act of misappropriation as part of the same transaction, but a charge of criminal breach of trust cannot be legally tried together with one of falsification relating to a distinct act of misappropriation committed in a separate transaction.

The accused was jointly tried of offences falling under six different charges, viz:—

(1) Criminal breach of trust of a sum during the period 17th September 1914 to 25th March 1915.

(2) Criminal breach of trust of a sum during the period 6th March 1915 to 31st March 1916.

(3) Criminal breach of trust of a sum during the period 1st April to 31st May 1916.

(4) Criminal breach of trust of a sum during the period 1st June 1916 to 9th October 1916.

(5) Preparation of a false balance sheet of the Lahore Electric Supply Company for the year ending 31st March 1915.

(6) Preparation of a false balance sheet for the year ending 31st March 1916; and was acquitted. Government preferred an appeal to the Chief Court against the acquittal:

Held, (1) that charges (1) and (5) could have been tried together, because the preparation of the false balance sheet for the year ending 31st March 1915 was effected to conceal the criminal breach of trust which had been committed during the period ending 25th March 1915;

(2) that similarly charges (2) and (6) could have been tried together and charges (4) and (5) could also have been tried together in one trial, as they related to two offences of the same kind committed within the space of 12 months;

(3) but that the trial of all six charges in one trial was contrary to section 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code and was quite illegal;

(4) that charge (2) contravened section 222, Criminal Procedure Code, and the trial of that charge was in itself quite illegal;

(5) that the Court before the commencement of the trial should have recorded an order to the effect that it was trying such and such charge or charges and should have proceeded to take all the evidence relating thereto, the trials should have been quite distinct and the accused should have been apprised as to which charges were being tried in each trial and the opinions of the Assessors should have been recorded separately in each;

(6) that it would not be fair to the accused, who had been acquitted, to order a retrial simply because the trial was illegal on account of misjoinder of charges, unless the Court was satisfied that the order of acquittal was obviously erroneous or was not one which should be maintained owing to the trial Court having omitted to consider material evidence for some other sufficient reason;

(7) that the onus was on the prosecution to prove affirmatively that the accused received any sums beyond those entered by him as having been received;

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

(8) that it could not on the evidence be said for certain that the accused was in charge of all the money received by the Company;

(9) that in view of all these facts it was not one of those exceptional cases where, supposing the trial had been legal, the Chief Court would reverse the order and convict the accused and that, therefore, a retrial should not be ordered. P EMPEROR v. JAGAT-
RAM, 19 Cr. L. J. 987

s. 234,

s. 234—Joinder of charges—Offences against different individuals committed by one person, whether can be tried together—Procedure.

The conviction of an accused person at one trial for three acts of misappropriation committed against three different persons is not illegal.

Section 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not limited to cases where the offences have been committed against the same person. N KRISHNAYYA v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 71 ss. 234, 239—Joint trial of several persons for separate offences, legality of—S. 239, applicability of.

The joint trial of several accused persons for two or more separate offences is illegal.

Section 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to offences committed by a single person. It is not applicable when several persons are tried jointly under section 239 of the Code. N SAYAD LAL v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 7 ss. 234, 239—Joint trial of two accused for cheating—Conspiracy—One transaction.

In each case it is a question of fact whether the offences in respect of which more persons than one are charged at the same trial were committed in the same transaction, within the meaning of section 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that question must be determined with reference to the facts of each case.

Where it was alleged that the accused, the Kulkarni and the Patil of a village, conspired together and cheated certain persons on the same day, by asking them to pay certain sums in excess of what was properly payable by them as assessment:

Held, that there being clear proximity of time and space, clear continuity of action and sufficiently specific community of purpose, the offences committed by the accused must be held to be committed in the same transaction within the meaning of section 239 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so that the joint trial of the accused under that section was not illegal. B EMPEROR v. MADHAV LAXMAN, 20 Bom. L. R. 607; 20 Cr. L. J. 71

s. 235

s. 239

s. 239

Section 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code is the only section of the Code which refers to a trial of more persons than one jointly, but it does not authorise such trial for two or more distinct offences unless they form part of the same transaction or unless one is the actual offence and the other or others are offences of abetting or attempting that offence. N SAYAD LAL v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 7

s. 250—Compensation, order to pay,

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

against person instigating the giving of false information, validity of.

Section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not warrant an order to pay compensation against a person who only instigates the giving of false information but who does not himself make the complaint or give the information to the Police. S EMPEROR v. SUMER, 12 S. L. R. 76; 20 Cr. L. J. 100

s. 250—Compensation, order to pay, where complaint vexatious in one particular, validity of.

An order for compensation under section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, cannot be justified merely because the complaint filed was vexatious in one particular. An award of compensation can only be made where there has been a complete discharge or acquittal of the accused on all the heads of the charges against him. S EMPEROR v. NADAR, 12 S. L. R. 87; 20 Cr. L. J. 106

s. 253

s. 254

s. 260 (1), cls. (d), (1)—House-breaking by night and theft—Value of property stolen over Rs. 50—Summary trial, legality of.

A Magistrate is not authorized to split up an offence so as to give himself jurisdiction over the parts which he would not have over the whole, thereby depriving the accused of his right to appeal.

Clause (i) of section 260 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code must be read with clause (d), which only permits a summary trial for theft under section 380 of the Penal Code where the value of the property stolen does not exceed Rs. 50.

The offence of house-breaking by night under section 457 of the Penal Code, accompanied by a theft of property worth more than fifty rupees, cannot legally be tried summarily under section 260 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Summary procedure in cases of serious offences even though legal is inappropriate. N DIPCHAND v. EMPEROR, 14 N. L. R. 190; 19 Cr. L. J. 1003

s. 307—Sessions trial—Judge disagreeing with verdict of Jury—Reference to High Court—Verdict supported by evidence, effect of.

Where in a trial before the Court of Session the Judge, disagreeing with the verdict of "not guilty" returned by the Jury, referred the case to the High Court under section 307, Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that as there was evidence on the record which would support the conclusion arrived at by the Jury, though there was evidence also the other way, the verdict of the Jury could not be said to be perverse or erroneous; that on the contrary it, may have been correct, so that the accused must be acquitted. C EMPEROR v. ASGAR MANDAL, 22 C. W. N. 811; 20 Cr. L. J. 20

s. 309—Assessors, opinion of, mode of taking of—Sessions Judge, duty of—Procedure.

In a case of rioting where the dispute arises over the possession of a piece of land and the Crown admits the possession of the accused and the accused themselves urge the plea of private defence, it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to explain to the Assessors the legal aspect of the plea put forward by the accused, and to direct their attention to it by putting specific questions to them on the point.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

In such a case general questions such as "Has the offence of rioting been proved against any of the accused?" are utterly insufficient. PAT SUNDAR BUKSH SINGH v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L. J. 653; (1918) 1 A.T. 359; 19 Cr. L. J. 983 163

s. 342, object of—Accused, examination of—Accused, duty of—Procedure

The provisions of section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code are mandatory and non-compliance with them vitiates the trial.

The object of section 342, Criminal Procedure Code, is (1), to communicate to the accused, to the full extent that may be found necessary in each particular case, what is alleged against him in the evidence for the prosecution;

(2) to ascertain from him what explanation or defence, in law or in fact, he wishes to put forward in respect thereof.

Where the accused is an ignorant person who cannot be expected to know or understand what particular parts of the evidence are, or are likely to be considered by the Court to be, against him, it is necessary that his attention should be directed to all the vital parts of the evidence against him.

It is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code to ask an accused the general question: "Have you anything more to say in this case or?" "you have heard the prosecution witnesses against you, what have you to say?" N TANI v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 12 487 ss. 345, 439—Revision—Composition of offence—High Court, power of, to allow composition.

The High Court sitting as a Court of Revision under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code has no power to allow the composition of an offence under section 345 of the Code. P EMPEROR v. HARNAM SINGH, 35 P. R. 1918 Cr.; 20 Cr. L. J. 87 887

ss. 346, 347 337

s. 347 977

s. 350 344

s. 350, scope of—Case transferred from one Magistrate to another—Witnesses, whether should be re-examined.

Section 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code is applicable to a case which has been transferred from the Court of one Magistrate to that of another. It is not restricted to cases in which Magistrates succeed each other in their offices. N AKBAR ALI v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 41 681

s. 362—Magistrate, duty of.

It is the duty of the Magistrate in a case which comes within section 362, Criminal Procedure Code, to take a note of all the material facts stated by a witness, whether they appear in the course of the examination-in-chief or in the course of the cross-examination. C AH FOONG CHINAMAN v. EMPEROR, 22 C. W. N. 834; 24 C. L. J. 105; 20 Cr. L. J. 24 504

s. 403 (2)—Complaint of offences under ss. 352, 504, Penal Code—Process under s. 352—Trial and acquittal of offence under s. 352—Fresh trial for offence under s. 504, legality of.

A petition of complaint alleged that the accused had committed offences punishable under sections 352 and 504, Indian Penal Code. Process was issued upon the accused directing him to appear and take his trial under section 352 only. Having heard the complainant and his witnesses, the

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Magistrate acquitted the petitioner of the offence under section 352, but being of opinion that on the evidence adduced a prima facie case of an offence punishable under section 504 had been made out, ordered process to issue directing the accused to appear and stand his trial under section 504:

Held, that section 403 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, was applicable to the case, so that the accused could be legally tried again for the offence punishable under section 504, Penal Code. C BEJOY KRISHNA PAL v. BALAI CHAND BHANDARI, 20 Cr. L. J. 43 683

ss. 403 (4), 530 (k)—Acquittal by Magistrate not empowered to try case, whether bars subsequent trial—Procedure—Jurisdiction.

A complaint was made against the accused disclosing offences punishable under sections 409 and 477A of the Penal Code. The case was by some mistake made over for trial to an Honorary Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate of the Second Class. He proceeded to deal with the case as one under section 408, Indian Penal Code, and finally acquitted the accused. Subsequently the complainant presented a further complaint to the District Magistrate praying for the trial of the accused under sections 409 and 477A of the Penal Code. The District Magistrate thereupon took cognisance of the case and referred the complaint to a First Class Magistrate for disposal:

Held, that inasmuch as the Second Class Magistrate who had dealt with the case was not empowered to commit accused persons for trial to the Court of Session, the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to take cognisance of the second complaint having regard to the provisions of section 350 (k) and section 403 (4) of the Criminal Procedure Code. C KRISHNADHON GHOSE v. MAHENDRA NATH DUTT, 20 Cr. L. J. 112 992

ss. 423, 439—Acquittal of accused—

Revision—High Court, power of interference of—Appeal by accused—Appellate Court, power of.

Where a trial has ended in the complete acquittal of the accused person, it is not open to the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction to convict him of any offence. The utmost that it can do, in the absence of an appeal against the acquittal by the properly constituted authorities, is to order a new trial.

An appeal against a conviction, however, opens out the entire case, and the Appellate Court, being empowered to alter the finding by section 423 (1) (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code, may record a conviction in respect of an offence of which the trial Court has found the accused not guilty. A DULLI v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 918; 20 Cr. L. J. 22 502 ss. 435, 439, 562—Accused released under s. 562—Revision—Sentence of imprisonment, whether can be passed.

s. 423 (1), (4) 510

Section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code presupposes that a sentence has been imposed. Therefore where an accused is released on good probation under section 562 of the Code, the High Court cannot substitute a sentence of imprisonment or of whipping in revision. N EMPEROR v. NURKHAN, 20 Cr. L. J. 93 979

ss. 435, 439—Proceedings under Chapter XII—Local enquiry—Procedure—Order passed without taking evidence—Jurisdiction—Revision—High Court power of interference of.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

A High Court cannot ordinarily interfere in revision under sections 435 and 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code with proceedings under Chapter XII of the Code, but it has power to interfere where the subordinate Court has passed an order without giving the parties an opportunity of calling evidence, and has thus acted without jurisdiction. N JAIWANTI v. RAMRAO, 20 Cr. L. J. 107 987

ss. 435, 439—Revision against order of discharge—High Court, jurisdiction of—Interference, limits of—Alien enemy trading under license, whether competent to file complaint or move High Court in revision—Internment after filing of revision petition under Enemy Ordinance, effect of.

In dealing with revision petitions against orders of discharge of accused persons by Magistrates, the High Court will apply the same principles as are applicable to cases of petitions to revise orders of acquittal. In either case the High Court will not interfere where there is no clear error or defect in the proceedings of the lower Courts which has resulted in grave injustice but the question is merely one as to the appreciation of doubtful evidence.

It is competent to an alien enemy residing in British India by license of the King to complain against crimes directed against his person or property and to apply in revision to the High Court against any order of a Magistrate discharging the accused on the materials placed before him.

The internment of an alien subject, after he has filed a revision petition, does not necessarily stay the hands of the High Court. M MELLOR v. MUTHIAH CHETTY, 35 M. L. J. 513; 9 L. W. 113; 20 Cr. L. J. 101 931

s. 439 502, 887, 979, 981, 987

ss. 439, 476—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Sanction for prosecution granted by Civil Court—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

The High Court has no power under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code to set aside an order made by a Court of Small Causes directing the prosecution of a decree-holder for perjury in respect of a statement made by him before that Court, nor can such an order be interfered with under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. A RAM PRASAD v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 921; 20 Cr. L. J. 19 499

s. 439—Revision—Acquittal, order of, interference with—Jurisdiction.

The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere in revision even in the case of an order of acquittal, but such interference will only be where serious injustice has been caused by an error of law. M MOGAL BEG, In re, 35 M. L. J. 665; 25 M. L. T. 24; 20 Cr. L. J. 49 817

s. 476. 499, 683, 894

s. 476—Offence brought to notice of Court in subsequent judicial proceeding, effect of—Court, power of, to enquire into commission of offence, exercise of, time of.

The powers conferred by section 478, Criminal Procedure Code, can be exercised at any time when an offence is committed before a Court in a judicial proceeding, or when the commission of it is brought to its notice in the course of that judicial proceeding or in any other. O RAM ANUJ v. EMPEROR, 5 O. L. J. 622; 19 Cr. L. J. 981 161

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

s. 477, scope of—Sessions Judge, power of, to try witness for perjury, exercise of—Summary trial, legality of—Court, duty of—Procedure.

Section 477 of the Criminal Procedure Code gives the power to a Court of Session to charge a person for any offence referred to in section 195 of the Code and committed before it. It further gives the Court of Session the power to commit for trial or to admit to bail and to try the person for the charge it has framed, but the section nowhere lays it down that the trial is to be a summary one, nor does it anywhere demand a decision which should be more prompt and speedy than that of any ordinary trial. The very powers granted in that section to a Court of Session are so unusual that it is the bounden duty of any Court exercising them to be at pains to give the accused a fair and impartial trial, in view of the fact that the Court has already had before it certain evidence upon which it may have already formed an opinion.

At the conclusion of a trial in a Sessions Court, the Sessions Judge charged one of the defence witnesses with the offence of perjury and proceeded there and then to try him under the powers conferred upon the Court by section 477 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The accused repeatedly asked for time to enable him to obtain legal advice and to put in his defence, but the Court refused his prayer and convicted and sentenced him.

Held, that the Sessions Judge had, in the exercise of his jurisdiction, acted hastily and irregularly and had not given the accused a fair trial and that, therefore, the case must be re-tried. A HADAR KHAN v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 924; 20 Cr. L. J. 34 673

s. 488—Hindu wife leaving husband's house without cause—Maintenance, right to, on return to husband's house.

The duty of a husband to maintain his wife under the Hindu Law is absolute and under the Criminal Procedure Code it is subject only to the wife's chastity. When a Hindu wife, therefore, leaves her husband's house without good cause, her right of maintenance is only suspended and she has the right to return to her husband's house at any time and claim to be maintained by him. S JANKIBAI v. SHIVRAM BABJI, 12 S. L. B. 90; 20 Cr. L. J. 98 978

s. 496 674

s. 512—Evidence taken against absconding accused—Procedure.

Where a Magistrate had clear evidence that the accused were absconding and evidence from which he might reasonably infer that there was no immediate prospect of their arrest, and he expressly stated in his order that he was taking evidence under section 512 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the presumption is that he did his duty and did not record the evidence under the section unlawfully. The mere fact that the Magistrate did not recite a finding that there was no immediate prospect of the arrest of the accused does not render the evidence inadmissible. A BHAGWATI v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 907; 20 Cr. L. J. 6 481

ss. 517, 520, 523—Restitution of property—Revision—Power of Court in revision—Restitution, enforcement of.

Section 520 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1898 differs from the corresponding provision in the Code of 1882 and contemplates that the Court of reference or revision shall order restitution if justice so requires.

Criminal Procedure Code—concl.

Where a remedy is allowed by law, it must be assumed that the Legislature intends that the tribunal invested with jurisdiction shall enforce its order in the manner it considers most suitable, even though there is no express provision for doing the same. Pat BADRUL HASAN v CHAMELA, 19 Cr. L. J. 995

s. 520

s. 522—Order restoring property to person entitled thereto, nature of—Appellate Court, whether can pass order.

An order under section 522, Criminal Procedure Code, directing the restoration of immoveable property to the person entitled thereto, cannot be regarded as a consequential or incidental order within the purview of section 423 (1), clause (4) of the Code.

An Appellate Court is not competent to make an order under section 522, Criminal Procedure Code, directing the restoration of immoveable property to the person entitled thereto, where the trial Court has for some reason or other refrained from taking action under the aforesaid section. P MUHAMMAD DIN v EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 30

s. 523s. 530 (k)*s. 532*s. 537*s. 537 (a)

s. 556—Criminal trial—Judge importing his own knowledge into case, effect of—Irregularity.

Where a Judge is the sole judge of law and fact in a case tried before himself, he cannot give evidence before himself or import matters in his judgment not stated on oath before the Court in the presence of the accused. If he does so, he makes himself a witness in the case and renders himself incompetent to try it. Pat MANGNI LAL MARWARI v EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 45

s. 562Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911), s. 4

Crookes' Work on Castes and Tribes of N. W. P. and Oudh, admissibility of Crown Grants Act (XV of 1895)—

Crown, grant of land by—Limitation of descent, power of Crown to impose—Talugdari property, accretion to

The Crown has in British India power to grant or to transfer lands, and by its grant or transfer to limit in any way it pleases the descent of such lands. But a subject has no right to impose upon lands or other property any limitation of descent which is at variance with the ordinary law of descent applicable to his case.

Villages transferred by the Government in exchange for villages included in a talugdari sanad must be treated as talugdari villages.

Where a house in Kaiser Bagh at Lucknow had been allotted to a talugdari for his use as such:

Held, that the talugdari's right of possession would on his death pass to his successor in the talugdari estate and not to his heirs under the personal law. P C RAJINDRA BAHADUR SINGH v RAGHUBANS KUNWAR, 21 O. C. 108; 5 O. L. J. 401; 24 M. L. T. 282; 8 L. W. 570; 40 A. 470; (1918) M. W. N. 831; 28 O. L. J. 456; 23 C. W. N. 101; 20 Bom. L. R. 1075

Crown Grants Act—concl.

Custom—Abadi, house in, occupied by kamin—Collateral, whether entitled to succeed.

Under the ordinary village custom a near collateral of a deceased kamin is entitled to retain possession of a house in the village abadi which was occupied by the deceased. P BELI RAM v UMAR BAKSHI, 116 P. R. 1918

Alienation—Occupancy holding—Exchange of holding with landlord—Sale of land obtained under exchange—Reversioner of tenant, suit by, maintainability of.

An occupancy tenant entered into an arrangement with his landlord, whereunder the former gave up his occupancy rights in a portion of the holding and obtained full proprietary rights in the remainder. Subsequently, he sold the land which he had obtained in full proprietary right to the defendant. Plaintiff, a reversioner of the vendor, brought a suit for a declaration that the sale would not affect his reversionary rights after the death of the vendor:

Held, that the occupancy rights with which the vendor had parted being ancestral, the land received by him in exchange from the landlord in full proprietary right must also be treated as ancestral, and that, therefore, the plaintiff had a locus standi to bring the suit. P THAKUR v RAM SINGH, 120 P. R. 1918

Alienation—Occupancy rights, creation of, whether can be challenged by reversioners.

The creation of occupancy rights in land amounts to a transfer of valuable rights and can be challenged by the heirs of the proprietor in accordance with the well-recognised principles of customary law. P ISHAR v SUNDAR, 125 P. R. 1918 opposed to ordinary law, proof of—Wajib-ul-arz, construction of—Hindu Law—Widow, power of alienation of.

Nothing short of the most cogent evidence can be accepted as proof of a custom repugnant to the ordinary rule of succession or power of disposal prescribed by it.

If a construction can be put on a wajib-ul-arz which is compatible with the rules of the personal law of the parties, that is the construction to which a Court should adhere.

Where a wajib-ul-arz declared that a sonless widow was entitled to the property of her husband for her life and had every kind of power over the same in case of personal necessity or to meet the revenue demand:

Held, that the entry did not amount to a custom under which the widow had unlimited power of disposal. O BAHADUR SINGH v AUSSERI SINGH, proof of proof of—Crookes' Work on Castes and Tribes of N. W. P. and Oudh, admissibility of.

Per Curiam.—Long established usages existing in particular districts and families in India should be given effect to, but it is of the essence of special usages modifying the ordinary law of succession that they should be ancient and invariable; and it is further essential that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence.

Custom—concl'd.

A custom must be ancient, certain and reasonable and being in derogation of the general rules of law, must be construed strictly.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Reference, may legitimately be made to the Work on Castes and Tribes of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh by Mr. Crookes as an authoritative statement of customs prevalent among the Braki sect of Muhammadans

The fact that a custom was not pleaded in litigations between members of the community where it might have been pleaded, is relevant evidence for the purpose of showing the non-existence of the custom. C MARIAM BIBEE v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, 28 C. L. J. 306 561

—proof of—Proof, nature of—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 32 (5), 49.

Where the custom of a community is in question and it is clear that direct evidence cannot be obtained of instances of such custom, which occurred before the memory of man, persons, having special means of knowledge, are, in view of the provisions of sections 325 and 49 of the Evidence Act, permitted to testify to their existence from such knowledge as they might possess of what has been practised in their community or from what they might have heard from persons having special means of knowledge of what was practised before. O IKBAL NARAIN v. RAJENDRA NARAIN, 21 O. C. 276; 5 O. L. J. 701 767

—special, proof of 373

—Succession—Daughters versus collaterals—Dhani Brahmins of Kamalia, District Montgomery.

Among Dhani Brahmins of Kamalia in the District of Montgomery daughters and daughters' sons exclude collaterals from succession to acquired property. P BUDHI PARKASH v. CHANDER BHAN, 123 P. R. 1918 813 —Immoral custom, whether enforceable—Succession.

An immoral custom has no legal force.

A custom by which a brothel-keeper succeeds to the property left by a nauchi, or slave kept for the purpose of prostitution, is immoral and has no legal effect, for, if recognised, it would have the effect of encouraging brothel-keeping. P MUHAMMAD BAKUSH v. NAWAZISH ALI, 75 P. R. 1918; 183 P. W. R. 1918 73

—Will in favour of resident son-in-law, whether can be treated as gift—Gift in favour of daughter, validity of—Collaterals, rights of—Virak Jats of Mauza, Harar, Tahsil Gujranwala.

Among Virak Jats of Mauza Harar in Tahsil Gujranwala a male proprietor is empowered by custom to make a gift of his ancestral property in favour of his daughter to the exclusion of his collaterals in the 4th degree.

A bequest of ancestral property by a male proprietor in favour of his resident son-in-law can be treated, so far as the testator's power of disposition is concerned, as a gift for the benefit of his daughter and her issue. P SHADI v. ALIA 842

Defence of India Act (IV of 1915), s. 2—Rules framed under Act, rr. 23, 29—Criminal Defence of India Act—concl'd.

Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 191, 200—Dissuading or attempting to dissuade person from entering military service—Cognizance of offence—Statement by complainant—Procedure.

In view of the exceptional powers conferred upon the authorities by the Defence of India Act and by the rules framed under it, the Courts are entitled to require strict compliance with all the provisions introduced into the rules by way of safeguarding the liberty of the subject

M., a tenant of the accused, was recruited in the army and received a certain sum in advance. About a month afterwards the accused brought a suit against M. for arrears of rent. M. appeared before the District Magistrate and made a statement which was neither made on oath nor signed. The District Magistrate thereupon directed warrants without bail to issue for the arrest of the accused and took up the case himself. The accused were charged with having contravened rule 23 of the rules framed under the Defence of India Act and were convicted and sentenced under rule 28.

Held, (1) that the proceedings in the Court of the District Magistrate were irregular in their initiation, inasmuch as the Magistrate, if he conceived himself to be taking cognizance of the offence upon information received from M. within the meaning of section 180 c) of the Criminal Procedure Code, was bound to offer the accused the option of being tried by another Court as provided by section 191 of the Code and if he treated the statement made by M. as the complaint in the case, was bound before issuing warrants to take from M. a sworn declaration that he had spoken the truth and to obtain the signature of M. to that declaration;

(2) that the facts alleged in the charge having occurred after M. had joined the army, rule 23 of the rules framed under the Defence of India Act was not applicable to the case, inasmuch as a person cannot be said to dissuade or to attempt to dissuade another from doing something which the latter has already done. A MAHADEO SINGH v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 895; 20 Cr. L. J. S 483

Discretion of Court to reduce rate of interest, reasonable exercise of—Appellate Court, interference by.

An Appellate Court will be slow to interfere where it can be shown that such discretion has been exercised in a reasonable manner. O DARGAHI v. RAJESHWARI PERSHAD, 21 O. C. 265 753

Easement of necessity, requisites of.

An easement of necessity can only arise when the property cannot be used at all without the easement, and not where the easement is merely necessary to the reasonable enjoyment of the property.

An easement of necessity points to the fact that there must be absolute necessity before the law will compel a land-owner to submit to so detrimental a right as an easement in his land, a right in reality, though not in theory, imposed on his land against his will. PAT DAROGA LAL v. DEVI LAL 670

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 60

(b)—License, whether can be revoked.

Under section 60 (b) of the Easements Act a license may be revoked by the grantor, unless the licensee acting upon the license has executed a work of permanent character and incurred expenses in the execution.

Easements Act—concl'd.

Plaintiff, out of gratitude, allowed the defendant who was his medical adviser to occupy a certain house. The defendant erected a compound wall, fixed up a water pump, flagged the floor with stones and erected two huts:

Held, that the improvements executed by the defendant were of a permanent character and that, therefore, the license was not revocable during the lifetime of the defendant. N. MADHUSUDAN DAS v. BISSUI 723

Ejectment, suit for—Burden of proof.

Where a plaintiff seeks to recover possession as upon dispossession, the burden is on him to prove possession at some time within 12 years before the commencement of the suit.

In all actions for ejectment the plaintiff must recover by the strength of his own title, not by the weakness of his adversary's. N. CHAMPAT v. LAXMI NARAYAN 70

Suit—Unnecessary parties, addition of effect of Estoppel 993 against landlord in favour of tenant—Burden of proof.

To raise an equitable estoppel against a lessor precluding him from suing for possession on the determination of the tenancy, the tenant must show facts sufficient to justify a legal inference that the lessor has by plain implication contracted that the right of tenancy should be changed into a right of permanent occupancy.

The length of the period for which a tenant has been holding land does not, in the absence of any contention that the rent has never been enhanced, raise any presumption that the tenancy is a permanent one. N. BANMALI v. NIHAL SINGH 354

, whether can defeat provisions of Statute.

The general rule is that the principle of estoppel cannot be invoked to defeat the plain provisions of a Statute. C. SUDHIR CHUNDER SETT v. ABDULLA UL-MUSAVI, 22 C. W. N. 894 520 Evidence, admissibility in—Horoscope, whether admissible.

Where a full horoscope prepared from a short horoscope was produced in evidence and the person who had prepared it was examined as a witness:

Held, that so far as the date of birth and the parentage were concerned, the horoscope represented what had been stated to the witness who prepared it before the present dispute had arisen and could be used both as corroborative or rebutting evidence and for the purpose of refreshing memory. O. HAR BAHADUR LAL v. CHAND RAJ BAHADUR, 5 O. L. J. 655; 21 O. C. 298 400

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 18—Admission of one of several persons jointly interested, whether admissible against all—Burden of proof.

Where several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of a suit, the general rule is that the admissions of any one of those persons are receivable against himself and his fellows, whether they be all jointly suing or sued, provided the admissions relate to the subject-matter in dispute and were made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered.

Evidence Act—cont'd.

Where there is an admission by a party, he must show that the admission is untrue in fact. N. DILE-HWAR RAM BRAHMAN v. NOHAR SINGH 193

s. 25—Excise Officer, whether Police Officer—Confession, admissibility of Excise Officers cannot be said to be Police Officers, so that a confession made to an Excise Officer is not inadmissible in evidence under section 25 of the Evidence Act. C. AH FOONG CHINAMAN v. EMPEROR, 22 C. W. N. 834; 28 C. L. J. 105; 20 Cr. L. J. 24 504

s. 25—Report made to Police, admissibility of, against person who made it.

A report made to the Police which amounts to a confession is not admissible in evidence against the person who makes it. P. SIKANDAR v. EMPEROR, 36 P. R. 1918 Cr.: 20 Cr. L. J. 83 883

s. 30—Confession, admissibility of, against co-accused—Statement made by accused exculpating himself, whether confession

In order that a confession made by one of several accused may be taken into consideration under section 30 of the Evidence Act against his co-accused, it is not necessary that the confession should be one in which the maker of it persists up to and at the time of the trial.

A confession, made before a case comes up for trial but withdrawn at the time of the trial, would still be admissible against the other accused under section 30 of the Evidence Act.

But under section 30 of the Evidence Act, the Court cannot take into consideration statements made by one of several accused against his co-accused, where such statements are consistent with an attempt on the part of the maker of them to exculpate himself from the charge which has been or which is likely to be made against him. For the purpose of seeing whether statements made by an accused are confessions or not it is essential, first of all, to consider the nature of the offence with which the accused has been charged or is likely to be charged, and secondly, the whole of the statements must be read for the purpose of seeing whether in the opinion of the Court they are confessions or not.

Statements made by an accused which are consistent with an attempt on his part to exculpate himself from the charge which has been or which is likely to be made against him cannot be regarded as confessions. C. AH FOONG CHINAMAN v. EMPEROR, 22 C. W. N. 834; 28 C. L. J. 105; 20 Cr. L. J. 24 504 ss. 32, 64, 65—Book of genealogy, kept by Bhat, entries in, admissibility of—Copy of original which is in existence, whether admissible—Secondary evidence.

In order to prove their relationship with a deceased proprietor the plaintiffs relied on a Bhat's book of genealogy. It was admitted by the Bhat who produced it that the book was largely a copy made by his father from an older book which was then in existence. It was not alleged that the old book was in such a state that it could not be produced or that the entries made therein were indecipherable owing to age or owing to other cause:

Held, that having regard to sections 64 and 65 of the Evidence Act the entries in the book could not be looked upon as independent and original ones, nor could they be admitted as secondary evidence inasmuch as the original entries which were in existence could have, but had not, been produced.

Evidence Act—contd.

Obiter dictum.—If the book had not been held to be inadmissible under sections 64 and 65 of the Evidence Act, it would have been admissible under section 32, sub-sections 2) and 5) of the Act, inasmuch as it was a recognised duty and pursuit of a Bhat to keep a genealogy of the families he was interested in and he had as a rule special means of knowledge in the matter. N HAZARILAL v. HAR GOVIND 375

— s. 32 (5) 767
s. 32 (5)—Statement by agent of deceased member of family, admissibility of—Principal and agent—Pedigree filed by agent in suit to which principal was party—Presumption.

The statements of the deceased relatives, servants and dependents of a family are as much admissible under section 32, clause (5), of the Evidence Act as the statements of the members of the family, provided they had special means of knowledge requisite to render their statements admissible.

In a suit for inheritance the plaintiffs relied upon a pedigree which purported to have been filed in a previous suit by the general agent of one of the parties to that suit. The latter was a member of the family to which the parties in the inheritance suit belonged and he and his general agent were both dead:

Held, (1) that the presumption was that the general agent must have filed the pedigree under the instructions of his master;

(2) that the pedigree was admissible in the inheritance suit under section 32, clause (5) of the Evidence Act. O BALBHADDAR SINGH v. SRIPAL SINGH, 21 O. C. 251 308

— s. 49 767
ss. 58, 92 (4)—Mortgage registered—

Subsequent agreement for payment of less than stipulated consideration—Oral evidence, admissibility of—Admission of agreement in pleadings, effect of.

A subsequent agreement to take less than is due under a registered mortgage is an agreement modifying the terms of a written contract, and, if it has to be proved, oral evidence is inadmissible under proviso 4 to section 92 of the Evidence Act.

Per Wallis, C. J. and Oldfield, J., (Seshagiri Aiyar, J. dubitante).—Where, however, the oral agreement is admitted in the pleadings of the other party it need not be proved, as no question of the admissibility of evidence, oral or documentary, arises when proof is dispensed with in consequence of an admission in the pleadings either under section 58 of the Evidence Act or under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Per Wallis, C. J.—The plain language of section 58 of the Evidence Act should not be unduly restricted by reference to considerations of public policy. The admission of a party in his pleadings as to an oral arrangement modifying a written contract gets rid of the danger which it is intended to guard against, by the prohibition against the admission of oral evidence contained in the 4th proviso to section 92 of the Evidence Act.

Evidence Act—contd.

Per Oldfield, J.—The acceptance of a statement in an unregistered writing as evidence of the modification of a registered contract is contrary to public policy, as tending to defeat the provisions of the Registration Act, though the language of section 58 of the Evidence Act is unqualified.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J. There is no justification in principle for not applying proviso 4 to section 92 of the Evidence Act to all cases other than those in which there has been a perfected discharge by payment. M MALLAPPA v. MATAM NAGA CHETTY, 8 L. W. 622; (1918) M. W. N. 719; 35 M. L. J. 555; 24 M. L. T. 400; 42 M. 41 158

— ss. 64, 65 375
ss. 64, 65—Copy of document exhibited by consent of parties—Appellate Court, power of, to reject copy.

Where a copy of a document is exhibited in the trial Court with the consent of both parties, the Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to reject it on the ground that the original has not been produced.

Per Napier, J.—Where there has been a bona fide mistaken belief that a document has been properly proved and where that document is of fundamental importance for the decision of the questions at issue between the parties, the Appellate Court should always give the parties an opportunity of producing proper evidence on the point. M KAMULAMMAL AVERGAL v. SANGALI SUBBA PILLAI, 35 M. L. J. 11 615

— s. 71—Mortgage bond signed by attesting witnesses before completion—Execution, proof of.

A statement by the attesting witnesses to a mortgage deed that they signed the blank paper and not the completed deed is sufficient to attract the operation of section 71 of the Evidence Act and entitles the mortgagee to prove execution by evidence other than that of the attesting witnesses. C DINABANDHU PATRA v. SANATAN DANDA-PAT 624

— s. 73—Comparison of signature or writing, admissibility of.

Section 73 of the Indian Evidence Act is not limited, in its scope, to documents which are signed or contain some intrinsic statement of the identity of the writer. As under English Law, all that is necessary to render proof by comparison admissible is a dispute as to the writing. M VEERARAGHAVA AIYANGAR v. SOUBI AIYANGAR, (1918) M. W. N. 715; 35 M. L. J. 608; 24 M. L. T. 447; 8 L. W. 625 68

— s. 92 (4) 158

— s. 92, proviso (6)—Oral evidence to prove relation of document to existing facts, admissibility of.

Where an instrument is ambiguous or contains a description which is imperfect or inaccurate as to existing facts, evidence is receivable of all the circumstances surrounding the instrument for the purpose of throwing light on its interpretation, for it is by these, as by a lump, that the instrument has to be read.

Where the language of a document is not clear and applies partly to one set of existing facts and partly to another, the rights possessed by the vendor may be helpful in determining to which set of facts the description in the sale-deed was intended to apply, Evidence Act—concl'd.

O ADITYA PRAFAD v. MUHAMMAD MUBARAK SHAH, 21 O. C. 23:

s. 115, Estoppel

ss. 115, 116—Estoppel—Minor, tenancy created on behalf of, by guardian de facto—Benefit of minor—Promise, whether constitutes estoppel.

In the absence of any representation deceiving the opposite party and thereby causing him to alter his position for the worse, a mere promise does not constitute an estoppel.

Where it was found that a minor had derived benefit from a tenancy created to his advantage by a sarkhat executed on his behalf by a person who was his guardian in fact, though not in law:

Held, that the minor was estopped under section 116 of the Evidence Act from denying the title of the man in whose favour the sarkhat had been executed. O KANIZ MERDI BEGAM v. RASUL BEG, 5 O. L. J. 551

s. 126—Communication made to Vakil in course of employment, admissibility of—Communication, modes of.

For the purposes of section 126 of the Evidence Act, it is immaterial whether the communication which is sought to be protected was verbal, that is to say, by word of mouth, or by demonstration.

In a suit for the revocation of a patent in which the question for decision was the formation and process of working of a stove owned and used by the defendant, the plaintiff tendered in evidence a Vakil who had been employed by the defendant in some previous proceedings and had, in the course and for the purposes of his employment, visited the defendant's premises at the latter's invitation, in order to make himself acquainted with the working of the stove:

Held, that the knowledge acquired by the Vakil as to the formation and process of working of the stove amounted to a communication made to him by his client in the course and for the purposes of his employment and that, therefore, his evidence was inadmissible under section 126 of the Evidence Act. A GOPI LAL v. LAKHPAT RAI, 16 A. L. J. 987

Execution of decree—Attachment—Mulgani tenant in South Canara—Right to improvements, whether can be attached.

The rights of a Mulgani tenant in South Canara are the same as the rights of a tenant in Malabar, and his claim to compensation for improvements, which is an inchoate right and becomes perfected only at the time of eviction, cannot be attached and sold in execution of a decree. M ANANTHA BHATTA v. MAVINAMALE ANANTHA BHATTA, (1918) M. W. N. 887; 9 L. W. 78; 36 M. L. J. 92

Decree transferred from one Court to another—Competence of Court to persevere with execution where first attempt to execute has failed.

A decree having been transferred to a Court for execution, the decree-holder made an application for arrest of the judgment debtor. The Court directed the issue of a warrant of arrest, which was returned with the endorsement that the judgment-debtor could not be found. Immediately afterwards the decree-holder again made an application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor and the Court directed the issue of a second warrant:

Execution of decree—concl'd.

Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to direct the issue of a second warrant. O GUR DAYAL v. BEGG SUTHERLAND AND Co, 21 O. C. 261

Jurisdiction, territorial, limits of—Attachment—Corporation having different branches, property in possession of, whether can be attached—Property outside jurisdiction of Court.

The jurisdiction of a Court is circumscribed by and co-extensive with its territorial limits.

Where property sought to be attached is bona fide without the jurisdiction of the original Court whose decree is sought to be enforced and is in the hands of a third party who is not amenable to or permanently residing within the jurisdiction of the executing Court, the decree of the executing Court must be transferred to the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property sought to be attached is for the time being

A corporation may be said to reside wherever it carries on its business, irrespective of the location of its head office, and if a corporation such as a Bank has branch offices in fifty separate and distinct jurisdictions, it can and may be sued in any one of such jurisdictions, for the enforcement of a right in respect of which a cause of action exists within the limits of each independent jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of an executing Court to attach moveable property belonging to a judgment-debtor in the hands of another or under his control or a debt due by him is correlative and co-extensive with the right which the judgment-debtor himself would have had to sue for the recovery of his property or his debt as against his debtor or trustee.

One R entered into the service of the Patna Branch of the Bank of Bengal, and as security for his fidelity to the Bank deposited with the Bank Government promissory notes of the value of Rs. 20,000. The promissory notes were sent from Patna to Calcutta and were kept in the custody of the Head Office of the Bank. A creditor of R attached the Government promissory notes and the interest accruing due under them in execution of a decree passed by the Subordinate Judge at Patna:

Held, that inasmuch as the Bank had a residence within the jurisdiction of the Patna Court and carried on business therein, that Court had jurisdiction to attach both the Government promissory notes and the interest accruing under them, notwithstanding the fact that the notes were in the physical custody of the Head Office of the Bank at Calcutta. PAT BANK-OF-BENGAL v. SARAT CHANDRA MITRA

Trespasser, rights of, to execute decree.

The question of the right of a trespasser to execute a decree obtained on behalf of an estate depends largely upon the nature of the decree and of the objection taken by the judgment-debtor to the proceeding instituted by the trespasser. Where a decree is due to an estate the person who for the time being is recognized as the proprietor of the estate is the proper person to execute the decree

PAT HANDRIKA PRAFAD SINGH v. KESHO PRASAD SINGH

Execution of document, proof of—Deed filed for collateral purpose—Construction of document.

Where a deed is filed merely for a collateral purpose, it need not be proved with the same form.

Execution of document—conold.

alities as when it is sought to enforce its provisions in a suit. O LACHHMAN PRASAD v. BALDEO PRASAD, 5 O. L. J. 625; 21 O. C. 312 396

Explosives Act (IV of 1884) Rules framed under the Act, rr. 3, 71—Toy fireworks—Presumption—Possession of explosives—License to possess certain quantity for specified period—Contravention of conditions of license—Offence.

The onus is on the person in possession of explosives to show that they are toy fireworks under rule 3 of the rules framed under the Act.

The whole scheme of the rules framed under the Explosives Act is to require a separate license for possession, at any one time and place, of explosives in addition to a license to import during a particular period. Where a permit for possession is granted limiting the quantity to be possessed at any specified period or at any particular place, the permission to import a larger quantity during the longer period must be read subject to the quantity in possession being exhausted or reduced below the maximum for which possession is permitted. M GURUMURTHI CHETTI, In re, 8 L. W. 626; 20 Cr. L. J. 108 988

s. 4 (1), (2)—China crackers, whether explosives.

China crackers are explosives within the meaning of clauses (1) and (2) of section 4 of the Explosives Act. M GURUMURTHI CHETTI, In re, 8 L. W. 626; 20 Cr. L. J. 108 988

Extradition Act (XV of 1903), ss. 7, 8, 8A, 18—Cheating, extradition for, whether permissible—Offence not mentioned in treaty—Bail, power of Magistrate to grant—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 496.

A person accused of cheating in the Hyderabad State can be made the subject of a warrant under section 7 of the Extradition Act, notwithstanding that the offence of cheating is not mentioned in Article IV of the Treaty, dated the 8th May 1867, between the British Government and the Hyderabad State.

The provisions of section 7 (2) of the Extradition Act override the provisions of section 496 of the Criminal Procedure Code, so that a Magistrate has no power, apart from sections 8 and 8A of the Extradition Act, to admit to bail a person arrested under section 7 of the Act. B MURLIDHAR BHAGWANDAS, In re, 20 Bom. L. R. 10; 9; 20 Cr. L. J. 34 674

s. 18 674
General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (45) 903

s. 6 (c) 732
s. 10 353

Ghatwali chakran land—Transfer, right of—Execution of decree—Sale of ghatwal's interest—Purchaser, rights of.

Defendant No. 1 was the ghatwal of certain lands. On 24th January 1899, in execution of a decree for money against him, his right, title and interest in the lands were sold and were purchased by the plaintiffs. Defendant No. 1 had executed a kabuliyat for these lands in favour of the Maharaja of Burdwan on 5th September 1896. The kabuliyat recited that at the time of its execution, negotiations were proceeding between the Government, the zemindar and the ghatwal for the resumption of these lands, which had not been at that time resumed and transferred to the zemindar. It was also clear from a lease, which was the counterpart of the kabuliyat and was executed on 29th January 1899 that up to that time the resumption had not taken place.

Ghatwali chakran land—conold.

Held, that on the date of the execution purchase by the plaintiff, the judgment-debtor had not ceased to be a ghatwal and, therefore, had no transferable right in the lands, so that the plaintiff got nothing by his purchase at the execution sale. C PURAN CHANDRA LAHA v. SOUDAMINI BAI SNABI, 28 O. L. J. 283 335
Gift, deed of, interpretation of—Possession postponed till death of donor—Interest of donee, nature of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6 (a)—Transfer of vested interest, validity of.

Where a deed of gift provided that the donee would not take possession of a portion of the gifted property until after the deaths of the donor and his wife, and the donee transferred this portion of the gifted property after the death of the donor but in the lifetime of his widow:

Held, that the gift must, so far as it related to the said portion of the gifted property, be regarded as a Will, that the donee was given a vested interest in the same subject only to a life-interest in favour of the donor's widow, and that, therefore, its transfer by the donee was not forbidden under section 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act. O LACHHMAN PRASAD v. BALDEO PRASAD, 5 O. L. J. 625; 21 O. C. 312 396

Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61), s. 106 (2)—Income Tax Act (II of 1886), s. 31—Income Tax (Amendment) Act (V of 1916)—Composition of income tax—Repudiation of agreement by Collector under provisions of Act (V of 1916)—Suit to declare agreement binding on Collector, maintainability of—Original jurisdiction of High Court, limits of.

A suit to declare that an agreement for composition of income-tax under the provisions of section 31 of Act II of 1886 which was repudiated by the Collector after the enactment of Act V of 1916 is binding on the Collector, does not lie on the Original Side of the High Court and is exempted from its jurisdiction by section 106 (2) of the Government of India Act.

In the absence of an averment that the Collector was malafide using the Statute to commit an act of aggression, the High Court has no jurisdiction to make an enquiry on the merits to determine whether the Collector was right in his view of the law. M BEST AND CO. v. COLLECTOR OF MADRAS, 35 M. L. J. 23 790

Grant of aghraharam village by Native Ruler before British rule—Presumption.

There is no presumption that an inam grant made by a Native Ruler more than 400 years prior to British rule was a grant of land revenue alone and did not include the kudinaram. P C SURYANARAYANA v. PATANNA, 41 M. 1012; 25 M. L. T. 30 689 in perpetuity, transferable—Transfer of grant—Issue of fresh sanad after transfer, legality of.

Where a transferable grant in perpetuity has been made in favour of one person who has transferred the same to a third person, no subsequent sanad in favour of the transferor or any other person can legally be issued so as to constitute a fresh grant, unless the transfer can be avoided. N DAMADAJI v. MARTAND 901

Grove-holder acquiring proprietary rights in village—Sale of proprietary right—Rights in grove, whether transferred—Merger.

A grove-holder, who obtains by inheritance the superior proprietary rights in the village in which the grove stands, does not lose his right to the grove when the superior proprietary rights so inherited by him pass by virtue of an auction sale to a third person. O GULAB RAI v. KAZIM ALI, 21 O. C. 263; 6 O. L. J. 32

Guardian and ward—Sale of minor's property by guardian

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), s. 15

ss. 19, 25—Father, whether can be appointed guardian—“Guardian”, meaning of—“Custody”, what is—Welfare of minor—Enquiry, duty of, whether can be delegated by Court.

A Court has no power under the Guardians and Wards Act to appoint a father the guardian of the person of his children, and where such appointment is made, the order of appointment is without jurisdiction.

The expression “guardian”, as used in section 25 of the Guardians and Wards Act, is not confined to statutory guardians appointed under the Act, but includes any person having the care of the person of a minor or of his property or of both. Such a person need not necessarily be the de facto guardian of the minor.

The “custody” referred to in section 25 of the Guardians and Wards Act includes both actual and constructive custody.

The duty of inquiry under that section is cast upon the Court and cannot be delegated.

A father may in his discretion entrust the custody and education of his children to another but by doing so, he does not cease to be his children's guardian that being an office which in his lifetime he cannot delegate to a third person. O MUSHAF HUSAIN v. MOHAMMAD JAWAD, 21 O. C. 194; 5 O. L. J. 618

s. 25

Hindu Law—‘Avyavaharika debts,’ meaning of.

An Avyavaharika debt only means a debt not opposed to good morals. M GARUDA SANTASAYYA v. NERELLA MUTHAMMA, 35 M. L. J. 661; 9 L. W. 1: 25 M. L. T. 86

Bandhu, who is—Sister's son, whether Bandhu.

The term ‘Bandhu’ has been defined in the Mitakshara as a Bhinna Gotra Sapinda, that is to say, sprung from a different family but connected by common corporeal particles, or by consanguinity.

A sister's son is a Bhinna Gotra Sapinda and is, therefore, a Bandhu. PAT BISHENDAYAL v. JEISERI KUER, (1914) PAT. 323

Adoption—Custom—Ceremonies, performance of, whether necessary.

In the Punjab the performance of an elaborate ritual or religious ceremony is quite unnecessary to the validity of an adoption, but there is no authority for the view that mere treatment, unaccompanied by a formal giving and taking of the child to be adopted, satisfies the conditions necessary to a legal adoption. Adoption may be of two kinds, formal and informal, but it is only the adoption of the first description which is recognized by law and which confers upon the adoptee the status of son to his adoptive father. In other words, the law requires from the adoptor a manifestation of his unequivocal intention to clothe the adoptee with the legal status of his son. Such a manifestation of the adoptor's intention can be made either by a formal document combined with a proper treatment or by a formal giving and taking of the child. P RATTAN DEVI v. MUNO, 117 P. R. 1918

Hindu Law—contd.

Adoption of daughter's son, validity of—Ceremonies, necessary—Custom, special, proof of—Aroras of Lahore District.

In the Punjab an elaborate religious ceremony is quite unnecessary for a valid adoption according to Hindu Law but there must at least be a formal giving and taking of the child to be adopted.

The adoption of a daughter's son by a Hindu is opposed both to the Hindu Law and the general agricultural custom of the province, and a person setting up such an adoption must prove a special custom in favour of its validity.

There is no special custom among the Aroras of Lahore District which permits the adoption of a daughter's son. P GOPI CHAND v. MALAN, 106 P. R. 1918

Mitakshara—Dravidian branch—Widow, whether can adopt with consent of remote reversioner.

Under the Dravidian branch of the Mitakshara Law, in the absence of authority from her deceased husband, a widow may adopt a son with the assent of his male agnates.

In the case of an undivided family, the consent must be obtained by the widow within that family: if the father-in-law is alive, from him, if not alive, from the deceased husband's brothers. The assent of separate and remote kinsmen is insufficient.

The principle is the same if the husband dies separate from his kindred. The widow must still obtain the assent of her father-in-law, and if he be dead, of the divided brothers or the other nearest Sapindas. In considering what assent is sufficient, rights of property cannot be disregarded: and the widow cannot be allowed to adopt on the assent of remoter relations when there are nearer ones in existence. P C VEERABASAVARAJU PANTULU v. BALASURYA PRASADA RAO, 41 M. L. J. 198; 25 M. L. T. 1: 86 M. L. J. 40; 17 A. L. J. 34; 23 C. W. N. 251 rules of, modification of, by custom—Mitakshara—Kashmiri Brahmins—Daughter's son, whether can be adopted.

The rule of the Mitakshara which lays down that a boy whose mother the adoptive father could not have married in her maiden state cannot be lawfully adopted, is not recognised by Kashmiri Brahmins so that the adoption of a daughter's son is permissible according to the custom prevailing among them. O IKBAL NARAIN v. RAJENDRA NARAIN, 21 O. C. 276; 5 O. L. J. 701 by widow—Adverse possession against widow, whether affects rights of adopted son.

Under the Hindu Law a son adopted by a widow does not derive his title from his adoptive mother, just as a reversioner does not derive his title from or through the widow.

Time, therefore, does not run against the adopted son prior to the date of his adoption and adverse possession against the adoptive mother does not affect his rights. N SITARAM SHROKARAN v. RAJARAM LATJEE

Hindu Law—contd.

Adoption by widow—Consent of sapindas, nature of, requisite to validate adoption—Consent of remote reversioner, effect of.

An adoption made by a Hindu widow without a bona fide attempt to obtain the advice of her husband's sapindas, ignoring a nearer reversioner and securing the assent of one more remote, is invalid.

A Hindu widow made no attempt to adopt a son for 15 years after her husband's death but on her death-bed adopted her sister's daughter's son with the consent of a remote reversioner who was interested in the adopted boy, after sending a threatening letter to the nearer reversioner that, if he did not give his consent within 24 hours, she would adopt:

Held, that the adoption was invalid. M CEIRAVURI PATTABHAMARAJU v. KALLAPALLI TIRAPATIRAJU, 1 L. W. 413. (1918) M. W. N. 678 222

Guardianship—Minor—Guardian de facto, powers of—Alienation by guardian to pay off ancestral debts, whether binding on minor.

K. and G. were two Hindu brothers who had executed a mortgage of their joint properties. K. died leaving him surviving as his heiresses two minor daughters who were married, but whose husbands did not assert any claim to the management of their properties. G. with whom the two minor girls were living, acting as the de facto guardian of their property, executed conveyances of portions of the joint properties for paying off the ejmali debts of himself and his deceased brother K.:

Held, that the conveyances were binding upon the minors, inasmuch as had they not been executed, the probable result would have been that either the whole of the joint properties would have been endangered or at any rate bigger sacrifices would have been inevitable. C ISHANI DASI v. RAJENDRANATH JASH, 28 C. L. J. 250 303

Mother, whether natural guardian after re-marriage—Joint guardians, whether can be appointed.

A Hindu mother's natural right to be a preferential guardian of the person of her minor children is lost by reason of her re-marriage, though she may be appointed a guardian as any stranger.

There is nothing in the Hindu Law which prevents the Sovereign as guardian from appointing more persons than one as guardians of the person of a minor. N CHIRONJI KASAR v. PUNAM CHAND 75

Joint family—Alienation—Antecedent debts—Burden of proof—Pious obligation of sons to pay father's debts, whether arises during father's lifetime.

Where a mortgagee sets up a charge in his own favour made by one whose title to alienate he necessarily knew to be limited and qualified, he may reasonably be expected to allege and prove facts presumably better known to him than to an infant member of the family, namely, those facts which embodied the representation made to him of the alleged needs of the estate and the motives influencing his immediate loan.

Where an alienation of family property made by a Hindu father is questioned by his sons during his life, no question of the pious obligation of the sons to pay off their father's debts can arise. O JAI NARAIN v. RAJRANG BAHADUR SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 691 914

Hindu Law—contd.

Joint family—Alienation—Antecedent debt, what is.

An antecedent debt justifying the father, or manager of a joint Hindu family in charging the family property must be an obligation not only antecedently incurred, but incurred wholly apart from the ownership of the joint estate or the security afforded or supposed to be available by such joint estate. N DILESHWAR RAM BRAHMAN v. NOHAR SINGH 193

—Alienation—Collusive decree against some co-parceners—Execution—Sale—Purchase by decree-holder—Suit by other co-parceners to set aside decree as fraudulent—Relief awardable—Decree, form of—Partition, working out of, in suit—Plaintiff, right of, to recover whole property—Decree-holder purchaser, whether entitled to equities.

A collusive decree obtained against some of the co-parceners in a joint family on a sham transaction is not binding on the other co-parceners. Where joint family property is sold in execution of such a decree, the co-parceners are entitled to get the sale set aside and to sue for the recovery of their shares. They are not, however, entitled to recover the whole property and the decree-holder is entitled to the shares of his judgment-debtors.

Where specific properties are sold in Court auction, it is not necessary that there should be a separate suit for partition for the allotment and ascertainment of the shares. Partition may be directed in the suit itself and the plaintiff may be given his share.

The decree-holder purchaser cannot claim against the plaintiffs, who were no parties to the collusive decree based on a non-existent debt, an equitable remedy such as that implied by subrogation. M NADHAMUNI IYYAN v. APPU ODAYAN 799 —Ancestral property—Presumption—Burden of proof.

In the case of a testator who was living separate from his family and had admittedly a large fortune of his own and had for many years been carrying on business on his own account, even although he had originally acquired some ancestral property, it is impossible to say that any presumption arises in favour of the proceeds of an ordinary business transaction being ancestral rather than self-acquired property. PAT ADWAT PRASAD v. RADHIKA RAMAN PRASAD SINGH 694

—Antecedent debt—Mortgage—of joint property by father—Subsequent mortgage in renewal of prior one—Sons, liability of.

A prior mortgage over joint family property created by a Hindu father cannot be treated as an antecedent debt for the purpose of binding his sons' interest in co-parcenary property under a subsequent mortgage between the same parties.

A debt contracted by the father on the security of the joint family estate cannot be treated as a debt of the father within the meaning of the doctrine as to antecedent debts. The doctrine must be restricted to cases of antecedent debts borrowed on the father's sole responsibility with no obligation on the joint family or its properties. M BADAGALA JOGI NAIDU v. BENDALAM PAPIAH NAIDU, 35 M. L. J. 382 289

Hindu Law—contd.

Joint family—Co-sharers—Joint property, entire, in possession of one co-sharer—Co-sharers, remedy of, nature of—Property with one member of joint Hindu family—Joint family property—Presumption.

Where a co-sharer is in possession of the entire joint property, the remedy of the other co-sharers as against the said co-sharer lies not by ejectment of the co-sharer but by partition of the joint property.

Property in the hands of and dealt with by one member of a joint Hindu family cannot be presumed to form part of the joint family property but it must be shown that it belonged to the joint family or was purchased out of joint family funds. O IKBAL NARAIN v. RAJENDRA NARAIN, 21 O. C. 270; 5 O. L. J. 701

767
Father, separate property of, nature of, when passing to sons—Oudh Estates Act (1 of 1869), s. 2—Oudh Estates (Amendment) Act (III of 1910), ss. 2, 21—Grantee, original, dead before passing of Oudh Estates Act—Heirs of grantee and their descendants, succession of, before passing of Oudh Estates (Amendment) Act—Law governing grant.

Under the Hindu Law when the separate property of a father descends on his death to his sons, it becomes their joint ancestral property.

Where an original grantee died before the passing of the Oudh Estates Act and his estate passed to his brother as his heir and after the latter's death, to the latter's sons before the passing of the Oudh Estates (Amendment) Act:

Held, that the estate in the hands of the original grantee's nephew and their descendants was governed by the rules of their ordinary personal law. O ACHHAIBAB SINGH v. JANG BAHADUR SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 687

901
Karta, purchase in name of—Debts collected and loans made by karta—Presumption—Burden of proof.

Where a purchase of property is made in his own name by the karta of a joint Hindu family, the presumption is that the property is acquired out of the family funds, unless it can be shown by definite evidence that the karta acquired the property from private funds and not from funds which were in his hands as the head of the family.

Where the head of a joint Hindu family collects money due upon family bonds, the presumption is that he makes the collections on behalf of the joint family, and if he re-issues the money collected on fresh loans, the presumption again is that he issues it for the benefit of the family and not for his own private benefit. Pat KAMLESHRI PRASAD SINGH v. RAGHUBANS PRASAD SINGH, (1919) PAT. 62

949
Partition, suit for—Separation—Burden of proof.

In a suit for partition by a member of a joint Hindu family the initial onus is on the defendant to prove separation. Pat NARSING MISSEER v. BIRJU MISSEER

755
Separation—Revenue papers, entry in, weight of—Evidence, whether conclusive—Females, position of—Maintenance allowance, measure of—Court, duty of.

Where the name of the widow of a deceased member of a Hindu family is entered in the revenue papers in respect of the joint share belonging to her husband in the family property, such entry cannot, in the absence of any very definite evidence as to the manner in which that entry came to be made, be treated as conclusive evidence of the fact that the family separated although there was no actual division of the property, especially when it appears that the entry was disputed immediately after it had been made.

Hindu Law—contd.

In fixing the maintenance allowance for a Hindu female, the Court has to look to the circumstances of the joint family, i. e., to the value of the joint family property, to the income of the family, and to the number of people who have claims to be supported out of the said property. O SUNDARA DEBIA v. SHEO RAM, 5 O. L. J. 697

153
Joint family—Title, division of, whether distinguishable from division of property—Separation—Joint management by manager for all members—Partition by metes and bounds—Enquiry, nature of—Manager, liability of.

In cases of joint Hindu families, a division of title is distinguishable from a division of property, the former being a matter of individual decision, the desire on the part of one member to sever himself from the joint family and to enjoy his hitherto undefined or unspecified share separately from the others, without being subject to obligations which arise from the joint status of the latter, being the natural resultant from his decision, namely, the division and separation of his share by metes and bounds. But a separation of one branch of the family from another does not necessarily put an end to the joint management of the estate by the manager on behalf of all; for a partition by metes and bounds may not take place till several years later. In an ordinary suit for a partition of the joint family property, where there has been no previous separation, the enquiry is, in the absence of fraud or other improper conduct, directed to ascertain the divisible assets, the manager not being liable to account for his past dealings with the family income. He cannot, however, escape liability to account for the income once a separation has taken place. O SURAJ NARAIN v. IQBAL NARAIN, 5 O. L. J. 676

543
Marriage—Kayasths, sub-castes of, whether can intermarry—Issue of two sub-castes, assimilation of, to one sub-caste, effect of.

Ordinarily a Kayasth belonging to one sub-division does not marry into another sub-division, but no such restriction is recognised by the Hindu Law.

Where a Kayasth whose parents belonged to different sub-castes is assimilated into one of those sub-castes, his marriage with a girl of such sub-caste is not open to objection. O HAR BAHADUR LAL v. CHAND RAJ BAHADUR, 5 O. L. J. 655; 21 O. C. 298

400
Mitakshara—Suretyship, kinds of—Suretyship for payment by father—Sons, liability of—Construction of documents.

There are three kinds of suretyship according to the Mitakshara, for appearance, for assurance and for payment. The surety by way of assurance consists of a general warranty of credit, but a surety for payment is one who says "if he does not pay, then I myself will pay." When a surety for appearance or a surety by way of assurance dies, his sons are under no obligation to pay, but in the case of a surety for payment they are bound to pay.

Hindu Law—contd.

A Hindu father entered into a suretyship obligation in the following words: "I shall make V: pay the amount due under the said promissory note within two months from this date. In default of payment as aforesaid by the said person within the said time, I shall pay the amount of principal and interest on the said promissory note and get back the said promissory note and the surety bond and the title deeds."

Held, that this was a suretyship for payment dane and the surety's son was liable for the obligation created by the said contract. M THANGATHAMMA v. ARUNACHALLAM CHETTIAR, 35 M. L. J. 229; (1918) M. W. N. 673; 41 M. 1071 76

Partition, partial, effect of—Presumption
—Co-parcenary right, whether retained in properties left undivided.

Where a partition takes place between the members of a joint Hindu family, the presumption is that there is a complete partition in status and of all the properties, and if certain properties are left undivided there is no presumption that the co-parcenary right is retained in those properties. P BHOLA DEVI v. MOHKAM CHAND, 121 P. R. 1918 784

Succession—Bombay School—Female heirs—Daughter, estate taken by—Mayukha and Mitakshara.

It is only under the Bombay School of Hindu Law that a daughter succeeding to her mother's stridhan can take an absolute estate and it is peculiar to the Bombay Presidency and Berar that females who belong to the family of the propositus by birth as distinguished from marriage, take absolute interests.

There is no ground for holding that only where the Mayukha is paramount is the daughter so favoured.

In the Districts of Satara and Ratnagiri in the Bombay Presidency the Mayukha, though not paramount, is at least of ancillary authority. N LAXMAN RAO v. BHAI SAHEB 116

Immortality of woman, effect of—Tie of blood relationship, severance of—Succession to property of unchaste Hindu woman.

Immortality on the part of a Hindu woman does not sever the ties of blood relationship and there is no rule of Hindu Law which would prevent the blood relations of such a woman from succeeding to her property on her death. O SATISH CHANDER MUKERJI v. MAHABALI PRASAD, 21 O. C. 272 750

Mithila and Benares Schools, difference between—Female succeeding to estate of son, death of—Estate, whether goes to husband's heirs or son's heirs—Property purchased out of income of estate, devolution of.

Under the Mitakshara Law as interpreted by the Benares School, when a female succeeds to the estate of her son, the heirs of the son, the last male holder, would succeed to the estate after the death of the female.

The Mithila School is a branch of the Mitakshara School, the Mitakshara being the basis of the works which set out the law of the Mithila country. Therefore, it lies on those who allege to the contrary to prove that there is something in the Hindu Law as interpreted by the Mithila School to justify their contention that when a woman succeeds to her son the immoveable property goes on her death to the heirs of her husband, and not to the heirs of her son.

Hindu Law—contd.

There is no difference in this respect between the Benares and the Mithila Schools of Hindu Law.

Where the circumstances are such as to show that a Hindu female purchased moveable property from the income of the estate inherited from her son, with a view of its becoming part of the main estate, it passes with the estate at her death, if previously undisposed of, to her son's heirs and not as her stridhan to her heirs. N TORTAN BAI v. BALLABHJI OJHA 956

Succession—Mitakshara School—

Spiritual benefit, whether test for preference among rival bandhus—Maternal uncle, whether to be preferred to sister's daughter's son

By THE FULL BENCH.—(Sir Dawson Miller, C. J., and Sir Ali Imam, J., dissenting).—In a family governed by the Mitakshara school of Hindu Law the maternal uncle of the last male owner is preferred to the sister's daughter's son as next heir to the estate.

Per Mullick, J.—Both the Dayabhaga and the Mitakshara recognize the principles of propinquity of blood and religious efficacy. The only difference is that in the Dayabhaga religious merits arising from the celebration of the Parvana Sradh is accorded greater weight and that in the absence of religious merit accruing from Parvana rights, the ability to benefit the deceased by some other religious ceremony is a sufficient foundation of a title to inherit. The Mitakshara, on the other hand, regards oblations presented by cognate kinsmen as secondary and conferring no claim against the whole body of agnates. The Dayabhaga, admitting that the oblations are secondary as compared with agnates of the same line, insists that the Parvana Pindas conferred by cognates should prevail against agnates of a remoter line. The true view is that nearness of blood determines the heritable right while the doctrine of spiritual efficacy determines the preferential right.

The test of religious and spiritual benefit can and should be applied to determine the preferential right, that is to say, where the principle of affinity by blood relationship does not clearly indicate with which claimant the preference lies.

Per Jwalu Prasad, J.—The first and foremost rule of preference among several claimants is that the nearest in degree, ascertained by the simple method of counting given in the Mitakshara, excludes those more remote and when the degree is equal only then other considerations might be resorted to for the purpose of preference among the rival claimants.

The rule that the heirs ex parte paterna should be preferred to those ex parte materna is not to be found in the text relating to Bandhus in the Mitakshara and there is no authority for supplying any omission in that text.

Per Imam, J.—In the Mitakshara religious efficacy is not the determining guide for the purpose of inheritance.

Per Tortan Bai, J.—As between Bandhus of the same class a rule of preference may be found in the quantity of spiritual benefit which they confer.

Hindu Law—contd.

Pat UMA SHANKAR PRASAD v. NAGEWARI KOBRI, 3 P. L. J. 668 625

Succession—Reversionary heirs joining in mortgage by female, whether bound by mortgage 78

Reversioners, claim by—Proof
Ejectment suit—Unnecessary parties, addition of, effect of.

Those who claim the property of a deceased separated Mitakshara Hindu as his reversionary heirs, must show that they are both his next heirs and within fourteen degrees.

On the death of a separated Hindu, his estate was taken possession of by the defendants. The plaintiffs, fifty-nine in number, who claimed to be the reversionary heirs of the deceased, brought an action in ejectment, the scheme of which was to bring into Court a large number of persons more or less remotely akin in blood to the deceased, in the hope of ousting the defendants by a mass attack, and afterwards to assign the fruits of victory to the parties entitled by further litigation inter se.

Held, that such a plan embarrassed the Court as well as the opposite party and obscured the issues and was, therefore, much to be condemned.
P C MEWA SINGH v. BASANT SINGH, 24 M. L. T. 429; 28 C. L. J. 530 540

Trust, charitable—Misappropriation of trust funds by trustee—Liability of trustee's son—Liability to account—Period of accountability—Discretion of Court.

Under Hindu Law the son of a trustee of a public charity is liable for the funds of the trust misappropriated by his father. The fact that the father was guilty of a criminal offence does not affect the liability of the son.

The Courts have a discretion in limiting the period for which accounts should be rendered by a trustee. M GARUDA SANYASAYYA v. NERELLA MUTHEMMA, 35 M. L. J. 661; 9 L. W. 1; 25 M. L. T. 86 740

Widow, alienation by—Ijara granted to de facto manager—Necessity—Burden of proof—Recital as to necessity, effect of, where independent evidence available—"Benefit of estate," meaning of—Estoppel—Reversioner receiving rent due for period prior to death of widow, whether ratifies lease—Property acquired by widow with savings out of income of husband's estate, whether follows corpus.

A de facto manager of the estate of a Hindu widow taking an ijara of the properties inherited by the widow from her husband must show that there was legal necessity for the grant of the ijara or that the ijara was granted for the benefit of the estate.

R. a Hindu died leaving three sons, T, M. and H., each of whom got one-third share of the estate left by R. H. died and his one-third share passed to his widow B. Then T. died and his one-third share passed to his brother M., who thus got a two-thirds share in the estate left by R. Thereafter M. died leaving his widow P., who thus inherited a two-thirds share of the properties. P. and B. then granted an ijara patta of their respective shares in favour of one K., who was the brother's son of P. and who had been living with P. from his infancy and who was managing the estate for P. and B. The recital in the pattah was that it was granted for the purpose of liquidating the debts incurred in the lifetime of M. and in the time of the widows' possession of the estate and the debts incurred for meeting the expenses of the shrads.

Hindu Law—contd.

Held, (1) that as the evidence that was available as to the pecuniary condition of the estate at the time of the alienation proved that the money that came into the hands of the widows was sufficient for paying off the debts left by their respective husbands, as no legal necessity for the grant of the ijara was made out and as the ijara was not granted for the benefit of the estate, the ijara could not be binding upon the reversioners;

(2) that had the ijaradar been a stranger he could not have been expected to account for the money that came into the hands of the widows, nor would he have been responsible for the previous mismanagement, if any, of the estate, but that the lessee, being the de facto manager of the estate, must show that there was legal necessity for the grant of the ijara.

When independent evidence is available as to the pecuniary condition of the estate at the time of an alienation by the widow, such evidence might be accepted in preference to the recital in the deed of alienation alleging the existence of legal necessity.

The expression, "benefit of the estate", although it cannot be precisely defined, includes the preservation of the estate from extinction, its defence against hostile litigation, its protection from inundation and similar circumstances.

Powers of a Hindu widow to deal with family property discussed and case-law reviewed.

The recovery by the reversioner from lessees of arrears of rent due to the widow for a period prior to the death of the widow does not amount to a ratification of the lease granted by the widow.

In deciding whether the property acquired or purchased by a Hindu widow with savings out of the income from her husband's estate is to descend with the husband's estate or is to be treated as separate estate of the widow, the matter to be considered is whether the widow has made any distinction between the original estate and the after-purchases. In each case the question is one of intention. If the widow intended to treat the purchased properties as part of the original estate, they must follow the corpus. C. UPENDRA KISHORE MONDAL v. NOBO KISHORE MONDAL, 23 C. W. N. 64 993

Widow—Apostasy and re-marriage thereafter—Forfeiture of first husband's estate—Hindu Widow's Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856), s. 2, scope of—Caste Disabilities Removal Act (XXI of 1850), effect of.

Held, per Wallis, C. J., and Oldfield, J. (Seshagiri Aiyar, J., dissenting).—A Hindu widow, who becomes a Muhammadan and marries a Muhammadan, forfeits, by the re-marriage, her interest in her first husband's estate under the general principles of Hindu Law.

Per Wallis, C. J. (Oldfield and Seshagiri Aiyar, JJ., dissenting).—The forfeiture is also entailed by reason of section 2 of Act XV of 1856.

Per Wallis, C. J. —Act XXI of 1850, though it relieved the widow of a Hindu from forfeiture, of her widow's estate on her abjuration of Hinduism, did not enlarge the nature of that estate, so as to relieve her from forfeiture in the event of her renouncing her status of widow by re-marriage.

Hindu Law—contd.

The words "any widow, . . . upon her re-marriage," in section 2 of Act XV of 1856 are wide enough to cover the case of any widow of a Hindu re-marrying, whether or not her marriage would otherwise be prohibited by any custom or interpretation of Hindu Law and whether the re-marriage was to a Hindu or to a member of another religion.

Per Oldfield, J.—Act XV of 1856 is not applicable to cases of re-marriage after apostasy, and the forfeiture is entailed only by reason of the incompatibility between the renunciation of a widow's status and the retention of a widow's estate.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The rule of Hindu Law that a widow, who re-marries and is thus not true to the bed of her deceased husband, cannot inherit to his estate can be applied only when she is within the pale of Hindu Law. Her re-marriage after apostasy cannot divest her of the right to inherit which subsisted to her at the date of her conversion to another religion. M VITTA TAYARAMMA v. CHATAKONDU SIVAYYA, 35 M. L. J. 317; 24 M. L. T. 183; (1918) M. W. N. 625; 8 L. W. 480; 41 M. 1078

50
— Widow, decree against, whether bars suit of reversioner 553

—, decree against, whether binds reversioners—Consent decree—Award—Collusion.

Every case in which the reversioners of a deceased Hindu are sought to be bound by a decree obtained against the widow of the deceased, must be decided on its own particular circumstances, and the person who claims that the decree amounts to a bar against the reversioners must establish that the decree was fairly obtained either after a contest or, if by consent, in such circumstances that the decree ought to be regarded as having been fairly and properly obtained. B RAMA SANTU RANDIVE v. DAJI NARU RANDIVE, 20 Bom L. R. 947

125
—, gift made by, for spiritual benefit of husband, validity of.

There is no authority for the proposition that gifts for religious or charitable purposes made by a Hindu widow cannot be recognized under the Hindu Law as calculated to confer any benefit upon the soul of her deceased husband unless they be made in connection with a particular shradh ceremony.

A gift made by a Hindu widow of a reasonable portion of the property inherited by her from her husband, whether through her sons or not, for religious purposes with a view to the spiritual welfare of her deceased husband, is valid under the Hindu Law and is binding upon the reversioners.

There are ceremonies and duties incumbent upon a Hindu widow, in the sense that their performance is regarded as indispensable to the spiritual welfare of her late husband. These duties she is under an obligation to perform and these ceremonies she must carry out, and for this purpose she has a power of alienation in respect of the corpus of the property in her hands, independent altogether of the proportion which the property alienated may bear to the whole. In the case of an alienation for a purpose regarded as indispensable to the spiritual welfare of the late husband, the question will not be, what proportion does the property alienated bear to the entire estate, but only was the alienation a reasonable one under the circumstances, in the sense that the expenditure incurred was such as might be regarded as suitable to the position of the family. A KUNJ BEHARI LAL v. LALU SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 996

Hindu Law—contd.

847
— Widow—Gaya shradh ceremony, performance of, whether legal necessity.

The performance of the Gaya Shradh ceremony of a deceased Hindu is a legal necessity. In order, however, to make it binding upon the estate, so as to enable the widow of the deceased to raise money on the security of the estate, it must be proved that there was no sufficient income from the estate to meet the expenses of the ceremony. PAT BISHEN-DAYAL v. JEISERI KUER, (1918) PAT. 323

746
—, power of alienation of 357
— Surrender of life-interest by limited owner—Surrender by widow and daughter in favour of next reversioner with reservation for maintenance, validity of.

A surrender by a Hindu widow and her daughter of their life-interest in the property of the last male owner in favour of the next reversioner, with a condition that they should be maintained by the latter, is valid and operative and accelerates the inheritance of the reversioner making him full owner of the property on that date.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J. (Napier, J. dubitante).—The principle that onerous obligations attached to a surrender by a widow will invalidate the surrender does not apply to the case of a daughter who inherits as next heir. The only condition which can be imposed on principle upon any female heir other than the widow is that the surrender should be of the whole estate. The act of a daughter who, being the next heir, surrenders the whole estate, vests the absolute inheritance in the next male heir, even if she reserves as consideration for her surrender the full enjoyment of the property during her lifetime.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A stipulation for her own maintenance by the widow will not affect the legal result of the surrender.

A Hindu female who surrenders an estate does not become civilly dead from the date of the surrender for any purpose, except for making the person in whose favour the surrender is made heir to her husband's estate.

Per Napier, J.—A surrender by a limited female owner need not necessarily be in favour of the next heir if that heir agrees to be passed over, and it is immaterial whether the next heir is a party to the deed of surrender or executes a deed of surrender for herself or simply consents to being passed over.

Where an arrangement made at the time of surrender, though retaining a benefit for the person surrendering or even conferring a benefit on some person not entitled, is an obviously fair and just arrangement for the maintenance and benefit of the person surrendering, then the surrender is not initiated by the arrangement. M GRINNASWAMI PILLAI v. APPASWAMI PILLAI, 5 M. L. J. 512; 8 L. W. 512; (1918) M. W. N. 756; 24 M. L. T. 403; 42 M. 25 147

Hindu Law—concl'd.

Hindu Widow's Re-marriage Act
(XV of 1856), s. 2 50

Impartible property, transfer of, whether subject to right of maintenance of younger members—Custom, proof of.

Where it is alleged that a transfer of impartible property is subject to the right of maintenance of the younger members of the family of the transferor, the allegation must be supported by proof of a custom to that effect existent in the family. PAT DEBENDRO NATH SAI DEO v. DEO NANDAN SINGH, 3 P. L. J. 648 613

Improvements made by tenant—Compensation, whether can be awarded.

A tenant is not entitled, either under the Transfer of Property Act or apart from it, to any compensation for any improvements made by him on the land during the continuance of his tenancy. N BANMALI v. NIBAL SINGH 354

Income Tax Act (II of 1886), s. 31 790

Income Tax (Amendment) Act (V of 1916) 790

Insolvency—Property acquired after adjudication—Insolvent, power of, to deal with property.

Failing intervention by the Court or the Receiver in which an insolvent's property has vested, the insolvent has the same power of acting in respect of after-acquired property as he had before the insolvency. N BALIBHADRADAS v. MIRCHILAL 235

Interest Act (XXXII of 1839) 465
Interpretation of Statutes—Illustrations to Statutes, value of.

The illustrations to an Indian Statute are to be taken as part of the Statute. P C BALLA MAL v. AHAD SHAH, 35 M. L. J. 614; 16 A. L. J. 905; 124 P. R. 1918; 23 C. W. N. 233; 25 M. L. T. 55; 160 P. W. R. 1918 1

Irregularity or illegality, disregard of express law, whether constitutes.

A disregard of the express provisions of the law is not a mere irregularity which can be condoned or remedied but an illegality and the Court cannot maintain or overlook an illegal order upon any ground of administrative convenience. N EMPEROR v. RAI SINGH, 20 C. R. L. J. 105 985

Judicial decision, whether can override Statute.

No decision of any Court can get over, add to or alter the clear words of a Statute. C PROTAP CHUNDRA DUTT v. ABBIMANINI SURINI 752

Jurisdiction, territorial, of British Courts—Subject of Native State, whether can be tried for abetting within State offence committed in British India—Arrest by British Police of subject of Patiala State on Railway lines within Patiala territory, legality of.

Where a subject of a Native State is charged with abetting an offence committed in British India and the alleged abetment consists entirely of what the accused did or said at a place within the State territory, he cannot be tried in a Court in British India for such abetment.

The accused, a subject of the Patiala State, was arrested in a Railway carriage at Bhatinda by the British Police:

Jurisdiction—concl'd.

Held, that the arrest was lawful as full and exclusive power and jurisdiction of every kind over the Railway lines and over all persons within those lines had been ceded by the Patiala State to the British Government. P BALWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR, 31 P. R. 1918 CR; 20 C. R. L. J. 65 865 territorial, limits of 943

Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts 224, 363, 470, 948

Jurisdiction of Revenue Courts to decide finally on validity of documents of title.

The proposition that the Revenue Courts have no exclusive jurisdiction to decide finally upon the validity of documents of title, though correct as a general statement of the law, is subject to the obvious qualification that the Civil Courts cannot decide any matter in which jurisdiction has been exclusively reserved to Revenue Courts. O JAGANKATH SINGH v. DRIGBIJAY SINGH, 21 O. C. 210; 5 O. L. J. 611 88
Kanjars—Presumption of marriage.

The general presumption in favour of marriage, which prevails in the case of ordinary people, does not hold good in the case of kanjars, who must prove the fact of marriage by very clear evidence. P MUHAMMAD BAKISH v. NAWAZISH ALI, 183 P. W. R. 1918; 75 P. R. 1918 73

Karinda, whether dominates will of employer.

A karinda is as a rule a servant of very minor status, who cannot be presumed without very distinct evidence on the point to be in a position to dominate the will of his employer. O DALPAT SINGH v. AHMAD SHAH, 5 O. L. J. 579 17

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 12, 18—Acquisition proceedings—Award by Collector—Owner dissatisfied with award—Suit for compensation, maintainability of—Remedy.

The only remedy of a person whose property is being acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and who is dissatisfied with the award made by the Collector, is to call upon the Collector to refer the matter to the Civil Court under the provisions of section 18 of the Act. A separate suit for the recovery of the value of the land acquired is not maintainable. C JOGESH CHANDRA ROY v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 29 C. L. J. 53 702
s. 18 702
s. 54—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, rr. 22, 32, applicability of, to land acquisition cases—Appeal against part of decree—Memo. of objections, maintainability of, against other parts covered by decree but not subject of appeal.

Under Order XLI, rule 22 of the Civil Procedure Code, a memorandum of objections may be filed against a decree as a whole or against a part of it which may not be the subject-matter of the appeal.

Where the Collector preferred an appeal against the valuation of some of the plots in a land acquisition case fixed by the District Judge:

Held, that it was competent to the claimant to file a memorandum of objections in respect of other plots which were covered by the petition, though not the subject of appeal.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act makes no departure from the ordinary rule of the Civil Procedure Code which allows a party to appeal not only against the whole decree but also against parts of it.

Land Acquisition Act—concl'd.

A memorandum of objections need not be confined to the subject-matter of the appeal.

What the appellant objects to is not to be the criterion, but the question in each case must be whether the respondent's rights have in any way been imperilled by the action taken by the appellant.

M DEPUTY COLLECTOR, MADURA v. MUTHIRULA MUDALI, 35 M. L. J. 83; (1918) M. W. N. 458; 24 M. L. T. 83; 8 L. W. 271

Landlord and tenant—Co-sharer landlords—Decree for entire rent passed in suit by one co-sharer landlord to which other co-sharers were parties—Suit, subsequent, by defendant landlord, maintainability of—Joint tenant, whether liable for whole rent—Tenant, death of—Rent, claim for, barred against some heirs, whether can be enforced against others.

In a suit for rent brought by one of the co-sharer landlords, making the other co-sharer landlord a pro forma defendant, a decree was passed for the entire rent in favour of both the landlords in respect of their respective shares. The defendant co-sharer landlord, being unwilling to recognise one of the judgment-debtors as his tenant, refused to accept that decree and brought a separate suit for his share of the rent for the same period:

Held, that so long as the previous decree stood, he could not obtain a second decree for the same arrears of rent and that if he was unwilling to recognise one of the judgment-debtors in the previous suit as his tenant he should have contested that suit.

Although under certain circumstances one of several joint tenants may be made liable for the whole rent, yet where the claim for arrears of rent against some of the heirs of the original tenants is barred, the remaining heirs cannot be made separately liable for the entire rent. C KISHORI MOHAN TALAPATRA v. OSI PRAMANICK

Dispossession of tenant from portion of holding—Rent, suspension of—Apportionment.

Where a landlord dispossesses, a tenant from a portion of the holding, the entire rent is suspended and the landlord is not entitled to any apportionment of rent on the lands still remaining in the possession of the tenant unless he has replaced the tenant in possession or has taken some effective step to that end. C RAJANI MANNA BAGDI v. SATISH CHANDRA ROY

Ejectment—Notice to quit, cancellation of—Tenant, claiming under proprietary rights—Declaration, suit for, by landlord—Limitation, commencement of—Fresh notice, whether gives fresh period of limitation.

Where a notice issued by a landlord to eject his tenant is cancelled by the Revenue Court on the ground that the tenant is more than an ordinary tenant, the right to file a suit to challenge that order accrues to the landlord on the date of the order and he must bring a suit for that purpose within six years of that date.

It is not open to him to defeat the law of limitation by issuing an abortive notice of the same character shortly before the institution of the suit. Such a proceeding cannot bring the suit within time if the right has already lapsed. O JAGDAMBA BAKSHI SINGH v. MAHADEO SINGH Landlord and tenant—cont'd.

Ejectment, suit for—Permanent tenancy, plea of—Construction of document—'Saswatham' and 'kayam,' meanings of—Presumption—Denial of landlord's title to lands not comprised in suit, effect of.

The expressions 'kayam' and 'saswatham' occurring in lease-deeds ordinarily import a permanent tenancy. Even if literal effect is not given to these words so as to involve as a necessary inference a permanent tenancy, the surrounding circumstances may be looked at and a permanent tenancy may be inferred from the use of these words.

Where a deed of lease is a renewal of prior documents in respect of which a permanent tenancy was judicially upheld, the presumption may be made that a permanent tenure was intended to be conferred by the later document.

The denial of the landlord's title in respect of lands not comprised in an ejectment suit will not entail forfeiture of the tenancy in respect of the suit lands under section 111 of the Transfer of Property Act. M VENKATACHARIAR v. NARASIMHA AYYANGAR, 35 M. L. J. 647; (1918) M. W. N. 846; 24 M. L. T. 469; 9 L. W. 164

Lease, permanent and heritable, grant of—Re-entry, right of, reservation of—Assignment of tenure.

When a landlord grants a permanent and heritable tenure in land, he has no estate left in him, unless he reserves to himself a right of re-entry or reversion.

Where one of the clauses of a lease was as follows:—"If the said land and bari be not used for dwelling purposes the right under the pattah shall be void."

Held, that the clause did not amount to a reservation of a right of re-entry. C MOHAMMAD RAJUDDIN AHMAD v. BASUDA SUNDARI DAS, 28 C. L. J. 278

Lease, perpetual, by majority of co-sharer landlords, validity of—Suit by minority to set aside lease—Decree, form of.

A lease of common land granted in perpetuity by a majority of the co-sharer landlords is not binding on the dissenting minority, except (1) where there is a custom authorizing such a lease or (2) in a case of unavoidable necessity or (3) where the lease is obviously beneficial to all the sharers.

In such a case the minority can sue to eject the lessee, and their remedy is not limited to a suit for a partition of their shares.

The proper decree to be passed in such a suit is to declare that the lease is not binding on the plaintiffs and to direct that they should be put in possession for themselves and on behalf of the other co-sharers. M EYUNNI RAGHAVACHARYULU v. EPURI GOVINDASARI, 35 M. L. J. 402; 41 M. 1068

Occupancy holding, transfer of part of—Transferee, position of—Recognition of transfer by co-sharer landlord, effect of—Suit by landlord against recorded tenant—Declaration, suit for, by transferee, maintainability of.

A landlord cannot interfere with the possession of a transferee of a part of a non-transferable occupancy holding and if he does so, the transferee is entitled to recover possession from him by suit. Until, however, he is actually dispossessed, he is not entitled to a declaration that a tenant alleged by the landlord to be his tenant is not his tenant and that a decree obtained by the landlord against his alleged tenant is fraudulent. Having no legal title or interest which the landlord is concerned to deny, the transferee cannot invoke the operation of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act in his favour.

Landlord and tenant—concl'd.

If some out of a number of co-sharers recognise the transfer either of a part or the whole of a non-transferable occupancy holding, the remaining co-sharers are not entitled to eject the transferee. By obtaining recognition from a co-sharer landlord, however, the transferee does not acquire any right or valid title in the holding itself as against the entire body of landlords. Notwithstanding such recognition the remaining co-sharers can sue the original tenant for the entire rent without impleading the transferee.

If the consenting landlords choose to repudiate their consent and to join the non-consenting landlords in suing the original tenant for the entire rent on the footing that the consent given by them does not operate to create a division of the tenancy, it is open to them to do so. Pat GANANATH SATPATHY v. HARIHAR PANDHI, (1918) PAT. 289; 5 P. L. W. 232

359

Tenant occupying house in abadi—Tenancy, determination of—Ejectment from house—Presumption.

Where a tenant is found in occupation of a house in the abadi of an agricultural village, the village site being the landlord's property, there is a presumption that he holds the site as appurtenant to his tenancy and has no right to retain it against the wish of the landlord on ceasing to be a tenant in the village.

Where a landlord sues to eject a tenant from a house in the abadi of an agricultural village, he must establish his right to eject the latter by showing that the latter has ceased to retain any interest in the village entitling him to retain the site.

O RAM HARAKH v. AMBIKA DATT RAM, 5 O. L. J. 642; 21 O. C. 257

420

Tenant, suit by, to have it determined which of two defendants is his landlord, maintainability of—Interpleader.

A tenant has no right to bring a suit to have it determined which of the two defendants, both of whom claim rent from him is his landlord. C BHUSAN CHANDEA GHOSE v. JAHAR MAL BHUTRA

733

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), ss. 12, 13, 14—Pleader, conviction of, for keeping common gaming house—Misconduct—Procedure applicable.

The conviction of a Pleader for keeping a common gaming house amounts to misconduct implying a defect of character and unfitting him to be a member of the profession.

In the case of a Pleader's conviction for a criminal offence the procedure prescribed in sections 13 and 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act need not be followed, and the case re-tried under the Act. The only question for the High Court to determine is, whether the offence implies a defect of character unfitting the person to be a Pleader. M SEETARAMIAH, In the matter of, 35 M. L. J. 650; (1918) M. W. N. 847; 19 Cr. L. J. 1001; 8 L. W. 621; 25 M. L. T. 71; 42 M. 111

341

Letters Patent (All.), s. 10, decree under—Review, whether permissible.

No application for review is allowable where the decree sought to be reviewed was given in an appeal under section 10 of the Letters Patent. A KALYAN SINGH v. ALLAH DIYA, 16 A. L. J. 564

476

Letters Patent (Pat.), cl. 10—Order staying proceedings, whether judgment—Order of single Judge staying proceedings in criminal case—Appeal, whether lies.

An order staying proceedings is not a "judgment" within the meaning of clause 10 of the Letters Patent of the Patna High Court, inasmuch as such order contains no final adjudication of the rights of the parties.

An order of a single Judge staying proceedings in a criminal case is an order made in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction, and, therefore, no appeal lies against it under clause 10 of the Letters Patent. Pat BABUJAN MISIR v. SHEO SAHAY CHAUDHURY, 3 P. L. J. 504; 5 P. L. W. 153; 19 Cr. L. J. 1008

348

Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 113, 144—Bengal Village Chaukidari Act (VI B. C. of 1870), s. 51—Chaukidari chakran lands, resumption of—Patnidar, rights of—Suit for possession by patnidar—Limitation—Contract, meaning of.

The word "contract" primarily means a transaction which creates personal obligations, but it may, though less exactly, refer to transactions which create real rights. It is in this latter sense that it is used in section 51 of the Bengal Village Chaukidari Act and the rights thereby reserved to patnidars and others on the transfer to the zemindar of chaukidari chakran lands, comprehensively included in the word "contracts", are real rights, the enforcement of which is secured not by a suit for specific performance, but by a suit for possession.

Where, therefore, a patnidar sued the zemindar to recover possession of such lands:

Held, that the Article applicable to the suit was not Article 113 but Article 144 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act, 1877, and that the period of limitation accordingly was not three but twelve years. P-C RANJIT SINGH v. MAHARAJ BAHADUR SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 964; 35 M. L. J. 728; 23 O. W. N. 198; 25 M. L. T. 8

262

Sch. II, Art. 144
Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 4—

262

General Clauses Act (IX of 1897), s. 10, applicability of—Pre-emption decree—Money not paid within time prescribed—Court, power of, to extend time.

Section 4 of the Limitation Act and section 10 of the General Clauses Act only apply to the cases in which a period of limitation has been prescribed as mentioned in those sections, and do not apply to a condition prescribed in the decree itself.

A pre-emption decree in its very terms becomes a decree in favour of the defendant vendee when the conditions imposed upon the plaintiff have not been complied with, so that where the decree has become final no Court has power to alter its terms so as to extend the time allowed for payment. A HIRDEY NARAIN v. ALAM SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 892

353

s. 6, Sch. I, Art. 181, applicability of—Mortgage suit—Final decree, application for—Limitation—Minority of applicant, effect of.

Section 6 of the Limitation Act applies solely to the time for the institution of a suit or the time for an application for an execution of a decree. It does not apply to an application to make a decree absolute.

Limitation Act—contd.

A mortgage suit remains pending until a final decree is passed. An application for a final decree in a mortgage suit being governed by the Code of Civil Procedure is subject to the limitation prescribed by Article 181 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

N VINAYAKRAO KRISHNARAO v BALJNATH SALIGRAM 934

s. 12—Time spent in obtaining copies of judgment and decree—Separate periods, whether can be allowed—“Requisite,” meaning of—Time requisite, whether question of fact or of law.

It is the duty of an appellant to obtain as many copies as possible on a single petition, and if he wastes time applying first for one copy and then for another, he cannot claim that all the separate periods spent in obtaining copies were really “requisite” within the meaning of section 12 of the Limitation Act.

An appellant can, under section 12 of the Limitation Act, only deduct such time as was requisite for obtaining copies, and what time is requisite for this purpose is a question of fact on the circumstances of each particular case. Where a lower Appellate Court decides that a double period was not necessary, the question whether it is right or wrong is not a question of law P SREE SINGH v. PEM RAJ, 100 P. R. 1918; 185 P. W. R. 1918 31

s. 14—Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (III Bom. of 1874), ss. 10, 11A—Exclusion of time—Proceedings before Collector, time taken by, whether can be excluded—Collector, whether “Court.”

The Collector when acting under sections 10 and 11A of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act acts purely as an administrative officer. He does not act as a “Court” and the proceedings before him are not civil proceedings within the meaning of section 14 of the Limitation Act. The time occupied by such proceedings, therefore, cannot be excluded under section 14 of the Limitation Act in computing the period of limitation for a suit. B LAXMAN GANESH RAJENDRA v. KESHAY GOVIND DESHPANDE, 20 Bom. L. R. 918 467

s. 18, Sch. I. Art. 166—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 90—Execution of decree—Sale—Application to set aside sale made more than thirty days after date of sale—Applicability of s. 18—Finding, necessary.

It is not competent to a Court to come to the conclusion that an application to set aside a sale under Order XXI, rule 90, of the Code of Civil Procedure made more than thirty days from the date of sale falls within the provisions of section 18 of the Limitation Act, without finding as a fact the date or time when the applicant came to know of the sale. C ABHA MUNSHI v. KAMU MOLLA 970

s. 19—Arbitration, reference to—Agreement to be bound by amount settled by award, whether amounts to acknowledgment

A request to arbitrators to settle accounts coupled with an undertaking to be bound by whatever sum is fixed as payable by their award, amounts only to a conditional acknowledgment of liability which will not save limitation under section 20 of the Limitation Act if the arbitration falls through and the reference does not fructify into an award. M NARAYANASWAMY MUDALI v. GANGHADARA MUDALI 89

Limitation Act—contd.

s. 19—Mortgage decree—Application for final decree for sale, rejection, of—Appeal—Petition by judgment-debtor, acknowledgment of liability in—Limitation, fresh starting point of.

An acknowledgment by a judgment-debtor of the amount due by him under a mortgage decree is sufficient, under section 19 of the Limitation Act, to save limitation for the purpose of making an application for a final decree for sale.

The right to take legal steps for enforcing a right need not be expressly acknowledged if the right itself is acknowledged. M SUBBALAKSHINI AMMAL v. RAMALINGA CHETTY, 8 L. W. 526; 35 M. L. J. 552; (1918) M. W. N. 792; 24 M. L. T. 486; 42 M. 52 298

s. 19—Receiver, appointment of, by Court “to do all things necessary for the preservation of firm”—Power to acknowledge—Acknowledgment by Receiver, whether saves limitation.

A Receiver may be an agent authorised to make an acknowledgment within the meaning of section 19, Explanation II, of the Limitation Act. The language of the section is general enough to include an agent appointed either by Statute or by Court, provided he is authorised under the law to make acknowledgments.

A Receiver appointed “to do all things necessary for the preservation of the assets of a firm” has authority to make acknowledgments on behalf of the firm, if they are necessary for the preservation of the firm’s assets and if the Receiver acts bona fide with that object. M LAKSHUMANAN CHETTY v. SADAYAPPA CHETTY, 35 M. L. J. 571; 8 L. W. 594; (1918) M. W. N. 877 179

s. 19—Acknowledgment, what amounts to—Endorsement of payment implying liability for balance, whether sufficient.

An endorsement of payment on the back of an instalment bond in the handwriting of the debtor, impliedly acknowledging his liability for the balance of the debt due under the bond, amounts to an acknowledgment of liability for the purposes of section 19 (1) of the Limitation Act. N MOHAN LAL v. GANESH RAM 724

s. 20—Part payment of principal, whether must be signed by debtor.

Under section 20 of the Limitation Act a fresh period of limitation can only begin to run if the fact of the person making the payment or part payment of the principal debt appears in the handwriting of such person. PAT MANINDRA NATH ROY v. KANHAI RAM MAHWARI, (1919) PAT. 46 728

Sch. I, Art. 2—Execution of decree—Court officer improperly holding sale—Suit for damages—Limitation.

Plaintiff’s property having been advertised for sale in execution of a decree, he tendered the amount of the decree to the defendant, who was the Court Amin and whose duty it was under Order XXI, rule 69, of the Civil Procedure Code, to receive the money and not to proceed with the sale. The defendant, however, refused to accept the money and proceeded to hold the sale. The plaintiff brought a suit for damages against the defendant:

Limitation Act—contd.

Held, that the basis of the suit being that the defendant had refused to accept the money which he was bound to accept under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, or that he had improperly held a sale purporting to be under the provisions of the Code, the suit was governed by Article 2, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act. A MUKAT LAL v. GOPAL SARUP, 16 A. L. J. 1017 815

Sch. I, Art. 10—Pre-emption suit—
Possession taken by vendee prior to sale—Limitation, commencement of.

Under Article 10 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act the time from which the period of limitation begins to run against the pre-emptor is the date on which the purchaser takes, under the sale sought to be impeached, physical possession of the whole of the property sold.

Where, however, under an arrangement with the vendor the vendee takes possession of the property which he intends to purchase before the actual sale of the property to him, the possession cannot be held to be under the sale, and must in law, for the purpose of applying Article 10 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act, be referred to the subsequent date on which the sale actually takes place, and it is from this subsequent date of the actual sale that the period of limitation prescribed by the said article begins to run against the pre-emptor. P. RAM PEARA v. RUP LAL, 80 P. R. 1918; 181 P. W. R. 19:8 102

Art. 11Art. 12*Art. 44—Claim by ward barred under Art. 44—Plea of invalidity of sale, whether available in suit for possession by vendee—Decree, form of.

In a suit by the vendee for possession brought after the expiry of 3 years after attainment of majority by the ward, the latter is entitled to plead the invalidity of the sale though he could not actually sue to set it aside.

On the expiry of the period specified in Article 44 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act the purchaser from the guardian is not of right entitled to the properties in the possession of the ward.

The proper decree to pass in such a case is to order possession to be given to the vendee if the consideration is not returned within a specified time. M CHINNASWAMI REDDI v. KRISHNASWAMI REDDI, 35 M. L. J. 652; 42 M. 36 856

Art. 61—Deposit made by plaintiff on one date—Appropriation on behalf of defendant on another date—Limitation, commencement of.

It was agreed between the parties to an appeal that the cost of printing and preparing the record should be shared equally between them. In consequence of this arrangement the plaintiffs made a deposit in Court of a certain sum, out of which the Court subsequently appropriated the actual cost of printing and preparing the record. Thereafter the plaintiffs sued the defendants for contribution.

Held, that for the purpose of Article 61, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act the limitation for the suit began to run not from the date of the deposit but from the date of the appropriation. O IQBAL NARAIN v. STRAJ NARAIN 336

Limitation Act—contd.

Sch. I, Arts. 75, 132—Mortgage-deed—Stipulation for payment by instalments—Penal clause for recovery of full amount at enhanced interest on default in payment of instalment whenever mortgagee required, construction of—Waiver—Suit to enforce mortgage—Limitation—Interest, enhanced, liability for.

Defendant executed a mortgage-deed in favour of plaintiff stipulating to repay the amount advanced thereunder by monthly instalments. There was a penal clause binding the mortgagor to pay the full amount at an enhanced rate of interest on his failure to pay the first instalment whenever the mortgagee required. After the second instalment became due, the plaintiff enforced the penal clause and sued for the whole amount with enhanced interest:

Held, (1) that the suit was governed by Article 132 and not by Article 75 of the Limitation Act;

(2) that as the plaintiff failed to exercise the option to enforce the penal clause, the contract for instalments subsisted;

(3) that plaintiff was not entitled to claim enhanced interest. M LAUGHAKKAMMAL v. SOKKAYYA NAICK, (19:8) M. W. N. 586 191

Art. 96—Rectification of lease suit for, on ground of mistake—Limitation—Lease—Rent receiver deprived of small portion of land without any reduction of rent, whether entitled to damages from lessor.

A suit for the amendment or rectification of a lease, on the footing of a common mistake of the lessor and the lessee under which some land was wrongly included in the lease, is governed by Article 96 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act and must be brought within three years from the date when the plaintiff became aware of the mistake.

The plaintiff took settlement of certain resumed Ghatwali lands from the Government, subject to a permanent lease granted by the Government to one U, on the footing that the property so settled with the plaintiff would be treated as a permanently settled estate. Subsequently one B. brought a suit with reference to a small portion of the said lands, which he alleged was lakheraj. That suit to which the present plaintiff and the defendants were made parties, was successful. The plaintiff then brought a suit against the Government for rectification of the lease and for the refund of a small sum of money:

Held, that the mere fact that as rent receiver the plaintiff was deprived of a small portion of the lands without any reduction of rent payable to him by U. would not entitle him to any damages. C BIJOY CHAND v. SECRETARY OF STATE 972

Arts. 106, 120—Partnership, suit for dissolution of—Limitation.

A suit which is virtually for dissolution of a partnership, though in form one for accounts, is governed by Article 120 and not by Article 106 of the Limitation Act. M NARAYANASWAMY MUDALI v. GANGHADARA MUDALI 89

Arts. 115, 120 810

Art. 116—Construction of document—Sale-deed—Covenant of indemnity, breach of—Suit for damages—Limitation.

Limitation Act—contd.

A sale-deed recited that the property was sold free from all debts or liabilities, and contained a covenant that in the event of the vendees having to pay some excess amount, that is to say, some further charge over and above the sale consideration set forth in the deed, the estate of the vendor would be liable to make it good together with damages and costs. It subsequently transpired that the property was subject to a mortgage and on the basis of that mortgage a decree was passed against the vendees along with the original mortgagor. In order to save the property from sale under that decree, the vendees had to pay up the mortgage money along with interest and costs. They then sued their vendor to recover the sum paid by them under the mortgage decree:

Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to rely upon the covenant contained in the deed as a covenant of indemnity and to bring a suit upon it, the limitation for which began to run from the date on which they suffered actual loss by reason of their being compelled to pay off the prior mortgage charge. A RAM DULARI v. HARDWARI LAL, 16 A. L. J. 706; 40 A. 603 18

Sch. I, Art. 116—Suit by share-holder for recovery of dividend against registered company, period of limitation for—'Registered,' meaning of—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (45).

A suit by a share-holder for the recovery of dividend against a registered company is governed by Article 116 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

The word 'registered' in Article 116 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act must be read as defined in section 3, clause (45), of the General Clauses Act, and the term 'registered' in the latter Act includes documents registered under any special law such as the Companies Act or the Copyright Act as well as registration under the Registration Act. M RIPON PRESS AND SUGAR MILL COMPANY, LIMITED v. NAMA VENKATARAMA CHETTY, 35 M. L. J. 256; 8 L. W. 354; 24 M. L. T. 246; 42 M. 733 903

Art. 120 89, 301, 810
Art. 132 191

Art. 135—Mortgage—Puisne mortgagee, suit by, for possession—Cause of action—Limitation—Failure of payment of part of consideration, effect of.

A puisne mortgagee is not bound to file a suit for possession of the mortgaged property within twelve years from the date of his mortgage where the property is not in the possession of the mortgagor but in that of the mortgagee.

Limitation under Article 135 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act against a puisne mortgagee does not begin to run until the redemption of the first mortgage and he is entitled to bring his suit for possession within twelve years from the date of redemption.

Plaintiff, a puisne mortgagee, sued for possession of the property mortgaged after having effected the redemption of the previous mortgage. The mortgage in favour of the plaintiff was made on the 14th February 1895. Although it was nominally with possession, the first mortgagee was in possession through his tenant, the mortgagor. In 1907 the plaintiff brought a suit for redemption against the prior mortgagee and obtained a decree. It appeared that he paid off the previous mortgagee but could not recover possession because the mortgagor succeeded in obtaining possession of the land:

Limitation Act—contd.

Held, (1) that plaintiff's cause of action arose when the first mortgagee was paid off and that the suit was, therefore, within time;

(2) that the fact that plaintiff had not succeeded in proving the payment of a part of the consideration for the mortgage did not debar him from recovering possession of the property. P BUDHA v. MUL RAJ

Sch. I, Art. 142 916
Art. 144 230
Art. 166 230, 399
Art. 178—Application to file award—Date of award, what is.

The date of the award referred to in Article 178 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act is the date when the award is delivered to the parties so that they have notice of its contents, and not the date on which it is actually written and signed. PAT KUNJ LAL v. BANWARI LALL 711

Art. 181 130, 732, 934

Art. 181.
Article 181 of the Limitation Act applies to an application under Order XXXIV, rule 6 (2), Civil Procedure Code. M SUBBALAKSHMI AMMAL v. RAMALINGA CHETTY, 8 L. W. 526; 35 M. L. J. 552; (1918) M. W. N. 792; 24 M. L. T. 486; 42 M. 52 298

Art. 181—Mortgage suit—Decree for sale, application for—Appeal—Decree confirmed on appeal—Limitation, commencement of.

The right to apply for a final decree for sale in a mortgage suit arises on the expiration of the time fixed for payment by the original decree and the limitation applicable is that contained in Article 181 of the Limitation Act.

Where, however, an appeal is preferred against the preliminary decree, the right to apply for a final decree accrues from the date of the appellate decree, even though it merely confirms the decree of the first Court. M SUBBARAYALU NAYUDU v. SUNDARARAJA NAYUDU, 25 M. L. J. 507 185

Art. 181—Sale, setting aside of—Limitation for execution, commencement of.

Where an execution sale is set aside on account of the fraud of one of the judgment-debtors in collusion with the auction-purchaser, the decree-holder has, under Article 181 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act, three years from the date of the setting aside of the sale within which to execute the decree. PAT KESHAWESARINDRA SAHI v. DEBENDRA-BALA DASSI 245

Art. 182 732

Art. 182—Step-in-aid of execution—Defence of appeal preferred by judgment-debtor, whether step-in-aid of execution.

Defending an appeal preferred by the judgment-debtor in an execution proceeding is not a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Article 182, Schedule I of the Limitation Act. PAT BRIJ NATH SAMAI SINGH v. HARI CHARAN RAY 187

Limitation Act—contd.

Sch. I, Art. 182 cl. (5)—Execution of decree—Application against minor judgment-debtor without application for appointment of guardian, whether step-in-aid of execution—Application in accordance with law.

An application for execution of a decree made against a minor judgment-debtor represented by his mother, without any application to the Court for an order appointing the mother guardian ad litem of the minor, is in accordance with law and operates to save limitation. PAT KESHW SURENDRA SAHI v. MALUKRANI KUER, 4 P L J. 15 415

Art. 182 (5)—Execution of decree—Application to reject objections against execution of decree, whether step-in-aid of execution.

An application to a Court executing a decree to reject certain objections filed against the execution of the decree, so as to enable the execution to proceed, is an application made to the proper Court to take a step-in-aid of execution. A TAMIZ-UN-NISSA v. NÁJJU, 16 A. L. J. 704; 40 A. 688 38

Art. 182, cl. (5)—Mortgage decree—Execution—Money deposited as security for costs—Application by decree-holder for payment out, whether application in execution or "step-in-aid of execution."

An application by a decree-holder for payment out of money deposited in Court, to be credited towards the decree amount, is an application for a "step-in-aid of execution" within the meaning of clause (5), Article 182 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

A fortiori is this the case where the deposit was made only as security and an order of Court is necessary to make it available for payment towards the decree amount.

Plaintiff obtained a mortgage decree against defendants for sale of their family property mortgaged to her. Sixth defendant, against whom the decree was ex parte, applied to set it aside. His application was granted and a re-trial was ordered on his depositing Rs. 500 as security for costs. The amount was paid and the Court again passed a decree for sale in favour of plaintiff. Plaintiff applied for payment out of the said sum of Rs. 500 to her towards her decree amount and the payment was ordered. The plaintiff filed the present application in execution more than 3 years after the date of the revised decree, after giving credit for the Rs. 500 recovered in the previous application:

Held, that the previous application was an application for a "step-in-aid of execution" within the meaning of Article 182, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act and that, therefore, the present application, which was made within three years of the former, was not barred. M THANGI SHETTIL v. DUJA SHETTI, 8 L. W. 519; 35 M. L. J. 575; (1918) M. W. N. 748; 24 M. L. T. 483 226

Art. 182 (7)—Execution of decree—Instalment decree—Default in payment—Limitation, commencement of.

Unless an instalment decree clearly leaves the decree-holder no option on the happening of a default but to execute the decree once and for all for the whole amount due under it, the decree-holder may execute it on the happening of the first, second or any subsequent default, and limitation will run against him only in respect of each instalment separately from the date on which each such instalment may become due and payable. PAT MANINDRA NATH RAY v. KANHAI RAM MARWARI, (1919) PAT 46 728

Limitation Act—concl.

Madras District Municipalities Act (IV Mad. of 1884), ss. 21, 27—Municipal Council, powers of—Disbursement of funds—Acquisition of lanes—Interference by Court, limits of.

Under section 21 of the Madras District Municipalities Act a Municipal Council is a Corporation with power to contract and to do all things necessary for the purpose of its constitution, the Municipal fund being held by it under section 27 for the purposes of the Act. If the Council keeps within its authorization and acts bona fide, the Court will not interfere with its operations. It will be deemed the best judge, not only of what is most conducive to its own interest, but also of what is proper and fitting as regards third parties, and it will be left unchecked to take or not to take lands for promoting sanitation, etc. The Corporation is, however, protected only if it acts bona fide. M KRISHNASWAMI IYER, In re, 35 M. L. J. 251 128 ss. 207, 217, 264A—Notice under s. 207, non-compliance with—Prosecution—Construction of latrines by Council or notice to party to provide moveable receptacles, whether conditions precedent.

s. 27

128

Before prosecuting a person under section 264 A of the Madras District Municipalities Act for failure to comply with a notice issued under section 207 of the Act, it is not necessary that the Municipal Council should have called on him to provide moveable receptacles under section 217 or should have constructed the latrines themselves under section 264 (1). M PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. SETTIGIRI NARAYANA REDDI, 35 M. L. J. 442; 19 Cr. L. J. 981; 42 M. 57 161

ss. 217, 264A

161

Madras Estates Land Act (I Mad. of 1908), s. 3 (2) (d)—Village, whether estate—Ejectment, suit for—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

Where it was found that an agraharam village was granted to an inamdar by a ruler in 1373 and had ever since been enjoyed by his successors-in-title, and it was not proved that at the date of the grant there were any tenants in the village holding lands with any rights of occupancy by custom or otherwise:

Held, (1) that the grant must be presumed to have been of the kudivaram as well as of the melvaram right;

(2) that the village was not an "estate" within the meaning of section 3 (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act, and that, therefore, the inamdar was entitled to eject the tenants through the Civil Court. P C SURYANARAYANA v. PATANNA, 41 M. 1012; 25 M. L. T. 30 689

Madras Estates Land Act—contd.

ss. 5, 77, 125, 132—Rent, decree for, by Revenue Court—Execution sale, whether passes title-free of incumbrances—Charge for arrears of rent, nature of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 100.

A sale in execution of a decree for rent in a Revenue Court passes the property to the purchaser free of all encumbrances except those specified in section 125 of the Madras Estates Land Act.

The statutory charges on a land for arrears of rent is not a charge within the meaning of section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Per Phillips, J.—The Madras Estates Land Act treats the charge for arrears of rent on a holding as being of the same nature in all cases and creates no distinction between the charge where rent is payable in kind and the charge where rent is payable in money.

Though section 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not specifically re-enacted in the Madras Estates Land Act, section 132 of the latter Act leads to the same result.

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—The absence of any separate section in the Madras Estates Land Act like section 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act makes no difference in the scheme of the former Act, as it contains provisions in different sections which, in effect, reproduce the provisions of section 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. M PANANGIPALLI SCRANNA v. KATTAVENKATA SURYANARAYANA JAGAPATHIRAJU. 35 M.L.J. 443; (1919) M. W. N. 25 794 ss. 6 (2), 23, 45, 163—Landlord and tenant—Rent, right to recover, from persons not regular tenants—Jurisdiction of Revenue Courts—Grant of land for cultivation without fixity of property or tenure, validity of—Indefiniteness—Kandetha porupputhagai, payment of—Status of person paying—Permanent tenure, grant of, whether binding on grantor or his successor.

Under the provisions of sections 45 and 163 of the Madras Estates Land Act read with the Explanation to section 6, clause (2) of the Act, a claim for rent against persons within an estate who occupy ryoti land, either by legal right or otherwise, must be instituted in the Revenue Court.

A grant allowing the grantees to cultivate whatever and whenever they like is not a grant with any fixity of property or of tenure, which the law will recognize as conferring a heritable right.

Except under the provisions of the Madras Estates Land Act, a permanent settlement of rent by a landlord is not binding on his successors. The burden is on the grantee to show that there is a grant of the kind mentioned in section 26 of the Act.

Per Seshagiri, Aiyar J.—Where the relationship of landlord and tenant is admitted, the mere fact that the tenant has not paid rent for a long number of years will not bar the landlord's right to recover what he considers to be a reasonable rent.

Obiter.—A grant on payment of a kandetha porupputhagai, i.e., by payment of a fixed rent, will not make the grantee a landlord but only a tenant. M KENULAMMAL AVERGAL v. SANGALI SUBBA PILLAI. 35 M.L.J. 11 615

ss. 23, 45

Madras Estates Land Act—concl.

ss. 77, 125, 132
s. 163

794
615

Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII Mad. of 1865), s. 11—Land law of Madras

—Rent, rates of—Custom—Contract, whether paramount to status and usage—Contract implied from payment and acceptance of rent—Consideration for promise to pay enhanced rent, whether necessary.

Under section 11 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act of 1865 the rent payable by a tenant to his landlord is determined primarily by contract, which may be either express or implied. Failing such contract, resort is had, when no settlement has taken place, to local usage; but if such usage establishes a proper rent, then either party, if dissatisfied with it, may require resort to the Warum customary in the village for division of the crop. Failing proof of such customary Warum, it is the Collector's duty to fix the rent. All these methods, however, are only applicable in cases where no contract is proved.

The expression "implied contract" in the section is an English term of art, and must be so construed. It involves the legal incident of some consideration moving from the landlord, as that incident is understood in English Law.

A number of ryots had for years paid rent at the rate of 4 fanams, which was the prevalent rate for dry lands. At various dates, having dug wells at their own expense, they took up garden cultivation, and were thereafter charged, and for several years paid, rent at the rate of 8 fanams prevailing for wet lands. For Fasli 1912, however, they refused to accept Pattahs at that rate. It was found, in view of the long continuance of payments at the 8-fanam rate, that there was an implied contract to go on paying that rate, but that there was no consideration for the new promise, the land being already held on a contract to pay 4 fanams:

Held, that the implied contract was not legally enforceable, and that the ryots were entitled to Pattahs at the old rate. P C JAGATHEERA RAMA v. ALAWARASA ASARI. (1918) M. W. N. 732; 23 C. W. N. 225; 36 M. L. J. 49; 17 A. L. J. 129 907

Madras Revenue Recovery Act (II Mad. of 1864), s. 59—Sale for arrears of revenue, suit to set aside—Illegal levy of cess—

Limitation—Pleadings—Statement of facts taking case out of s. 59.

A suit to set aside a sale, which purports to have been held under the provisions of section 59 of the Madras Revenue Recovery Act by an officer competent to conduct it under the authority of the Act, should be brought within six months from the date of the sale as provided in the section.

If the plaintiff challenges the right of the Government to sell the property by showing that the provisions of the Act could not be legally applied and that his case is out of the scope of section 59, he should set forth the necessary facts in the plaint and prove them. M BHANIREDDI VENKAN DORAGARU v. SECRETARY OF STATE 844

Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act (I Mad. of 1900), ss. 3 (3), 5, 6 (3), 7, 9 (1), 19—Claim for compensation—Burden of proof—Settlement as to compensation before date of contract—Commissioner, second, appointment of—Functions of Commissioner—Commissioner's report, value of—Second Commissioner, duties of.

Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act—conold.

Ordinarily a tenant who claims compensation for improvements under Madras Act I of 1900 is bound to prove that he has improved the property and that he has spent money in making the improvements. He must show that he has done work which has added to the value of the holding, that that work is suitable and that it is also consistent with the object with which he obtained the Kanom.

Under section 5 (1) of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act the tenant against whom a decree in ejectment is passed is only entitled to the value of the improvements made either by himself or by his predecessor-in-title. He is not entitled to the value of the improvements effected by every person other than the landlord.

The decision in Thiruvattiyil Vattath v. Vishnu Barathukal, 28 Ind. Cas. 339, that if an increase in the income is proved, the presumption is that the tenant has improved the land, is too broadly stated.

The report of a Commissioner appointed by a Court is not equivalent to a judgment which is binding on the parties. Ordinarily, the Commissioner's report should be supplemented by the evidence which he gives in the case. The Commissioner should not only embody the statements of the parties but should give his own opinion on their contentions.

Section 7 of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act deals only with contracts which limit the right of the tenant to make improvements after the date of the contract.

Prima facie every person is entitled to enter into a contract settling the accounts between himself and another or settling the differences between them. If this right of the freedom of contract is to be taken away, it must be by express and clear words, and there is nothing in section 7 of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act which takes away the effect of a settlement as to compensation for improvements effected before the date of the contract.

An order appointing a second Commissioner to assess the compensation should not be regarded as a direction for re-valuation. Re-valuation is a technical term and should be confined to cases mentioned in clause (3) of section 6.

Where a Commissioner has ignored the evidence and sent in a report based on guess work, the direction to a new Commissioner to do that work properly is not a direction to re-value. Consequently the second Commissioner can only take into account the value prevalent when the first Commissioner made his report. M KUNNATH MADAMPIL KUNJUNNI v. MAMNARGHAT RAMANUNNI, 25 M. L. J. 2:9; (1918) M. W. N. 686

ss. 5, 6 (3) 7, 9 (1), 19

925

Malabar Law—Maintenance, claim for, against tarwad, nature of.

The right of a member of a Malabar tarwad for maintenance or an allowance is an incident of co-proprietorship in the property of the tarwad and that right cannot be denied unless circumstances

Malabar Law—conold.

show that the tarwad is not in a position to give a separate allowance. M MANIKKATH AMMINI AMMAL v. NANIKKATH PADMANABHA MENON, 35 M. L. J. 509; 41 M. 1075; 24 M. L. T. 498

104

Malabar Marriage Act (IV of 1896), ss. 17, 18; scope of—Registration of marriage, effect of—Claim against tarwad, whether forfeited.

Sections 17 and 18 of the Malabar Marriage Act were not intended to deprive a member of a tarwad of his or her rights in the tarwad. The registration of the marriage of a female member of a tarwad, therefore, under the Act does not cause a forfeiture of her rights and cast the duty of maintaining her and her children on her husband.

Section 18 of the Act only provides for personal guardianship and leaves the guardianship of property untouched. M NANIKKATH AMMINI AMMAL v. NANIKKATH PADMANABHA MENON, 35 M. L. J. 509; 41 M. 1075; 24 M. L. T. 498

104

Master, whether criminally responsible for acts of servant.

A master is criminally responsible for the acts of his servants if those acts are shown to have been done with his co-operation or under his authority. N GAMBHIR CHAND v. SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, NAGPUR, 20 Cr. L. J. 86

886

Merger

731

Minor—Guardian ad litem, who can be appointed as.

There is no rule that only the natural or certified guardian of a minor can act as his next friend for the purpose of legal proceedings.

A duly appointed guardian for a suit is fully entitled to represent the minor in connection with all subsequent proceedings which take place in the course of the execution of the decree passed in the suit. O KANIZ MEHBI BEGAM v. RASUL BEG, 5 O. L. J. 551 not properly represented in suit—Decree, validity of—Execution sale—Suit by minor to set aside sale—Limitation applicable—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 12, 144.

39

Where a minor defendant is not properly represented in a suit, a decree passed against him is a nullity, and the Court has no power to sell the minor's property in execution of the decree. Where such sale takes place, the minor can recover the property from the auction-purchaser even if he is a stranger, and the Article applicable to such a suit by the minor is Article 144 and not Article 12 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act. P HIRA SINGH v. GHULAM QADIR, 113 P. R. 1919

399

Mortgages, consolidation of, whether permitted.

The rule of consolidation of mortgages is a technical rule of English Law and is not founded on general principles of justice. Even prior to the enactment of the Transfer of Property Act the rule was not applicable to India.

A mortgagor or a person claiming under him is, therefore, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, entitled to redeem a subsequent mortgage without redeeming an earlier mortgage. N DEOCHAND v. BINJRAJ, 14 N. L. R. 184

365

Mortgage of entire interest in sixteen-annas mahal—Groves, whether included in mortgage.

The owner of a sixteen-annas mahal obtained decrees against certain persons who had certain rights in the mahal as grove-holders. In execution of these decrees he put up to sale the interest of the grove-holders and purchased it himself. Subsequently he mortgaged his entire interest in the mahal to the plaintiff without any sort of reservation:

Held, that the interest of the grove-holders acquired by the mortgagor merged in his estate as zemindar and was included in the mortgage. A HASAN ALI KHAN v. AZHARUL HASAN, 16 A. L. J. 900 367

Interest, excessive or exorbitant rate of—Debt contracted by Hindu father on credit of family property.

In cases of debts contracted by Hindu fathers on the credit of the family property, Courts have a discretion to reduce the rate of interest if it is excessive or exorbitant. O. DARGAHI v. RAJESHWARI PERSHAD, 21 O. C. 265 753

Lease by mortgagee—Suit by mortgagor for declaration that mortgage was unsupported by consideration and for its cancellation, maintainability of.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration that a mortgage executed by him in favour of 1st defendant was not supported by consideration and for cancellation of the instrument. The 1st defendant had leased one of the items of the property in dispute to the 2nd defendant, whose title as lessee was upheld in a suit brought by him against the plaintiff:

Held, (1) that the mortgage-deed could not be cancelled, inasmuch as the matter had passed beyond the stage of contract to that of an executed conveyance and the deed was neither void nor voidable for non-payment of consideration;

(2) that the plaintiff was not entitled to relief by way of cancellation of the deed, also on the ground that the parties could not be put in status quo ante by reason of the lease executed by the 1st to the 2nd defendant;

(3) that the prayer for declaration could not be granted inasmuch as there was no proof of any danger to the mortgagor's title to the properties. M. ABDUL HASHIM v. KADER BATCHA, 8 L. W. 543; (1918) M. W. N. 769; 35 M. L. J. 740; 24 M. L. T. 478; 42 M. 20 370

Money left with mortgagee to redeem prior mortgage—Redemption, time for, not specified—

Mortgagee, failure of, to redeem within reasonable time—Damages, suit for, by mortgagor, maintainability of—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 46, 55—Mortgage with possession—Consideration overstated by mistake—Mortgagee, whether can recover interest on amount overstated.

Where a portion of the mortgage consideration is left with the mortgagee to redeem certain prior mortgages existing on the property and no particular time is specified in the deed for such redemption, it is the duty of the mortgagee, in accordance with the principles laid down in sections 46 and 55 of the Contract Act, to redeem the prior mortgages within a reasonable time, i.e., by the first date upon which redemption is obtainable. If the mortgagee fails so to redeem the prior mortgages, the mortgagor is entitled to recover from the mortgagee damages sustained by him in consequence of the failure of the mortgagee to redeem.

Mortgage—contd.

Where a deed of mortgage, under which possession of the mortgaged property was handed over to the mortgagee, provided that there was to be no accounting between the parties at the time of redemption, and it appeared that a portion of the mortgage consideration was set down in the deed as being due to the mortgagee from the mortgagor, merely by way of guess without any account having been really taken at the time:

Held, (1) that it was open to the mortgagor to show that there was a mistake in the statement of the mortgage consideration;

(2) that the mortgagor was entitled to claim from the mortgagee in possession interest on the amount by which the said portion of the mortgage consideration exceeded the real amount due to the mortgagee from the mortgagor. O. PARTAB SINGH v. BALWANT SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 670 550

Redemption, decree for, obtained—Decree, defective—Suit, subsequent, for redemption, whether maintainable.

A decree for redemption once obtained bars a subsequent suit for redemption, although the decree be defective in so far as it neither fixes any definite time for payment of the mortgage money nor provides for the consequences of non-payment. O. SHEORAJ RAHADUR SINGH v. GAJADHAR SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 698 922

Subrogation, right of, when arises.

Before a person can claim to be subrogated to the position of a prior mortgagee, there must be a satisfaction of the whole of the prior mortgage. PAT DULHIN SONA KUEE v. JAMIL AHMAD 779

Suit on—Plea that fictitious property was included in deed to evade provisions of Registration Act—Burden of proof.

A mortgage-deed in which the properties hypothecated were stated to be a house in Calcutta and a small plot of rent-free land in Burdwan, was registered at Burdwan. In a suit on the mortgage the defendant, who was one of the representatives of the mortgagor, pleaded that the mortgage was invalid, having been registered at Burdwan where no such rent-free plot as mentioned in the mortgage ever existed or belonged to the mortgagor:

Held, that the onus lay upon the defendant to disprove the existence of the rent-free plot as described in the mortgage at the time when it was executed.

Semble.—Once the execution of a mortgage is proved, it is not open to those claiming under the mortgagor to allege or to adduce evidence to show that any of the properties purported to be mortgaged was either non-existent or not owned by the mortgagor at the date of the mortgage. C. SUDHIR CHUNDER SETT v. ABDULLA-UL-MUSAVI, 22 C. W. N. 894 520

Term fixed for redemption—Redemption, suit for, before expiry of term, maintainability of—Olog on redemption.

A mortgage-deed provided that if the principal and interest due on the mortgage was not paid up to the date fixed for such payment, the mortgagee was to take possession of the mortgaged property, was to appropriate its profits in lieu of interest without any liability to account to the mortgagor for the profits, which exceeded the amount of interest at the contract rate by practically half as much, was to secure to himself certain further or collateral advantages and was to remain in possession of the mortgaged property for a fixed period during which the mortgagor could not claim redemption. On the mortgagor failing to pay the principal and interest as stipulated in the deed, the mortgagee entered into possession of the mortgaged property. The mortgagor then sued for redemption, alleging that he was entitled to redeem during the period of the mortgagee's possession on the ground that the conditions in the mortgage-deed constituted a clog on the right to redeem:

Mortgage—concl'd.

Held, that the mortgage-deed did not contain a clog on the right of redemption and that, therefore, the suit was premature. O MUHAMMAD SHER KHAN v. SWAMI DAYAL, 5 O. L. J. 572 32

Mortgage-deed—Notice, failure to give, effect of.

In cases of mortgage decrees the omission to issue a notice under Order XXI, rule 21, Civil Procedure Code, does not render the sale of the mortgaged property absolutely null and void. O KANIZ MEHDI BEGAM v. RASUL BEG, 5 O. L. J. 551 39

Muhammadan Law—Divorce—Tafveez—Post-nuptial delegation of power of divorce, validity of—Restitution of conjugal rights, suit for, maintainability of.

Under the Muhammadan Law, post-nuptial delegation of the power of divorce or tafveez-i-talaq made by a Muhammadan husband in favour of his wife and contained in a registered kabin-namah executed after marriage is valid and operative.

The plaintiff, a Muhammadan, executed a kabin-namah sometime after his marriage in favour of his wife, which provided amongst other matters that he would not take a second wife without the permission of his first wife, and that in case of violation of this condition the latter might, when she chose, divorce him and take a second husband. Thereafter without taking the permission of his wife the plaintiff took a second wife and upon that the first wife exercised the right of divorce contained in the kabin-namah. The plaintiff then sued her for restitution of conjugal rights:

Held, that the suit did not lie, as the wife had exercised the power of divorce given to her by the husband and had thus put an end to the marital relation between herself and her husband. C SAINUDDIN v. LATIFANESSA BIBI, 22 C. W. N. 924 609

Gift—Musha, doctrine of, applicability of—Possession, delivery of, whether necessary.

Per Sanderson, C.J.—The doctrine relating to the invalidity of gifts of musha is wholly unadapted to a progressive state of society and ought to be confined within the strictest limits.

When a person makes a gift to two donees, one of whom is an adult and the other a minor but the latter is not in the guardianship of the donor at the time of the gift, and the adult accepts the gift on behalf of himself and the minor, the gift is not invalid. But when the gift is made to an adult and an infant who is in the donor's care or guardianship, the gift may be void because the donor is assumed to take seisin at once of the minor's share, whereas the gift in favour of the adult requires acceptance and thus confusion is occasioned.

Muhammadan Law—cont'd.

If a Muhammadan owner makes a gift of a house to two of his sons, one of whom is adult and the other is a minor and the adult son takes possession of the property, the gift is absolutely void.

According to Muhammadan Law seisin or actual possession by the donee is not necessary to complete the gift, but the donor must evince his intention of making a complete transfer of the ownership in the property, from himself to the donee by placing the latter in a position to enjoy it beneficially or to make use of it consistently with its purpose, and in considering this question the relationship of the parties must be kept in view. In other words, to be in a position to take possession is tantamount to taking possession: and to place the donee in a position to take possession, is equivalent to delivery of possession; similarly investing with authority for that purpose is equally sufficient.

Per Mukerji, J.—Under the Muhammadan Law as administered by British Indian Courts, where the subject of gift is incorporeal property not susceptible of physical possession the gift thereof may be completed by such transfer of control as may be appropriate and possible in the circumstances.

The doctrine relating to the invalidity of gifts of musha, though not favoured, cannot be altogether ignored or repudiated.

A settlement of a disputed or doubtful claim is a valid and binding arrangement which the parties thereto are not permitted to deny, ignore or repudiate. C MARIAM BIBI v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, 28 C. L. J. 308 561

Minor—Mother, power of, to deal with minor's estate.

Under the Muhammadan Law the Courts should uphold the acts of a mother in dealing with her minor son's estate, provided they are to the manifest advantage of the minor or for urgent or imperative necessity.

Where, however, a Muhammadan died leaving a widow and a minor son with a good and profitable estate on which they could live with comfort, and the widow nevertheless constantly borrowed small sums at exorbitant rates of interest for domestic purposes:

Held, that the debts having been incurred neither for the benefit of the minor nor for urgent or imperative necessity, they could not be held to be binding on the minor's estate. P KAPURA v. SHANKAR DAS, 108 P. R. 1918 306

Shia school—Waqf, creation of—Trust-deed not divesting settlor of ownership, whether constitutes waqf.

A trust-deed executed by a Shia Muhammadan and his wife contained a recital to the effect that the eldest son of the settlors had already been entrusted with the management of the landed properties belonging to the executants and that this management was to continue under the deed. The document also contained provisions as to what was to happen on the death of the executants, but none of those provisions operated so as to divest the executants of their ownership in the trust properties from the date of the execution of the deed:

Muhammadan Law—concl'd.

Held, that the document was insufficient to create a valid waqf. A ALI RAZA v. SANWAL DAS, 16 A. L. J. 875 212

Waqf, creation of—Dedication, colourable, validity of 94
Mussalman Waqf Validating Act (VI of 1913), whether retrospective—Muhammadan Law—Waqf, creation of—Dedication, colourable, validity of.

The Mussalmans Waqf Validating Act is not retrospective in its operation.

Where, therefore, before the passing of the Mussalmans Waqf Validating Act, a Muhammadan made a colourable dedication of his property, the charitable or religious purpose being so unsubstantial as to give to the settlement merely a colour of piety, the real object of the settlor being to create a family settlement in perpetuity:

Held, that the dedication was not valid and did not create a waqf. A NAINUL HAQ v. MOHAMMAD SUBHAN-UL-LAH, 16 A. L. J. 841 94

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 64, 76—Bill of exchange—Presentment, necessity of—Damage caused by non-presentment—Burden of proof.

The payee of a bill of exchange endorsed it to the plaintiff and subsequently became insolvent. The plaintiff sued the drawer and drawee of the bill without having presented the bill to the latter either for acceptance or for payment. It was found that the drawer had drawn the bill against goods supplied to the drawee:

Held, (1) that no presentment having been made the drawee was not liable on the bill at all;

(2) that the onus of showing that the drawer could not suffer damage from want of presentment lay on the plaintiff;

(3, that the drawer having supplied goods to the drawee as the value of the bill of exchange it must be presumed that he had suffered damage from want of presentment and that, therefore, he too was not liable on the bill A NANHEY MAL v. CHAIT RAM, 16 A. L. J. 899 364

s. 76 364
 s. 83, applicability of—Hundi, presentation of, for payment—Retention of hundi by drawee for more than twenty-four hours, effect of.

Section 83 of the Negotiable Instruments Act does not apply where a hundi is presented, not for the purpose of acceptance, but for the purpose of payment. O TULSHI RAM v. GUR DAYAL, 5 O. L. J. 445 423

Notice, registered, sent through post—Refusal, proof of.

Where a defendant denies the receipt of notice alleged to have been sent to him through registered post, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to call the post-peon to prove that the registered post-card was tendered to and was refused by the defendant. N RAJA UDAM v. KHANBEG AMIRBEG 904

Orissa Land Law—Khurdah Estate—Sarbarakars—Sarbarakari jagirs, whether heritable and transferable.

Sarbarakars of the Khurdah Estate in Orissa have no heritable or transferable right in the office of sarbarakar or in the jagirs held by them as sarbarakars. They are liable to be dismissed for misconduct, and on such dismissal lose all right to occupy the sarbarakari jagirs. On the termination of a settlement they are bound to enter into a fresh engagement with Government (or with the grantee, when Government has made a grant), otherwise they lose their office.

Orissa Land Law—concl'd.

In 1861 Government granted certain Mouzas in Khurdah revenue-free, but subject to the engagement of the then sarbarakar (defendant's father) with themselves for the settlement period then current. On the completion of a fresh settlement in 1891 the defendant, who had succeeded his father as sarbarakar, was called on by the grantee to execute the usual ekrarnama, but refused to do so. He set up a claim that he was a tenure-holder, and misappropriated the rents which he collected. Plaintiffs thereupon dismissed him and brought a suit to recover the sarbarakari chakran lands in his possession:

Held, that defendant was not a tenure-holder, that his position under the grantee was the same as that of a sarbarakar under Government, that he had been rightly dismissed, and that plaintiffs were entitled to eject him from the sarbarakari jagirs. P C PARAMANANDA DAS v. KRIPASINDHU ROY, 36 M. L. J. 18; 25 M. L. T. 73; 29 C. L. J. 175 391

Oudh Civil Digest, para. 172.

A decree does not become incapable of execution within the meaning of paragraph 172 of the Oudh Civil Digest merely because one attempt to execute it has proved unsuccessful. The Court to which a decree is sent for execution is competent to persevere with the execution until it is made to appear either that satisfaction has been obtained or that execution is no longer possible. O GUR DAYAL v. BEGG SUTHERLAND AND CO., 21 O. C. 261 722

Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), s. 2 901Oudh Estates (Amendment) Act (III of 1910), ss. 2, 21 901

Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876), s. 20—Execution—Sale of ancestral property—Commissioner, sanction of, whether necessary—Section, whether applies to mortgage decrees.

Where the Commissioner's order on an application for permission to sell ancestral land under section 20 of the Oudh Laws Act was, "considering the character of the buildings I think permission might be refused at present. If the judgment-debtor takes no steps to arrange, they might be sold afterwards":

Held, that the order was not intended to dispense with the necessity for any further application for sanction but meant that the refusal was not necessarily permanent and that sanction might be granted in future if the judgment-debtor took no steps to satisfy the decree.

The Commissioner's sanction under section 20 of the Oudh Laws Act is not a mere formality, but an essential preliminary to a legal sale being held, and, therefore, parties to a decree cannot dispense with the necessity for it.

Section 20 of the Oudh Laws Act applies to sales in execution of mortgage decrees. O KANIZ MEHDI BEGUM v. RASUL BEG, 5 O. L. J. 551 39

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 3 (10)—Grove-holder not paying rent, whether tenant—Ejectment—Notice to eject, validity of.

A person to whom land is granted for the purpose of planting a grove without any contract to pay rent is not a tenant within the meaning of the Oudh Rent Act. He is a grove-holder and is entitled to hold possession so long as the land retains the character of a grove. The mere fact that the land is liable to resumption or assessment of rent, if brought under cultivation after the grove ceases to exist, does not make the grove-holder a tenant so as to render him liable to ejectment by notice at will so long as the grove exists. O

DURGA PRASAD v. RAM CHARAN, 5 O. L. J. 689 417

S. 7A, applicability of—Ex-proprietary rights, relinquishment of, validity of—Proprietary rights, failure of consideration in respect of—Compensation, whether can be allowed.

The prohibition contained in section 7A of the Oudh Rent Act applies only to the sale of ex-proprietary rights or the relinquishment thereof for consideration. Where a person sells what he does not own, agreeing at the same time not to claim ex-proprietary rights therein, the vendee can claim compensation for the failure of the vendor to make good his proprietary title. O ADITYA PRASAD v. MUHAMMAD MUBARK ALI SHAH, 21 O. C. 234 257

S. 108, cls. (2), (4)—Mortgage—

Mortgagor allowed to remain in possession of mortgaged property as tenant of mortgagee—Rent, arrears of, suit to recover—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

A zar-i-peshgi lease created the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee between the parties. On the mortgagor's failure to deliver possession of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee the latter filed a suit for possession against the former. The suit ended in a compromise, whereunder it was provided that the mortgagor would remain in possession on behalf of the mortgagee on condition of his paying to the latter a certain amount of annual rent and that in default of such payment of rent the former would be liable to ejectment. On the mortgagor's failure to pay rent the mortgagee brought a suit in the Civil Court against the mortgagor for possession of the mortgaged property and for arrears of rent.

Held, that the compromise in the previous suit created the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties and that, therefore, the present suit was not maintainable in the Civil Court in view of the provisions of section 108, clauses (2) and (4), of the Oudh Rent Act. O RAUNAQ ALI v. GUL MUHAMMAD 477

ss. 120A, 135 276

Pardanashin lady, deed executed by, validity of.

Circumstances under which deeds executed by pardanashin ladies can be avoided disallowed C MARIAM BIBI v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, 18 O. L. J. 306 561

Partition—Question of title, decision of—Procedure—Applicant not in actual possession—Burden of proof.

Where a question of title is raised by the respondent in a partition proceeding, the Revenue Officer should, in accordance with the instructions contained in paragraph 8 of the Financial Commissioner's Standing Order 27, himself proceed to decide the question without referring the objector to a Civil Court.

Partition—conold.

Where an applicant for partition is recorded as a co-sharing owner along with the other parties in the land in dispute, the presumption is that he is a co-sharer in the land of which he seeks partition. He must also be presumed to be in legal or constructive possession of his undivided share through or by means of his co-sharers. This presumption cannot be rebutted nor can such possession be defeated by the mere denial of his title by his co-sharers. To effect this there must be very clear and precise proof that their possession is in fact and really adverse to him so as to amount to his actual ouster from all connection with the land in dispute and to his acceptance of such a position. F C P KIRPA v. NASIB SINGH, 6 P. R. 1918 Rev. 788

Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), s. 3—Patent—Invention, what is—

Combination of old materials in new form, whether can be patented.

Plaintiffs invented a stove for the preparation of banslochan, a medicinal powder. The essential features of the process were the treatment of the raw substance at a red heat with sulphuric acid inside a closed crucible or retort made entirely of earthenware. The advantages involved were:—(a) No iron or other metal being used in the composition of the crucible there was no danger of any deleterious action on the part of the furnace of the acid upon the metal; and (b) the retort or crucible being entirely closed from the time when the acid was added until the process of calcination was complete, there was no necessity of a chimney communicating with the retort for the purpose of carrying off the fumes of the acid. The action of the acid on the crude material under these conditions became more thorough and satisfactory and the possible nuisance from the escaping fumes of the acid was done away with.

Held, that this specification was a good subject-matter for a patent. A LAKHPAT RAI v. SRI KISHAN DAS, 16 A. L. J. 941 450

ss. 5, 17, 43—New and original design,

Test of.

A design in order to be new or original within the meaning of the Act, need not be new or original in the sense of never having been seen before as applied to any article whatever; there might be a novelty in applying an old thing to a new use, provided it is not merely analogous.

Where the design of a metal band called the "Novelty band," intended to attach a watch to the wrist, was similar in shape and configuration to a bracelet previously manufactured for ornamental purposes:

Held, that though the shape of the "Novelty" band by itself could not be said to be new and original, the application of it to a watch to be worn on the wrist was for a purpose so different from and for a use so dissimilar to the purpose and use of the bracelet that the design in question might be said to be original. C GAMMETER v. CONTROLLER OF PATENTS AND DESIGNS, 22 C. W. N. 560; 45 C. 606 437

ss. 17, 43 437

Patents and Designs Act—concl'd.s. 62.

Section 62 of the Patents and Designs Act is limited to applications by the registered proprietor or some person in whom his interest is vested. C GAMMETER v. CONTROLLER OF PATENTS AND DESIGNS, 22 C. W. N. 580; 45 C. 606 437

s. 64—Revision—High Court, power of, to revise Controller's decision under s. 64.

Section 64 of the Act does not apply to the case of cancellation of a design which has already been registered; the words "non-insertion in" or "omission from the register" used in section 64 do not cover a case of registration of a design and subsequent cancellation of it.

The High Court has no power to revise the Controller's decision under section 64 of the Act. C GAMMETER v. CONTROLLER OF PATENTS AND DESIGNS, 22 C. W. N. 580; 45 C. 606 437

s. 77.

Section 77 of the Act does not give the Governor-General in Council power to extend the powers of the Controller beyond those which are given to him by the express provisions of the Act. C GAMMETER v. CONTROLLER OF PATENTS AND DESIGNS, 22 C. W. N. 580; 45 C. 606 437

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 71, 147, 149, 325—Rioting and causing grievous hurt—Separate convictions and sentences, legality of.

In addition to a conviction under section 147 of the Penal Code an accused who has himself caused grievous hurt to the opposite party cannot be separately convicted under section 325 of the Code.

Separate convictions and sentences, therefore, under section 325 read with section 149 of the Penal Code and section 147 of the Code are illegal.

Pat PALTU SINGH v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L. J. 641; 20 Cr. L. J. 37 677

s. 84—Unsoundness of mind, what amounts to—Offence committed under impulse.

Under section 84, Indian Penal Code, a person is exempt from criminal liability only if by reason of unsoundness of mind he is incapable of knowing the nature of the act done by him or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law. It must, in other words, be shown that the cognitive faculties of the accused had been impaired by the unsoundness of his mind. P RAMZAN v. EMPEROR, 30 P. R. 1918 Cr. 1; 20 Cr. L. J. 1 492 ss. 99 (3), 148—Rioting, charge of—Right of private defence of property—Possession of accused.

Cases of rioting in which a plea of right of private defence is raised should be decided strictly on their own facts and previous decisions are only useful in so far as they indicate the general principles which may apply to an approximately similar set of facts.

Where the accused, on learning that their crop was being cut by the complainants, sent information to the Thana and collecting their men went to the field in dispute where they were assaulted by the complainants, with the result that a fight ensued and several persons were injured:

Held, (1) that the accused were justified in collecting their men and arming them sufficiently to prevent the crops being removed from their field in the event of the Police not arriving in time;

Penal Code—concl'd.

(2) that a breach of the public tranquillity having been forced on the accused by the complainant before the arrival of the Police, the right of private defence of person immediately arose in favour of the former and that the complainants were solely responsible for the subsequent fight. Pat SUNDER BUKSH SINGH v. EMPEROR, 19 Cr. L. J. 983; 3 P. L. J. 653; (1918) Pat. 359 163

ss. 99, thirdly, 148, 149, 302

—Rioting—Death caused in riot—Parties engaging deliberately in fight—Right of private defence—Public authorities, protection of, not claimed, effect of

There is no right of private defence where two parties arm themselves for a fight and deliberately engage in one.

A dispute arose over the possession of a plot of land between two parties of villagers. After an altercation each party retired to their own well and armed themselves with spears, hatchets and dangs. One party then advanced to attack the other and the latter came out to meet the attack. In the fight which ensued, one man on each side was killed and others received injuries. The thana was only a mile away and each party had ample time to send word to the Police and claim the protection of the Police Authorities, but neither of them did so:

Held, that the members of each party were guilty of offences under section 302 of the Penal Code, inasmuch as the common object of each party was to cause injury and hurt to those they attacked and they must have known that the use of the formidable weapons they used would in every likelihood result in the causing of death. P SIKANDAR v. EMPEROR, 36 P. R. 1918 Cr. 20 Cr. L. J. 83 883

ss. 107, 108, Expls. (2), (4),

109, 116—Abetment of abetment—'Abetment of offence,' meaning of—Abetment of abetment of offence not committed, whether offence.

Under Explanation 4 to section 109 of the Penal Code, when the abetment of an offence is an offence, the abetment of such abetment is also an offence. The words "when the abetment of an offence is an offence" do not mean when an abetment of an offence is actually committed. They mean when the abetment of an offence is by definition or description an offence under the Code, that is, when an abetment of an offence is punishable under section 109 or section 116 or some other provision of the Code, then the abetment of such abetment is also an offence.

One S, an agent or partner of one B. who was accused in a case on charges framed under sections 443, 473 and 480 of the Penal Code pending in the Court of the 1st Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta, voluntarily and without any coercion or threat approached K., the Bench Clerk of the Magistrate, intending to incite K. to instigate the Magistrate to take a bribe and to acquit B. K. then saw the Chief Presidency Magistrate of the Court with reference to the matter and played the part of a Police spy. When S made over to K. at the latter's place the bribe which was to be handed over by K. to the Magistrate, a Police Inspector, who was concealed behind a curtain, seized the money. S.

Penal Code—contd.

was then tried on charges framed under sections 161 and 109 of the Penal Code and convicted:

Held, that S, when he handed over the money to K, committed a distinct incitement of K to instigate the Magistrate to take a bribe and so was rightly convicted under section 109, even though no bribe had ever been offered to the Magistrate.

It makes no difference in the guilt of the abettor if the agent falls in with the plans of the abettor, knowing his criminal purpose, to cause its detection. C SRILAL CHAMARIA v. EMPEROR, 28 C. L. J. 370; 22 C. W. N. 1015; 20 Cr. L. J. 49

_____ s. 116	817
_____ s. 147	817
_____ s. 148	677
_____ s. 149	163, 883
_____ s. 182	677, 883
_____ s. 211	890
_____ s. 211	342

_____ ss. 224, 323, 353—Escape from lawful custody—Warrant, defective, effect of—Arrest, legality of—Hurt caused to constable in rescuing person from custody—Offence.

One L. was arrested by a constable under a warrant, which was not signed by the Magistrate issuing it and which was made over to the Thana Officer on an order purporting to have been made by the District Superintendent of Police but not signed by anybody. L. was rescued by the other accused, who caused unnecessary hurt to the constable in effecting the rescue.

Held, (1) that the warrant was defective and that the constable having purported throughout to act under the warrant, the arrest of L. was illegal and that the latter was not, therefore, guilty of any offence in effecting his escape; _____ s. 225B—Resistance to lawful arrest—Offence, ingredients of—Overt act, proof of.

(2) that the persons who effected L's rescue were guilty of an offence under section 323 of the Penal Code. PAT MOUSI LAL v. EMPEROR, (1913) PAT. 285; 50 P. L. W. 246; 19 Cr. L. J. 1000

In order to constitute an offence under section 225B of the Penal Code, something more is required than an evasion of arrest or a mere assertion by the person sought to be arrested that he would not like to be arrested or that a fight would be the result of such arrest; there must be an overt act of resistance or obstruction. There must be positive evidence to show that the officer armed with a warrant of arrest produced the warrant and that the person sought to be arrested resisted such arrest. P DEWA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 33 P. R. 1915 Cr. 20 Cr. L. J. 64

_____ s. 302	832
_____ s. 302	833

_____ s. 302—Murder—Death caused by lathis—Blows inflicted by several accused—Offence.

Where several persons attack another with lathis and cause his death, they are all guilty of the offence of murder. A DULLI v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 418; 20 Cr. L. J. 22

_____ s. 323	502
_____ s. 325	340
_____ s. 325	677
_____ s. 353	340

_____ s. 353—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 160—Police constable acting without written order, whether acting in discharge of duty—Assault—Offence.

Penal Code—contd.

The accused, on being asked by a Police constable to accompany him to the Sub-Inspector without a written order from the latter under section 160 of the Criminal Procedure Code, assaulted the constable:

Held, that the constable was not acting as a public servant engaged in the discharge of his duty, and that, therefore, the accused was not guilty of an offence under section 353 of the Penal Code. N TUKARAM v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 48 _____ ss. 363, 365, 366—Kidnapping girl over 16 years of age—Offence—First information report, delay in making, effect of.

Accused were charged under section 363, Indian Penal Code, with having kidnapped a minor girl from the guardianship of her parents. It appeared that although according to the prosecution the accused were seen taking the girl away at about midnight and the girl's father at once proceeded to the thana where he reached before sunrise, no report was recorded till 12 noon. It appeared further that the girl was over 16 at the time when she disappeared:

Held, (1) that as the girl was not a minor under 16 years of age the accused were not guilty of an offence under section 363, Indian Penal Code;

(2) that the extraordinary delay in making the first information report was very suspicious and the fact that the girl was over 16 strengthened the belief that she went off of her own accord and that consequently the accused could not be convicted under section 365 or 366, Indian Penal Code. P MIRZA v. EMPEROR, 19 Cr. L. J. 1011

_____ ss. 365, 366

_____ s. 379—Theft—Crops grown by trespasser—Trespasser ejected by owner—Crops cut and taken away by landlord of trespasser—Offence.

Complainant obtained a decree of ejectment against a trespasser and got into actual possession of the land. The trespasser had grown paddy on the land and when the crop was ready, the accused, acting on behalf of the trespasser, cut and removed the paddy:

Held, that after the complainant had obtained actual possession of the land, the trespasser or his representatives had no right to enter upon the land and to remove the paddy, and that, therefore, the accused were guilty of theft. C ABINASH CHANDRA SARKAR v. ATUL KRISHNA BOSE, 23 C. L. J. 120; 20 Cr. L. J. 38

_____ ss. 408, 409, 477A

_____ s. 415—Cheating—Offence, ingredients of—Harm, not necessary consequence of act—Offence, whether committed.

In order to constitute the offence defined in the second part of section 415 of the Penal Code:

(1) there must be deception practised upon a person;

(2) by that deception the person must be induced to do or omit to do something which he would not have done or omitted to do, had he not been so deceived;

(3) such act or omission must cause, or be likely to cause, to the person deceived damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property.

To constitute the offence of cheating under section 415, Indian Penal Code, the damage or harm caused Penal Code—concl'd.

or likely to be caused to the person deceived in mind, body, reputation or property must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom.

The accused presented certain recruits before a Recruiting Officer, who rejected them. Subsequently the accused offered the same recruits to one M., on condition that the latter would pay Rs. 50 for each recruit. It was arranged, however, that the money would only be paid if the recruits were accepted by the Recruiting Officer. Before the Recruiting Officer it was discovered that the recruits had already been rejected:

Held, that there being only a possibility that M. might suffer annoyance owing to the discovery that the recruits had already been rejected and to the fact that his explanation might not be believed at once by the Recruiting Officer, the accused were not guilty of cheating under section 415 of the Penal Code. P EMPEROR v. MUHAMMAD SHAH, 34 P. R. 1918 Cr.; 20 Cr. L. J. 77 877

S. 477A 992
S. 494—Bigamy—Christian wife's conversion to Islam, whether dissolves marriage—Law applicable—Subsequent marriage, whether bigamous.

A Christian marriage is not dissolved by the apostasy of one of the parties.

Where, therefore, the accused, a Christian wife, renounced Christianity and embraced Islam and then married a Muhammadan:

Held, that according to the Christian marriage law, which was the law applicable to the case, the first marriage was not dissolved and, therefore, the subsequent marriage was bigamous. P EMPEROR v. RURI, 20 Cr. L. J. 3; 5 P. R. 1919 Cr. 493

Plaint inartistically drawn up, effect of.

The mere fact that a plaint has been inartistically drawn up does not alter the nature of the suit. C SAILAJA NATH ROY CHAUDHURY v. CHANDI CHARAN LAHA, 28 C. L. J. 301 552

Pleader, appointment of—Vakalatnama, defect in, effect of 14

Pleadings—Declaration of title, suit for—Title by adverse possession not expressly set up—Decree for title by adverse possession, validity of.

The plaintiffs brought a suit for establishment of their Lakheraj title to a tank. They did not expressly set up in the plaint a title by adverse possession, but the plea of title by adverse possession was included in the statement of facts on which the plaintiffs based their claim for title and the issue of the plaintiffs' title by adverse possession was fought out on its merits in the first Court. The case set up by the defendants was not that the plaintiffs had been in permissive possession, but that they had never been in possession:

Held, that on the finding that the plaintiffs had been in possession for generations and that the defendants had never been in possession, the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree declaring their title by adverse possession. C SATYENDRA NARAYAN BAGCHI v. SASHI BHUSAN CHOWDHURY 448

Power-of-attorney, construction of—Act done under power-of-attorney, challenged as being in excess of authority—Authority, proof of—Power to borrow, whether implies power to mortgage.

Power-of-attorney—concl'd.

Where an act purporting to be done under a power-of-attorney is challenged as being in excess of the authority conferred by the power, it is necessary to show that on a fair construction of the whole instrument, the authority in question is to be found within the four corners of the instrument either in express terms or by necessary implication.

A power to borrow money does not necessarily imply a power to mortgage property.

Where a power-of-attorney authorised the agent to borrow money, to execute a bond, sign the name and present the same for registration on behalf of his principal and also added a general clause that the donor of the power will be bound by any acts done by the donee, and the agent in pursuance of that power mortgaged his principal's property:

Held, that the mortgage, though binding upon the principal as a loan, was not binding as a mortgage. N NARAYAN DAS v. CHANDRAHHAN 959

Practice of Patna High Court—Calcutta High Court, uniform course of decisions of, whether to be followed.

Where there is a long course of decisions by the High Court of Calcutta upon a particular point, the Patna High Court will not depart from that settled course. PATU SINGH v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L. J. 641; 20 Cr. L. J. 37 677

Pre-emption—Custom, proof of—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, value of.

When considering the existence or non-existence of a custom of pre-emption the language of the entry in the wajib-ul-arz which is relied upon as a proof of the custom should be taken into consideration.

Where a wajib-ul-arz provided that when a stranger had obtained property under a sale or a mortgage, the co-sharers, in a certain order, were entitled to take the property in the case of a sale at sixteen years' purchase and in the case of a mortgage at eight:

Held, that the entry was wholly insufficient to prove a custom of pre-emption. A SURAJBALI SINGH v. MOHAMMAD NASIR, 16 A. L. J. 879 220 suit—Appeal by vendee—Pre-emptor, failure of, to pay extra sum directed by Appellate Court, effect of.

In an appeal by the vendee in a pre-emption suit the pre-emptor was directed by the Appellate Court to pay into Court an extra sum within the time fixed by the original Court. The pre-emptor had twelve days after the date of this order within which the amount could be paid into Court, but he failed to make the payment:

Held, that the consequence of the pre-emptor's default was that the decree became final and that his suit must be dismissed. PTURA BAZ v. HAMD AND CO., 92 P. L. R. 1918 470 suit for—Plaintiff suing for himself and others—Suit, whether liable to be dismissed.

The mere fact that a pre-emptor is suing not only for his own benefit but also for the benefit of persons who are not entitled to pre-empt the property, does not disentitle him from exercising his right of pre-emption.

Pre-emption—conold.

Poor and rich alike are equally entitled to the privileges of pre-emption and to hold that a poor man cannot seek the financial assistance of others in prosecuting his suit would be, in many cases, to disqualify him from the exercise of his rights.

P NEKI v. CHAJJU RAM, 111 P. W. R. 1918 137 suit—Price entered in sale-deed, fictitious plea as to—Prima facie case made out by pre-emptor—Burden of proof.

Where a pre-emptor pleads that the price entered in the sale-deed is fictitious and is able to put forward a prima facie case to that effect, the burden of proving that that price represents the real price of the property is thrown on the vendee.

O NAKCHHED v. ANGAD 513

suit—Set-off, right to—Joinder of claims—Money left with vendee out of sale consideration to pay off incumbrances—Vendee, failure of, to discharge incumbrances, effect of.

A pre-emptor, who is also a prior mortgagee of the property sold, cannot in his suit for pre-emption claim in reduction of the purchase-money such interest to which he may have become entitled by reason of the failure of the vendee to pay to him and to the other creditors of the vendor moneys which had been left with him out of the sale consideration for discharging incumbrances on the property sold. O CHHATARPAL v. HARDEO BAKHSH SINGH, 21 O. C. 269 744

Principal and Agent—Pedigree filed by agent in suit to which principal was party—Pre-emption 308

Power-of-attorney to collect debt—Right of agent to sell debt 756

Principal and Surety—Suit against surety, whether maintainable without principal being sued 424

Procedure—Burden of proof, party failing to discharge, through bad advice of Counsel—Re-hearing, whether can be allowed.

The mere fact that a party to a case did not adduce evidence owing to the bad advice of his Pleader, which resulted in a decision against him is no ground for allowing him a re-hearing of the case.

O PRAG DATT v. KANHAIYA LAL, 5 O. L. J. 695 918

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 2, 13—Joint family property, undivided share in, whether "property"—Receiver, appointment of.

A Receiver cannot be appointed under section 13 of the Provincial Insolvency Act in respect of an insolvent's undivided share in the property of the joint family of which he is a member. Such undivided share is not "property" as defined in section 2 of the Act. O ANANT SINGH v. KALKA SINGH, 5 O. L. J. 685 526 ss. 3, proviso, 43 (2), 46—Subordinate Judge declining to take action under s. 43—Appeal, whether lies—"Court" in s. 43, meaning of.

Per Teunon, J.—Against the order of a Subordinate Judge invested with insolvency jurisdiction in certain classes of cases under the proviso to section 3 of the Provincial Insolvency Act declining to take action against an insolvent under section 43 (2) of the Act, no appeal lies to the District Court.

Per Newbould, J.—The word "Court" in section 3 of Provincial Insolvency Act—contd.

the Provincial Insolvency Act does not mean the Court of original jurisdiction only. C DIGENDRA CHANDRA BASAK v. RAMANI MOHAN GOSWAMI, 22 C. W. N. 958 333

s. 13 526
s. 16—Attachment of insolvent's property after adjudication, legality of—Vesting order, absence of, effect of—Action for money had and received, scope and extent of—Assignment by creditor of debt due to him and his co-creditors—Collection of whole debt by assignee—Mistake—Suit against assignee by real owner, maintainability of—Principal and agent—Power-of-attorney to collect debt—Right of agent to sell debt.

Defendants Nos. 2 to 4 and one R. were partners. R. was adjudicated an insolvent. The outstandings due to the partnership were sold in public auction by the Official Receiver, instead of R's share alone, which was a fourth, and were purchased by the 1st defendant. The 1st defendant, believing bona fide that he had purchased the whole debt due to the partnership, collected the debt. Plaintiff, who held a decree against defendants Nos. 2 to 4, attached the latter's shares in the debt. Before the attachment defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were adjudicated insolvents. The plaintiff, who was appointed Receiver in the suit in which the shares of defendants Nos. 2 to 4 were attached, brought the present suit for recovery of $\frac{3}{4}$ ths of the amount recovered by the 1st defendant from the partnership debtor as money had and received by the 1st defendant for the use of defendants Nos. 2 to 4:

Held, (1) that there being no privity between the plaintiff and the 1st defendant or between defendants Nos. 2 to 4 and the 1st defendant, the action was unsustainable;

(2) that the attachment effected by the plaintiff was void and of no effect as the shares of defendants Nos. 2 to 4 had, by their adjudication, become vested in the Official Receiver.

Per Oldfield, J.—Whether there is or is not a distinct order vesting an insolvent's properties in the Official Receiver, they become divisible among the creditors from the date of the adjudication in insolvency, which relates back to the petition.

An agent authorized by a power-of-attorney only to collect debts has no authority to realise their value or any part of it by selling them.

It may be permissible in India, as in England, to sue only the solvent members of a firm, when a decree is sought against the firm. M RAMASAMI NAIDU v. MUTHUSAMIA PILLAI, 35 M. L. J. 581; 41 M. 923; (1918) M. W. N. 795 756 ss. 16 (2), 28—"Debt provable under this Act," meaning of—Obligation incurred after adjudication, suit in respect of, maintainability of.

An obligation incurred by an insolvent after the date of his adjudication is not a debt provable in the insolvency proceedings within the meaning of section 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, so that a suit in respect of such obligation is not governed by section 16 (2) of the Act. N GANGA PRASAD v. FIDA ALI CHANDABHAI 913

ss. 22, 26 (2), 46 (4)—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), ss. 4, 0, applicability of—Appeal to High Court—Limitation—Computation of time, method of—Exclusion of date of order and of last day if dies non—S. 21 of Provincial Insolvency Act, applicability of, to applications under s. 22 (2).

Provincial Insolvency Act—concl'd.

In computing the period limited for appeals under the Provincial Insolvency Act, the principles of sections 9 and 10 of the General Clauses Act should be applied, i. e., the date on which the act appealed against is done and the last day, if dies non, should be excluded.

Applications under section 26 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act are not governed by the rule of limitation contained in section 22 of the Act. M CHAVADI RAMASAMI PILLAI v. VENKATESWARA AIYAR, 35 M. L. J. 531; 42 M. 13

— s. 26 (2) 952
 — s. 28 913
 — s. 42—Insolvency—Annulment of adjudication, effect of—Receiver, suit instituted by, whether maintainable after adjudication.

A suit instituted by the Receiver of the estate of an insolvent against a debtor of the insolvent during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings is not rendered unmaintainable on the annulment of the adjudication. A MANNU LAL v. NELIN KUMAR MUKERJI, 16 A. L. J. 938

— s. 43 (2) 333
 — s. 46 203, 333
 — s. 46 (4) 952
 — s. 47 203

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 23—Return of plaint in suit involving question of title—Court, power of.

Under section 23 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act a Small Cause Court has power to return a plaint, to be presented in the Court having jurisdiction to determine the question of title raised in the suit, even though the question is alleged to be res judicata by reason of a previous suit between the plaintiff and the lessor of the defendant. C KHETTRA MOHAN SINGH v. SHIB DAS CHANDER 612

— s. 25—Revision—Different view of evidence, whether ground for interference.

The fact that the Revisional Court might take a different view of the evidence from that taken by the Court of Small Causes is not a justifiable ground for interference in revision under section 25 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act. N LOBHAGI v. NARAYAN 907

Sch. II, Art. 31—Suit for money with prayer for looking into accounts, whether suit for accounts—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court

A suit to recover money which is cognizable by a Small Cause Court, does not become a suit for an account under Article 31 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act merely because accounts have to be looked into in order to ascertain the correctness or otherwise of the amount claimed by the plaintiff. M UKKANDAN NAYAR v. SANKARA VARMA RAJA, (1918) M. W. N. 717; 24 M. L. T. 453

Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887), ss. 48, 158 (1)—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Jagirdar, suit by, for declaration that he is entitled to receive land revenue in kind, maintainability of.

The plaintiff, a jagirdar or assignee of the land revenue of a village, sued the proprietors and tenants of the village for a declaration that he was entitled to recover one-fourth share of every kind of produce of the lands in the village and Rs. 2 per annum per well as malikana from the tenants and that the proprietors were only entitled to a one-fifth share out of it and had no right to interfere with the realisation by the plaintiff of the said share of the produce:

Punjab Land Revenue Act—concl'd.

Held, that the suit as laid involved the question whether in the village in dispute land revenue should be paid to the jagirdar in cash or in kind, and that, therefore, it was not cognisable by a Civil Court, the matter being one which under section 48 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act only the Local Government could decide. P JIWAN DAS v. PIRAN DITTA, 110 P. R. 1918

— s. 117 788
 — s. 117—Partition of shamilat—Decision of Revenue Officer, whether res judicata—Procedure.

The question whether the shamilat of a village should be partitioned in accordance with ancestral shares or hasab rasad khewat is a question of title, within the meaning of section 117 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act and is triable by a Civil Court.

Where a Revenue Officer without observing the formalities of a trial by a Civil Court decided that the shamilat of a village should be partitioned in accordance with ancestral shares:

Held, that the proceedings of the Revenue Officer not being taken under section 117 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, his decision could not operate as res judicata in a subsequent civil suit. P FAIZ BAKSH v. NIAMAT KHAN, 105 P. R. 1918

— s. 158 (1) 365
Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), s. 15 (c)—Patti, whether sub-division of village —Question of fact.

The question whether the pattis of a village are real sub-divisions of the village within the meaning of section 15 (c), secondly, of the Punjab Pre-emption Act is a question of fact. For the decision of that question the Court should have regard only to the fact whether the pattis are actual sub-divisions of the village, and not for what reason the sub-divisions were made. P WARYAM SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH, 109 P. R. 1918

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), ss. 14, 50, 77 (3) (g)—Landlord and tenant—Tenant, wrongful dispossession of—Suit for possession and compensation—Limitation—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

A tenant who has been wrongfully dispossessed of his tenancy by his landlord, can institute a suit for recovery of possession or for compensation or for both only in a Revenue Court under section 77 (3) (g) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, and the period of limitation within which such a suit can be brought is, as laid down in section 50 of the Act, one year from the date of his dispossession. If he allows that period to expire without bringing a suit in the Revenue Court, he loses his remedy altogether and is debarred from bringing a suit for recovery of possession or for compensation or for both in a Civil Court. P AKBAR HUSSAIN v. KARN DAD, 90 P. R. 1918

— s. 50 8
 — s. 77 (3) (d)—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Occupancy tenant, death of—Reversioner of deceased, claiming to succeed to oc.

Punjab Tenancy Act—conold.

cupancy—Suit by landlord to eject reversioner, nature of.

Where on the death of an occupancy tenant an alleged reversioner of his claims to succeed to his rights on the ground that the common ancestor of himself and the deceased tenant had occupied the land, his claim does not fall within clause (d) of sub-section (3) of section 77 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, and is, therefore, not one which can under the said sub-section be heard and determined only by a Revenue Court.

A suit by the landlord to eject the reversioner on the ground that he is not entitled to succeed to the land as occupancy tenant thereof, is cognisable by a Civil Court and not by a Revenue Court. P GHULAM v. JOWALA SINGH, 103 P. R. 1918; 179 P. W. R. 1918 363

s. 77 (3) (g)

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 76—
Suit against Railway Company for compensation for loss of goods—Burden of proof.

Under section 76 of the Railways Act a plaintiff suing a Railway Company for compensation for loss of goods has ordinarily only to prove the loss. Thereupon it is for the Railway Company to show that the loss occurred under circumstances which exempt a bailee from responsibility for the loss, or it may rely upon a special contract exempting it from liability.

Where, however, a risk-note exempts the Railway Company from all liability except in certain specified circumstances, the plaintiff can only succeed if he establishes that his case comes within those exceptions. N AGENT, G. I. P. RAILWAY v. KARAYA LAL, 14 N. L. R. 122 294

s. 80—Suit against Railway Company for compensation for loss of goods—Burden of proof—Goods carried over two Railways—Decree against both, legality of.

Under section 80 of the Railways Act a decree can be passed against a Railway Company to whom the goods were not entrusted for carriage, only if it is proved that the loss occurred while the goods were in the custody of that Company. In no case can a decree be passed against both the Companies under that section. N AGENT, G. I. P. RAILWAY v. KARAYA LAL, 14 N. L. R. 122 294

s. 122, scope of—Entry, original, lawful—Breaking open lock of waggon without permission, whether renders entry unlawful.

Accused, a dulal, entered the Railway goods shed line to take delivery of a consignment on behalf of the consignee and without the permission of the goods clerk broke the seal of a waggon. It was found that dulals were allowed to enter the goods shed without express permission from a Railway servant:

Held, (1) that the accused could not be convicted under section 122 (1) of the Railways Act as the original entry being lawful, the subsequent unlawful act did not relate back and render the entry unlawful;

(2) that as the accused never refused to leave the Railway on being requested to do so, he could not be committed under sub-section (2) of section 122.

Sub-section 1) of section 122 of the Railways Act makes an unlawful entry punishable and sub-section Railways Act—conold.

(2) provides for cases where the original entry was lawful as well as unlawful N BASHIR AHMED v. EMPEROR, 20 Cr. L. J. 96; 15 N. L. R. 34 896

Recitals in deed, evidentiary value of.

The recitals in a deed of sale as to the object of the sale or the intended appropriation of the consideration therefor are evidence, especially where the document is an old one, of the representation made to the purchaser. M AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. AMMALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAM-AYYA 859

Record-of-Rights, entry in, value of 473
Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s.

17—Compromise deed settling family dispute, whether requires registration.

The question whether or not a document in the nature of a compromise requires registration depends upon whether or not it purports to create a fresh title in favour of any of the parties to it. Where there is in reality no creation of a fresh title but merely an acknowledgment from each of the parties of a title pre-existing in the others, the compromise does not require to be registered. O HARPAL SINGH v. SUKHRANI, 21 O. C. 220 119

ss. 17, 50—Vendee claiming under unregistered deed, position of—Vendee under subsequent registered deed, whether can eject prior vendee.

The possession of a vendee who claims title under a sale-deed which for want of registration is inadmissible in evidence, is that of a trespasser, and until such possession matures into ownership by prescription, such vendee is liable to be ejected from the property by a subsequent vendee under a registered deed of sale. P UTTAM CHAND v. JANJIRAM, 111 P. R. 1918 390

s. 28—Mortgage-deed—Property not belonging to mortgagor included in deed—Registration in district in which such property situate, validity of.

Where property which is admitted to be in existence but which does not belong to the mortgagor is included in a mortgage-deed, the fact that the document is registered in the district in which that property is situate and that that property is the only property hypothecated within the registration district, is not sufficient, in the absence of any collusion between the parties or of knowledge on the part of the mortgagee, to invalidate the registration of the deed. A PAHLADI LAL v. LARAITI, 16 A. L. J. 871 200

s. 49—Lease unregistered, admissibility of, to prove covenant to compensate for improvements—Collateral fact, what is.

An unregistered instrument is admissible in evidence to prove a collateral fact, but to be collateral, the fact must be independent of or separable from the purpose to effect which the law requires registration.

Plaintiff sued defendant for compensation for improvements effected by him while he was a lessee of a village under the defendant, and in support of his claim relied on an unregistered deed of lease which contained an implied condition to compensate him for improvements:

Held, that the deed of lease was inadmissible in evidence under section 49 of the Registration Act, inasmuch as the plaintiff was seeking to prove the terms of the lease for the purpose of enforcing those terms, and not merely for a collateral purpose.

Registration Act—conold.

N KALICHARAN v. LAL INDAR SHAH, 15 N. L. R. 31 923

 — s. 50 390
Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), s. 14 514

Restitution of conjugal rights, suit for—Disagreement between families of husband and wife, whether ground for refusing relief—Discretion of Court.

A mere disagreement between the families of the husband and the wife is not by itself a sufficient cause for refusing relief to the husband in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights.

In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights it was found that the marriage had not been consummated, that there was bad feeling between the families of the husband and of the wife and that the wife refused to go to her husband at the dictation of her parents:

Held, that under these circumstances relief could not be refused to the plaintiff. P BAJID v SATTO, 182 P. W. R. 1918 231

Revenue papers, entry in, weight of 153
Riwaj-i-am and wajib-ul-arz, entries in, value of.

At the time when riwaj-i-ams and wajib-ul-arzes were first prepared, acquisition of property by purchase or otherwise being of rare occurrence, no inquiry took place regarding succession to such property. Therefore, in the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, an entry in a riwaj-i-am or a wajib-ul-arz must be taken to refer merely to ancestral property. P BUDDHI PARKASH v. CHANDER BHAN, 123 P. R. 1918 813

Sale by private contract of property belonging to company in liquidation—Interests of creditors and contributories prejudiced—Sale, whether liable to be set aside.

In an appeal against an order sanctioning the sale of the Diamond Jubilee Flour Mills, Delhi, it appeared that the Mills were leased to the vendees for a period of 3 years commencing from 1st January 1917, one of the conditions of the transaction being that the lease could be determined by either party after giving six months' notice to the other, provided that the Liquidator before resuming possession on the expiry of the period of notice should pay Rs. 5,000 to the lessees. In June 1917, the Liquidator served a notice upon the lessees requiring them to quit the premises on 31st December 1917. On the 8th October 1917 the Additional Judge, Delhi, asked the Liquidator to withdraw the notice and even granted the request of the lessees that in lieu of their agreeing to the withdrawal of the notice the Liquidator should be debarred from determining the lease in any case during its continuance for the remaining period. The District Judge rejected a higher offer than that of the vendees on the ground that they were already in possession and that possession could not be given to anybody else till the expiry of six months:

Held, (1) that the order allowing the lessors to remain in possession was wholly without justification, especially when there was no affidavit from the Liquidator that the alleged compromise was beneficial to the persons interested in the winding up;

Sale—conold.

(2) that the price being wholly inadequate, the sale by private contract to the vendees was detrimental to the interests of the creditors and contributories of the company and ought to be set aside. P KUNDAN LAL v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, DIAMOND JUBILEE FLOUR MILLS CO., LTD. 919

Shamilat—Proprietor building over part of shamilat—Suit by another proprietor for removal of building, maintainability of—Special damage, proof of.

Where one of the proprietors of a village sates another proprietor for the removal of buildings erected by the latter on a part of the village shamilat, whether within the abadi or not, and it is found that the defendant has not taken more than the share which would fall to him on partition and that no special damage has been caused to the plaintiff, the suit is liable to be dismissed. P LEKHU v. HANWANTA, 114 P. R. 1918; 176 P. W. R. 1918 418

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 9

—Decree for possession of land and crops—Crops cut and removed by defendant—Damages, suit for, maintainability of.

Plaintiff obtained a decree under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act for the possession of a piece of land and the crops growing thereon, but before the decree could be executed the defendant cut and removed the crops. Thereupon the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the value of the crops:

Held, that the defendant could not by cutting and removing the crops annul the effect of the possessory decree, and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to the value of the crops, although the question of title had not been decided in the previous suit. A MUNNA SINGH v. AUSAN SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 924 422

— s. 9—Possession, suit for—Constructive possession, whether sufficient.

In suits under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act the ordinary rule of possession going with title should be followed in deciding whether a person has been dispossessed within six months of the date of the suit. In order to bring this section into operation it is not necessary that the possession which is lost should be the actual physical occupation of the property. Constructive possession which goes with title would suffice for the purposes of the section. N GHULAM v. SHEODIN RAM 415

— s. 9—Possessory suit, whether can be dismissed on ground of want of title.

In a suit under the provisions of section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, the plaintiff on proving his possession and dispossession as mentioned in the section is entitled to be restored to possession.

Where in a suit under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, the Court after finding that the plaintiff was in possession dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff's possession was without title:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to be restored to possession. C HARIMCHON ROY v. KHALIL BEPARY 433

— s. 39 370

— s. 42, applicability of 359

— s. 42, scope of—Declaration of past right, suit for, maintainability of.

Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act provides for the declaration of a present legal character or a Specific Relief Act—contd.

present legal right. It has no application to a case where the plaintiff seeks a declaration as to a right which has ceased to exist. PAT RAM SUNDER SAHU v. RAM NARAIN SAHU 936

S. 42, proviso—Plaintiff in possession of half house—Declaration, suit for, in respect of whole, maintainability of—Consequential relief—Amendment of plaint, whether can be allowed.

Plaintiff, who was in possession of half of a house, sued the defendant, who was in possession of the other half, for a declaration of title in respect of the whole of the house:

Held, (1) that the suit was bad under the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, inasmuch as the plaintiff could have sued to eject the defendant from the portion of the house of which he was in possession;

(2) that the plaintiff could not be allowed in appeal to amend the plaint so as to convert the suit into one for ejectment. P SHIV RAM DAS v. BRAG DEVI, 118 P. R. 1918 838

S. 45

S. 45—High Court, powers of, exercise of—Delay in presenting petition, effect of—Public officer refusing to entertain petition—High Court, order of, form of.

Section 45 of the Specific Relief Act gives certain powers to the High Court, which the High Court can exercise subject to the conditions which are specified in the provisos to the section.

The conditions contained in provisos (a) to (c) of the section are cumulative.

In exercising the powers conferred upon it under section 45 of the Specific Relief Act, the High Court should, in all cases, regard its exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction as discretionary, and subject to considerations of the importance of the particular case or of the principle involved in it, or of delay on the part of an applicant, and of his merits with respect to the case in which the interference of the Court is sought. Should other special causes appear for or against the Court's intervention, due weight ought to be given to them, regard being always had to the principles already enunciated.

The respondent, who was a candidate for election as a Municipal Commissioner of the Corporation of Calcutta, applied to the Chairman of the Corporation to reject the nomination paper of the appellant, a rival candidate, on the ground that the nomination paper did not contain any description of the appellant and that he had been seconded by one who was not a voter. The application was made two weeks after the appellant had sent in his nomination paper and two days before the day fixed for the election. The Chairman declined to entertain the application, on the ground that it was made too late. On the following day, i.e., on the day previous to the election the respondent applied to the High Court under section 45 of the Specific Relief Act, and obtained an order that the name of the applicant be expunged from the list of nominated candidates. On the next day, i.e., on the day for the election, the election took place, and the name of the appellant having been expunged from the list, the respondent as the only candidate was deemed elected. The appellant appealed against the order directing the expunging of his name from the list of candidates and the appeal came on for hearing on the day after the election:

Specific Relief Act—concl'd.

Held, (1) that having regard to the facts of the case and especially to the delay in presenting the petition by the respondent and the fact that no one could possibly be misled by the description in the nomination paper, it was a matter of considerable doubt whether the case was one in which the High Court should have interfered;

(2) that the order of the Court should have been limited to a direction to the Chairman to entertain the application which he had wrongly refused to entertain on the ground that it was too late;

(3) that the appeal must fail, inasmuch as the election had taken place, and a decision in favour of the appellant would be infructuous. C MANI LAL NAHAR v. MOYDAD RAHAMAN, 22 C. W. N. 951 736

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 3 (c)—Instrument executed outside British India not relating to any property situate in British India, whether chargeable with stamp duty.

An instrument executed outside British India and not relating to any property situate or to any matter or thing done or to be done in British India is not chargeable with stamp duty under the Stamp Act. L. B. MAWCHI MINES, In re, 11 BUR. L. T. 126 187

Succession—Possession, suit for, by reversioners—Burden of proof.

In a suit by the reversioners of a deceased proprietor for possession of the property left by the deceased, the onus lies on the plaintiffs not only to prove that they are the reversioners entitled to succeed but that they are the only nearest reversioners; at any rate they must satisfy the Court that to the best of their knowledge there are no nearer heirs. N HAZARILAL v. HAR GOVIND 375

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), ss. 4 (1), 16, 18—Assignee of certificate holder, suit by, maintainability of—Assignment before grant of certificate, effect of.

An assignee of a person to whom a succession certificate has been granted is entitled to sue for a debt due to the assignor and to obtain a decree thereon without obtaining a certificate in his own name.

The certificate, until revoked, affords protection to the assignee, though it was obtained by the assignor after the assignment. M ARUNACHALA CHETTIAR v. MUTRU, 35 M. L. J. 666 735

ss. 16, 18

Trading with enemy—Royal Proclamation of August 5, 1914—Contract to buy German goods—Goods shipped from Germany before War—Price of goods demanded after outbreak of War and prohibition of trade with enemy—Buyer, whether bound to pay.

Sometime before the outbreak of War A entered into a contract with B at Rangoon. Under the contract A was (i) to buy certain goods in Germany, (ii) to obtain a contract of affreightment to Rangoon, (iii) to take out a policy of insurance, and (iv) to ship the goods in July 1914. B on his part agreed to buy those goods from A for a price which was fixed c. i. f. Rangoon. A performed his part of the contract and on the 12th August 1914 caused to be presented to B. for acceptance a bill of exchange covering the price, etc., of the goods and payable ninety days after sight. Along with the bill of exchange were tendered the bill of lading, invoice and insurance note. B. refused to accept the bill of exchange as well as the documents of title, inasmuch as the War having broken out on the 4th of August, the ship containing the goods was seized by the Belgian Government and trade with Germany was prohibited by the Royal Proclamation, dated the 5th August 1914:

Trading with enemy—concl'd.

Held, (1) that the Royal Proclamation rendered the contract abortive and illegal and so void;

(2) that the effect of the outbreak of the War was that the contract of affreightment was dissolved;

(3) that A was bound to tender and B was entitled to get valid and effective documents by which B could recover what might be lawfully recovered under such documents, but as A did not and could not tender such documents in respect of the contract of affreightment, B was entitled to refuse to pay against them. L B BUCHANAN v. MALL, 11 BUB L. T. 84 310

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6 (a) 396

s. 41—Transfer by ostensible owner—Transferee, position of—Enquiry, reasonable, effect of.

Defendant purchased a mahal from the farzidar of the plaintiff after making reasonable enquiries which satisfied him that the farzidar was the real owner of the mahal:

Held, that the defendant being a bona fide purchaser for value from the ostensible owner, the plaintiff was debarred by section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act from setting up his title to the mahal. PAT RAM SUNDER SAHU v. RAM NARAIN SAHU 936

s. 43, applicability of—Erroneous representation—Knowledge, of transferee, effect of.

Before section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act can be brought into operation, there must in fact have been an inducement by erroneous representation. The section does not apply where the transferee has knowledge that the representation made by the transferor is not true. PAT CHAKRAPANI NANDI v. GAYAMONI DASI, (1918) PAT. 278; 5 P. L. W. 219 228

s. 51:

Section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to tenants. N BANMALI v. Nihal Singh 354

s. 51—Purchase in good faith from limited owner—Improvement effected by purchaser—Purchaser, position of.

The principle of section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act applies to a purchase from a Hindu widow, where the purchaser believing in good faith that he has acquired an absolute title to the property, effects improvements on it, but it is afterwards held that there was no necessity for the sale.

In such a case the person seeking to set aside the sale is entitled to the market value of the property at the time of suit, excluding the value of the improvements effected by the purchaser. M

AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY v. ANNALANADHUNI PATTABHIRAMAYYA 859

s. 52

Transfer of Property Act—concl'd.

s. 52—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of 188

s. 53—Sale—Preference shown to some creditors—Transaction, whether voidable.

Preference shown to some creditors is not a ground for holding that a transaction comes within the scope of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. N RAMSA HARANSA v. RATANSA 783

s. 55—Vendor and purchaser—Vendor, whether entitled to claim interest on unpaid purchase money.

Under section 55 of the Transfer of Property Act a vendor has a right to claim interest on the unpaid purchase-money, unless he has by his own conduct disentitled himself to it. O ADITYA PRASAD v. MUHAMMAD MUBARAKALI SHAH, 21 O. C. 284 257

s. 58—Interest Act (XXXII of 1889)—

Mortgage not providing for interest—Discretion of Court to allow interest.

The question whether in a suit to enforce a mortgage by way of conditional sale where no interest is provided for in the deed, the Court should have in its discretion allowed interest in accordance with the terms of the Interest Act, cannot be raised in second appeal unless it was raised in the lower Appellate Court. C CHANDRA MOYI CHOWDHURANI v. GREGSON 465

s. 59—Mortgage bond—Attestation—Scribe executing bond on behalf of mortgagor, whether attesting witness.

The scribe of a mortgage bond who executes the document for and on behalf of the mortgagor is not competent to attest his own signature.

A mortgage bond purported to be attested by the scribe and another witness. The mortgagor being an illiterate man, the document was executed by the scribe for and on behalf of the mortgagor and no mark or thumb impression of the mortgagor appeared on the bond:

Held, that the bond was not attested by two witnesses as required by section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. C RAJANI KANTA BHADRA v. PUN-CHANANDA, 23 C. W. N. 290 720

s. 60—Mortgage, redemption of—Partial owner of equity of redemption, whether can redeem whole mortgaged property.

A partial owner of the equity of redemption is entitled to redeem the whole of the mortgaged property in opposition to the wishes of the mortgagee.

The general rule is, that a person, who has any right at all to redeem, has a right to redeem the whole of the mortgaged properties and cannot be compelled to redeem only the part in which he is interested. C PROTAP CHANDRA DHAR v. PEARY MOMUN DHAR, 22 C. W. N. 800 669

ss. 60, 62—Mortgage, usufructuary—Discharge of mortgage by appropriation of usufruct working out for 37 years—Redemption, clog on—Option to redeem before term, whether personal covenant—Failure to exercise option, effect of—Suit to redeem before, expiry of original term, whether premature—'Payable' in s. 60, meaning of—Tender, failure to make, on due date, effect of.

A postponement of the right to redeem a usufructuary mortgage for a period of 37 years is not a clog on the equity of redemption. Section

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

62 of the Transfer of Property Act itself recognizes the validity of such covenants.

Under the terms of a usufructuary mortgage executed in 1902 the property was put in possession of the mortgagees and it was stipulated that the mortgage amount should be worked off by applying the usufruct in discharge, firstly, of the principal, and secondly, of the interest. In that way the mortgage could be discharged after 37 years. There was another stipulation that if payment of what was then due was made on 12th January 1912 the property should be handed over to the mortgagor, but if such payment was not made the mortgagees' possession was to continue on the same terms as before. No payment was made on 12th January 1912 but a suit for redemption was brought in 1916:

Held, that the postponement of redemption for 37 years, which was the necessary result of the mortgage covenant, was not a clog on the equity of redemption.

Held, also, (Krishnan, J., dubitante), that the option to redeem on 12th January 1912 was not a personal covenant, but was a provision inserted for the mortgagor's benefit and the option not having been exercised on the due date, the suit for redemption brought before the expiry of the original term was premature.

Per Krishnan, J.—Even assuming that section 60 applies and not section 62 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act, the suit must still fail as no tender was made on that day and as the right to make the tender or to redeem was not subsisting after that date or when the suit was brought. It is a necessary condition under section 60 that, when payment or tender is sought to be made, the mortgagor must have the right to make it, as the section speaks of the payment or tender of the mortgage money "at a proper time." For the time to be proper, the tender or payment must be one validly and properly made; and for that, the person making it must have at the time the legal right to make it.

The word 'payable' in section 60 seems to refer to the mortgagor's right rather than to his obligation and to imply no more than that the mortgagor should have a right to pay, the mortgagee being under a corresponding obligation to receive.

A covenant may be bad as a clog or it may be bad as an unconscionable bargain. The two are distinct and independent grounds. M AGA MAHAMADALLY BEG v. CHANDRAGIRI VENKATAPAYYA, 35 M. L. J. 287

s. 61

s. 62

s. 76

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 69—Mortgage, usufructuary—Mortgagee's position of—Under-proprietary plots, rent of, paid by mortgagee, whether can be claimed against mortgagor—Contribution, suit for.

A usufructuary mortgagee of under-proprietary plots is, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary entered in the mortgage-deed, bound, under the provisions of section 76 of the Transfer of Property Act, to pay to the superior proprietor the rent due in respect of those plots, and is, therefore, not entitled to recover it by way of contribution from the mortgagor under the provisions of section 69 of the Contract Act. O GAYA PRASAD v. SADA SUKH ss. 83, 84—Mortgage suit—Deposit after institution of suit—Interest, whether ceases—Costs, inclusion of, in mortgage amount.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

A deposit under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act is invalid if made after the institution of a suit by the mortgagee. No exception to the rule is made in favour of allowing a mortgagor to deposit the money before he receives notice of the suit but after its institution.

Obiter.—Where a suit on a mortgage has been instituted, the mortgage amount will include the costs of the suit and even if a deposit could be made after suit, it must include the plaintiff's costs. M THIAGARAJA AIYAR v. RAMASWAMI AIYAR, 35 M. L. J. 605

ss. 88, 89—Mortgage suit—Preliminary decree—Order absolute under section 89, Transfer of Property Act, after 1st January 1909, validity of—Execution of decree Estoppel—Objection not taken in previous proceedings, whether can be taken in subsequent proceeding—Application asking for sale different properties, whether in continuance of previous application—Mistake in entering date of decree, whether material defect.

Where before the coming into force of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, a preliminary decree in a mortgage suit had been obtained under section 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, and the judgment-debtor having made default in payment of the decretal amount, an application for an order absolute under section 89 of the Act had been made, and notice served on the judgment-debtor:

Held, (1) that the proceedings for order absolute were pending proceedings and were not, therefore, under section 6 of the General Clauses Act, affected by the repeal of section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act;

(2) that, therefore, the decree to be executed was the preliminary decree made absolute by the order of the Court, and that the proceedings being under section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act no final decree was necessary.

Where an order absolute for the sale of mortgaged properties was made under section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act during the lifetime of the mortgagor judgment-debtor and with notice to him and no objection was taken by him, it is not open to his legal representative to question the validity of the order made in execution proceedings.

Where several successive applications for execution of a decree are admitted and orders are passed thereon by a competent Court, without any objection being taken by the judgment-debtor regarding the validity of the decrees, it is not open to him in a subsequent execution proceeding in respect of the same decree to contend that there is in fact no decree which can be executed.

A decree-holder is entitled to treat an application for execution of a decree as in continuation of a previous application even when he wants to proceed to sell different properties.

An execution proceeding can only be vitiated by material defects.

Transfer of Property Act—concl'd.

A mistake in entering the date of the decree in an application for execution is not a material defect so as to vitiate the proceedings. Pat KESHAWESARINDRA SAHI v. DEBENDRA BALA DASSI 245

— s. 90 732
— s. 100 794

— Ch. V, Lease, agricultural—Ch. V, whether applicable—Ejectment—Notice, reasonable.

A lease of a village or of a share in a village for the purpose of bringing it under cultivation is a lease for agricultural purposes and the provisions of Chapter V of the Transfer of Property Act do not apply to it as laid down in section 117 of the Act.

In the case of an agricultural lease the tenant is entitled to a reasonable notice before ejectment. What is a reasonable notice is a question of fact.

A notice giving the tenant more than six months for vacation is a reasonable notice. N BANMALI v. NIHAL SINGH 354

— s. 106—Landlord and tenant—Notice to quit—Requisites of valid notice—Service on one of several joint tenants—Presumption—Delivery by post, effect of.

The principles governing the sufficiency of notices to quit served by landlords upon their tenants are the same in India as in England. Such notices may be good and effective in law, even though not strictly accurate or consistent: the test of their sufficiency is not what they would mean to a stranger ignorant of all the facts and circumstances touching the holding to which they purport to refer, but what they would mean to tenants presumably conversant with such facts and circumstances. Such notices are to be construed so as to effectuate the intention of the parties, "ut res magis valeat, quam pereat."

Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act only requires that a notice to quit should be tendered or delivered to the party intended to be bound by it, either personally or to one of his family or servants at his residence, or if such tender or delivery be not practicable, affixed to a conspicuous part of the property. The personal tender or delivery may take place anywhere: the vicarious tender or delivery must be made at the residence of the person intended to be bound.

In the case of joint tenants service of a notice to quit upon one is prima facie evidence that it has reached the others.

There is a presumption that a notice to quit posted in a letter properly addressed to the person intended to be bound reaches that person. Such presumption applies with still greater force to letters which are registered, and is not rebutted but strengthened by the fact that a receipt for the letter is produced signed on behalf of the addressee by somebody else. P C HARIHAR BANERJI v. RAMSASHI ROY, 23 C. W. N. 77; 16 A. L. J. 969; 35 M. L. J. 707; 29 C. L. J. 117; 9 L. W. 148 277

— s. 111 (g) 301

Trust, charitable—Trustee mixing trust funds with private funds—Presumption—Burden of proof—Trustee, removal of—Misconduct—Scheme for management—Strangers, association of, with trustee, incompetency of.

Where the trustee of a charitable endowment mixes up his private funds with the trust funds in the accounts, the presumption is that the whole of the funds belong to the trust and the onus is on the trustee to show that any portion of them is his private property.

Trust—concl'd.

A Court will not be justified in removing a trustee who has long held the office at the instance of strangers who have no better title, in the absence of clear proof of the trustee's misconduct.

In framing a scheme for the management of a trust, the association of strangers with the trustee which is likely to lead to friction should be avoided. Provision must, however, be made for periodical auditing of the accounts and for their inspection by those interested in the trust. M SUBBAROYA CHETTI v. SUBBRAMANIA IYER, (1918) M. W. N. 786 833 — public—Trustee, hereditary, removal of—Misconduct of trustee—Inefficient management—Accounts, failure to keep—Mixing up trust moneys with private funds—Expenditure in excess of income, credit for, whether can be allowed.

The duty of a trustee is to carry out the directions of the founder and not to encumber the trust property by systematically incurring expenditure beyond the limits of its income, nor can he claim credit for such expenditure.

If the continuance of a person who is a hereditary trustee and a descendant of the founder in the office is likely to endanger the interests of the institution, he is liable to be removed. It is not, however, every mistake or neglect of duty or inaccuracy of conduct that will induce a Court to remove a trustee. The acts or omissions must be such as to endanger the trust property or to show a want of honesty, or a want of proper capacity to execute the duties of the office or a want of reasonable fidelity.

One of the most important duties of a trustee is to keep separate and distinct accounts of the trust property and to keep the trust property separate from his own property. The omission to perform this duty will entail the removal of the trustee.

In order to justify the dismissal of a trustee it is not necessary to show that he has dishonestly misappropriated the trust funds. It is enough if he is a necessitous man who may not resist the temptation to misappropriate trust funds, or that his want of prudence in managing his own affairs does not warrant the hope that he would successfully manage an endowment.

Where a trustee is found guilty of misappropriation, the proper course is to dismiss him and not to suspend him till he makes good the amounts misappropriated. M ZEMINDAR OF KALAHASTI v. GANAPATHI IYER, (1918) M. W. N. 555 897

Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 23 (c), applicability of, to public trusts.

The rule laid down in section 23 (c) of the Trusts Act, though applicable only to private trusts, may be adapted in the case of public trusts with such modifications as the circumstances of each case require. M ZEMINDAR OF KALAHASTI v. GANAPATHI IYER, (1918) M. W. N. 555 897

Under-proprietary right in land—

— Dahiyak, cash—Birtdar's right to deduct dahiyak from rental, nature of.

A cash dahiyak is distinguishable from a birt right, in the land entitling the birtdar to hold possession of the land and to deduct the dahiyak from its rental. The former may in a sense be an under-proprietary right but it is not an "under-proprietary right in the land," while the latter is an under-proprietary right in the land so held in possession. O MOHAMMAD ABUL HASAN KHAN v. ISHWAR NATH, 21 O. C. 244

Under-proprietary right—conold.

265

Vendor and purchaser—Unpaid purchase-money—Interest, when begins to run.

In the case of a sale or acquisition of land, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, interest on the unpaid price runs from the date when the new owner enters into possession. P C RATANLAL CHOONILAL PANALAL v. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER, BOMBAY, 17 A. L. J. 1; 36 M. L. J. 1; 29 C. L. J. 133; 9 L. W. 171; 25 M. L. T. 103; 21 Bom. L. R. 114

404

Wajib-ul-arz, construction of 357

—, entry in, construction of 72
—, entry in, construction of—Shamilat—Grazing rights, claim to, by tenants—Tenants, whether members of village community.

An entry in the wajib-ul-arz of a village provided that proprietors and non-proprietors could graze cattle on their respective pattis in the shamilat of the pattis. Plaintiffs, who were tenants cultivating land in the village, claimed the right of grazing cattle in the shamilat of their pattis:

Held, that the plaintiffs were members of the village community and were, therefore, entitled under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz to the right claimed by them. P MUNSHI RAM v. MAYA, 122 P. R. 1918

846

—, entry in, value of 220

—, entry in, value of—Record of Rights—Presumption.

Though an entry as to title in a wajib-ul-arz or Record of Rights does not create a title, it gives rise to a presumption in its support, which prevails until its correctness is successfully impugned. P C

DAKAS KHAN v. GHULAM KASIM KHAN, 24 M. L. T. 271; 28 C. L. J. 441; 45 C. 793; 20 Bom. L. R. 1068

473

Wakf, creation of—Private mosque, whether wakf.

The mere construction in a private house of a mosque, which is used for worship by the members of the family occupying that house is not sufficient, without any other act or declaration on the part of the owner, to constitute a wakf. O KANIZ MEHDI BEGUM v. RASUL BEG, 5 O. L. J. 551

Wakf—conold.

39

Waste land—Lease granted by lambardar without consulting co-sharers, validity of—Remedy.

A clause in a village wajib-ul-arz recognizing the general power of the lambardar to create tenancies in respect of village waste land, but providing at the same time that he should consult the other co-sharers before granting a lease, will not avail a co-sharer for the purpose of avoiding any lease of waste land which may have been created by his representative, the lambardar, without consulting him.

The co-sharer's remedy, if any, in such cases lies in an action for damages against the lambardar or his removal from office or for partition. N POONAMCHAND v. NANDLAL

72

Will—Draft, unsigned, whether can operate as Will.

A draft Will unsigned and undated may be legally a Will if it contains the last wishes of the testator.

N RAMCHANDRA v. DATTATRAYA

742

—, Executor becoming incapable of acting—Administrator, appointment of—Public officer, whether can be appointed.

In the absence of a Statute authorising such an appointment, a public officer and his successors-in-office should not be asked to undertake duties, e.g., the duties of an Administrator, which are outside their official duties.

Where one of the executors appointed under a Will retired with the permission of the Court and the other became an insolvent and the Court thereupon appointed the Deputy Commissioner of the District to act as Administrator of the estate:

Held, that the order appointing the Deputy Commissioner to act as Administrator was ultra vires and must be set aside. N SITABAI v. BAPU ANNA

964

—, interpretation of 177

—, interpretation of.

Where a Will transferred a certain property in full proprietary right to a legatee and his representatives in perpetuity with a direction to continue a certain religious celebration in connection therewith:

Held, that the Will did not constitute the property wakf so as to render it inalienable. O KANIZ MEHDI BEGUM v. RASUL BEG, 5 O. L. J. 551

39

